Summit Hinted for Nixon, Thieu

Times News Services

A summit meeting between President Nixon and Nguyen Van Thieu might be necessary before a settlement can be reached in the Vietnam war, diplomatic observers said today in Washington.

The tough line taken by Thieu in a policy speech Tuesday night require such a dramatic move to win his agreement to formulas worked out with Hanoi during the last month by U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

In his speech, Thieu took an uncompromising position toward a political settlement of the war, but said that there may be a standstill cease-fire soon.

Thieu made clear his continuing opposition to a coalition government in South Vietnam and his two-hour speech was studded with attacks on the Communists.

The White House has cautiously acknowledged that some progress was made in Kissinger's six meetings with Thieu in Saigon during the past week and before that with North Vietnamese representatives in Paris.

But that is as far as officials have gone in describing the trend of the peace talks, which have assumed greater political urgency as the Nov. 7 U.S. presidential election draws closer.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Kissinger was expected to return to Paris for more talks with North Vietnam's negotiators and he could go back to Saigon again.

The White House has imposed a total blackout on news and even hints about any formula worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnam.

Informed sources in Paris said Tuesday that France would reluctantly agree to serve as a guarantor for an eventual Indochina peace settlement if so asked by all parties involved in the conflict.

But France would not want to accept such a responsibility alone, the sources added.

The sources poured cold water on British press reports that France had been asked to provide troops to police an Indochina ceasefire.

Meanwhile, the U.S. reduced its fighter-bomber strikes against North Vietnam again Tuesday and confined them to the southern panhandle below the 20th parallel in a sort of a partial bombing halt aimed at improving the atmosphere for peace negotiations.

Mail Bomb For Nixon Intercepted

Times News Services

Three more letter bombs exploded today in the Middle East and explosives were found in letters addressed to President Richard Nixon and two United States' cabinet members.

Two bombs exploded in Beirut and another in Algiers. Eight persons were injured.

Three unexploded bombs were found in the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shemona. A fourth was found in Cairo.

The letters addressed to President Nixon, State Secretary William Rogers and Defence Secretary William Laird, were turned over to Israeli police by a suspicious postal clerk.

"This morning the envelopes were examined by security forces and were found to contain explosives similar to the envelopes sent from Amsterdam," a police spokesman said. Amsterdam was the origin of a recent mail-a-bomb campaign in which an Israeli embassy official in London, Amichai Shachori, was killed in his office.

In Beirut, a 19-year-old postal employee was taken to hospital after an explosion at the Beirut post office as the morning's mail was being sorted.

About the same time another bomb went off in a 22-storey office building half a block from the American University, and a woman secretary was taken to hospital. Five other persons suffered slight injuries in the explosions, officials said.

Police sources said there were signs that Arab terrorists planned a new mail bomb campaign during the Christmas and New Year holidays when choked postal services will hamper security checks.

The warning came after a Jordanian carrying an Algerian passport was detained at Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam with two suit cases containing letter bombs, pistols, ammunition and hand grenades.

HOSPITAL TO BOOST RATE

A private hospital in Victoria said today it will increase rates by $2 a day as soon as a new provincial minimum wage scale takes effect.

Mrs. Adele Vinden, superintendent at Glengarry Private Hospital, 1780 Fairfield, confirmed she has received a directive from management on new rates.

From Nov. 22, or whenever the new wage minimum of $2 an hour goes into effect, the hospital's rate for a bed in a four-bed ward will go from $14 to $16 a day, she said.

Gov't Plans Co-Ops To Cut Food Costs

The provincial government plans to develop food co-operatives within a few weeks — not only for persons on low incomes, but for anyone interested in participating, Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said Tuesday.

He said it is time to create competition for the food monopolies in the province to show that "the people just won't stand for these price increases."

Levi said senior citizens have suffered from "meagre food and nutritional deficiencies" because food prices and rent levels are so high.

Levi also appealed to B.C. landlords to hold the line on senior citizens' rents so the government's $200 monthly guaranteed income will not be drained.

"We are trying to make up for the neglect that has been shown to these senior citizens," Levi told the legislature during debate on the government move. "We don't want to see these increases go down the drain."

He said he has already had information that some landlords are going to increase rents as a result of the pension hike.

"We will be prepared to name names of individuals and of companies who are going to sweat money from these senior citizens," Levi said.

The minister said the pension increase will "end the legacy of tea and toast fostered by the previous government" and will bring the pensions of B.C.'s pioneers to "a minimal level."

Of a total budget of $1.6 billion brought in by the Social Credit administration last year, Levi said, all that was spent on senior citizens was $3.7 million.

Barrett's Hopes Cut by Third

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

B.C. will receive only two-thirds of the money expected from Ottawa to pay for the guaranteed $200 old age pension, Premier Barrett said Tuesday.

Barrett made the statement after a 30-minute meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau at Victoria airport, which failed to produce an agreement on how the pension increase costs should be shared.

But Barrett said again the pensions will be paid in full as promised, although administrative problems may hold up payment until January.

In any case, the pensions will be made retroactive to include December, Barrett said.

Looking and sounding a trifle staggered by his meeting with Trudeau, Barrett nevertheless described the talks, their first, as "amiable."

Barrett said the money that will come to the province for the pensions will fall under the province's Social Assistance Act and not under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Barrett had banked on persuading Trudeau and the federal government that it was only the wording of the Canada Assistance Plan that was preventing an agreement.

Barrett had hoped to increase the provincial pension supplement, of which Ottawa pays half. But now Ottawa will be contributing about 30 per cent less than expected.

Barrett said that talks have been taking place between of-

POLITE BIGOTS NO LONGER

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian society has been hit with a new wave of hate and bigotry, Dr. Daniel Hill, chairman of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, said Tuesday night.

"We used to have a more polite form of bigotry in Canada, but now we are getting a very overt form of bigotry," he told the Industrial Relations Research Association.

Pound Hits New Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to a record low today for the second straight day.

Foreign exchange dealers said trading was active and selling pressure heavy.

Shortly after the opening, the pound was quoted at $2.3627, an all-time low, and a drop of more than one cent from Tuesday's night's close of $2.3760.

By mid-morning the pound had sunk as low as $2.3530, a drop of more than two cents on the day. One dealer said there was "one-way market" down.

The sharp drop is attributed to persistent inflation, labor trouble, renewed strength of the U.S. dollar, and speculation that the British government will peg the pound at $2.25.

Britain has guaranteed 90 per cent of these reserves against loss by promising to pay them back on demand at a minimum of $2.38 a pound. It may be called to do so now that the pound has sunk below that level for the first time.

TV Tory Sees Red

TORONTO (CP) — Ethel Neilson, an 85-year-old pensioner who appears in a television commercial prepared for the Progressive Conservatives, says she intends to vote for the Liberals Oct. 30.

Miss Neilson, who complains in the commercial about high food prices, said in an interview Tuesday that she was annoyed about finding herself in a Conservative commercial.

She said she was not told the film, shot on a busy downtown street, would be used for political purposes.

"If they'd told me that, I wouldn't have said anything," she complained.

Miss Neilson said she was interviewed outside a department store by a woman who said she was conducting a survey. Miss Neilson talked to the interviewer about pensioners' problems and about the fact food prices had increased.

A Conservative spokesman here said, however, that Miss Neilson had signed a form allowing the party to broadcast the filmed interview.

He added that the woman was paid the standard $1 fee to make the undertaking legal.

Miss Neilson admitted signing a paper, but said she didn't read it. She also remembers receiving $1.

Miss Neilson, who said she is a life-long Liberal, complained that friends and relatives called her to tell they had seen her on a commercial for the Conservatives.

"I was mad," she said.

Stanfield Cool Toward Russia

Times News Services

Robert Stanfield diverged slightly Tuesday from an all-out attack on failure of the Liberal government to cope with the cost of living to warn that a Conservative government would have something less than completely cordial relations with the Soviet Union.

He said in Winnipeg that the government he expects to form after the Oct. 30 federal election will not have "fully cordial relations" with countries that restrict migration of their citizens.

He said later that includes the Soviet Union.

But the rising cost of living, food costs and inflation were the main topic of the day as Stanfield addressed a news conference in Vancouver and then spoke to a Winnipeg rally.

He said that it is time for Canadians to realize that the Liberal government has no policy, program or plan to halt rising prices.

"It does not even intend to take action to assist those Canadians who cannot help themselves to meet their mounting cost of living."

He said Prime Minister Trudeau had claimed that rising prices are good for the farmers.

But in fact farmers had been just as much the victim of inflation as the consumer, wage earner, pensioners and everybody else.

A Conservative government would immediately investigate whether a freeze on prices of certain commodities would be needed, he added.

He did not name the commodities.

He expected that that inquiry, which would include talks with the food industry and government officials and study of information he was sure that government already had, should take two weeks or less.

The urgency of such an inquiry was indicated by the fact that recent Statistics Canada figures had shown

Trudeau mingles with throng outside Royal Theatre

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

Canadians are closer to a national consensus than at any time in their history Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Tuesday during a breathless 2½ hour Victoria visit.

About 1,400 persons jammed the Royal Theatre to hear the prime minister at 4.15 p.m. Hundreds, strung out in a long lineup, were turned away and had to content themselves with listening to his speech over a public address system outside the building.

"Now after almost eight weeks of campaigning I have reached a conclusion . . . Canada no longer has a crisis of identity!" Trudeau said.

During the current campaign he said it has not been necessary to beat the drums of national unity — as was necessary in the 1968 election — because people have no doubts about the country anymore.

In four years, the prime minister said, nobody will even mention the Official Languages Act.

". . . Remember the last time, I had to make a speech in French at every place I went in order to prove a point, or a speech in English everywhere I went in Quebec."

Bilingualism is hardly an issue today, Trudeau said, except in a few ridings around Ottawa because "there are still some kinks in the application of the system."

But Quebecers are realizing that they can have power in Ottawa, he said.

"This is the whole purpose of Quebecers getting into politics, to make sure that they can exercise their power in Ottawa for Canadians, and not in Quebec in order to split Canada."

Trudeau blamed a relatively quiet election campaign on the fact that Canadians were moving towards equality of opportunity.

"I am told the press even find it dull," the prime minister said.

"Sure it's easier to report a meeting . . . when rotten tomatoes are flying everywhere," he added.

But the prime minister didn't drop any hot potatoes or tomatoes.

No opposition party was mentioned by name and Trudeau made only one brief reference to "the other two parties" concerning their Quebec policies.

Much of the address was spent defending the Liberal record and recounting national problems that, in the prime minister's opinion, have been solved during the last four years.

The dollar crisis of 1968, divisions between English and French Canadians, provincial ultimatums to minority federal governments and Western separatism were mentioned.

". . . In those days when there was great talk of Western alienation, B.C. was — I don't know how seriously — reacting as though it was closer to the U.S. than that far-off capital in Ottawa."

What has happened in four years?, Trudeau asked.

"Canadians have come to realize that they have really pulled it all together."

WAC SEAT GOES INTO RETIREMENT

The big, blue, leather-upholstered chair formerly used by W. A. C. Bennett when he was B.C. 's premier is being retired from the legislature.

The chair, made specifically to fit the larger-than-normal proportions of former Premier S. F. Tolmie, is on its way to Bennett's Kelowna home, where Bennett is building an office in his basement similar to the one he had as premier in Victoria.

Bennett bought the chair for a nominal fee — understood to be $1 — from the government. He now uses an ordinary chair in his role as opposition leader.

First NDP Legislation Passes

The NDP government successfully passed its first-ever piece of legislation Tuesday — amendments to the Municipal Act which will make rezoning changes more difficult.

The bill containing the amendments was given unanimous third reading in the house with no debate. All parties had spoken in its favor when it was being discussed in principle.

The changes to the act will require zoning amendments to be approved by a two-thirds majority of municipal council, rather than simple majority requirement brought in last year by the Social Credit government.

PENSIONS: BARRETT'S HOPES CUT BACK

ficials "almost hourly," and Tuesday morning brought a suggestion from federal officials to accept increases under the social assistance legislation.

"We've not giving up hope" of the full 50 per cent under CAP, Barrett said, but B.C. will certainly accept the lesser amount.

Estimates of the total cost of the pension increase range from $45 million to $60 million.

It may be necessary, Barrett said, to bring in special legislation to include the handicapped in the pension increases.

These would have been included under the CAP, but not under the Social Assistance Act.

Barrett said that following his meeting with Trudeau that he is "disappointed that there is a continuing disagreement over the interpretation of the Canada Assistance Plan.

"The differences between the federal government and our provincial government are still a matter of semantics but I will not let legal niceties interfere with getting financial assistance to our senior citizens."

Barrett said the NDP government feels "the Canada Assistance Plan is the proper route for this cost-sharing but the federal government does not agree."

The statement continues: "As suggested by federal officials, we will be going through the Social Assistance Act for cost sharing of our program for the time being and we expect to receive federal funds following this route.

"We will continue our efforts to share the costs of our pension plan under what we think is the proper legislation, namely, the Canada Assistance Plan.

"To facilitate the use of our present Social Assistance Act to implement our legislative program of a guaranteed minimum income for our handicapped people, it will be necessary for this government to introduce amending legislation. . . ."

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said Tuesday night he would make a statement this afternoon about the full implications of the sharing program.

Barrett said outside the legislature that the problem lies in the legislative wording of the province to describe the means under which old age pensioners qualify for the pension.

Barrett said the Ottawa contribution "may be slightly less" than the hoped for 50 per cent but Barrett had openly predicated he could persuade Ottawa that 50 per cent was British Columbia's right.

Docks Picketed

SEATTLE (CP) — The masters, mates and pilots union set up picket lines at Seattle docks at 7 a.m. today. All U.S. ships belonging to the Pacific Maritime Association, except those carrying military cargo, are being picketed, said Capt. Rupert Soriano, Seattle agent for Local 6.

that the wholesale price index had risen 7.8 per cent between September, 1971, and last September.

"As sure as night follows day the Canadian consumer's purchasing power is going to be further eroded," he said.

He reiterated that a Conservative government is prepared to impose wage and price controls if it thinks they are necessary. Short of that it would consider a freeze on prices of some consumer goods.

Stanfield exuded confidence as seldom before.

"We are on the verge of a great victory in this country," he said in Winnipeg.

NDP leader David Lewis accentuated the positive Tuesday, departing from his attacks on the corporate welfare system to give Prairie audiences a picture of what he wants Canada to become.

In a one-day rush across the West by plane and bus, he said in four different towns that he has great faith in the country and its people, but none at all in "Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Stanfield and their corporate friends."

In Brandon, Man., he chided the Liberals and Conservatives for quarrelling over the accuracy of their favorite polls.

That gave the New Democrats at least one great advantage he said.

"We can't afford a poll. The only poll that counts is the poll that takes place next Monday, on Oct. 30. And from that poll, the New Democratic Party will make immense advance.

"It really takes a worried man to talk the hogwash that Pierre Elliott Trudeau has been lately talking," he added.

"And as for the nice guy from Nova Scotia who heads the Progressive Conservative Party, the less said the more polite."

Trudeau: Mood Changes

former Times editor Bruce Hutchison, the prime minister said it was the work of "a very perceptive writer," but the last chapter to the book had finally been written by the Canadian people.

"Canada is here and now; Canada is today. Its not some future hypothetical country that we perhaps can build if we're lucky enough."

Among his government's accomplishments Trudeau listed the Unemployment Insurance Act, old age pensions increasing territorial waters to 12 miles, the Opportunities for Youth grants, Arctic pollution laws, the recognition of China and Indian policy.

"After 100 years of living on the reserves as ghetto people . . . you will become equal citizens to everyone else, and we'll abolish, not only the Indian Act, but the Department of Indian Affairs when you want, and at the speed you want."

WOMEN'S RIGHTS

Women's rights were also included in the government's portfolio of accomplishments.

". . . And we will open the ranks of our party to make sure that women are elected, are nominated in safe Liberal seats."

The prime minister spoke in the future tense while listing what he considered government strengths because he had prefaced his remarks with the rhetorical question; "Who's alienated in this society," as of 1968.

Trudeau made no specific election promises but stated that his government would not be abdicating its rights to the provinces, "just in the name of harmony," nor would he, "be giving in to the pressures of the U.S. just in order to be friendly with them."

Unlike some other nations, the prime minister said, Canadians don't have to create artificial stimulus" . . . by shooting for the moon."

Instead, we have social, technological and physical frontiers, including the second largest country in the world, the longest coastline in the world, the largest surface of continetal shelf and the second largest polar mass in the world.

Victoria Liberal candidate David Groos presented Trudeau with a Cowichan Indian sweater and touque for the prime minister's son, Justin.

Earlier, Trudeau had warm words for Groos.

". . . David Groos has always talked very strongly for his area of Canada . . . but this didn't prevent him from being very active in problems that concerned the totality of Canada in the United Nations, in NATO."

Esquimalt Liberal candidate Louis Lindholm, Nanaimo, Cowichan-Islands candidate Bill Matthews, Provincial Liberal Leader David Anderson, and Groos occupied the stage with Trudeau along with the 15-member Big Band of Victoria.

At the conclusion of his address Trudeau left the theatre by the front door, threading his way through well-wishers who wanted to shake the prime minister's hand. He had entered the same way to the accompaniment of Bobby Gimby's old Expo hit Can-a-da, played by the band.

Outside the theatre, Broughton Street was blocked off by hundreds of curious persons waiting for a glimpse of the prime minister in his three-button, double-breasted suit of modish cut.

Trudeau's hair barely scrapes his collar and is considerably shorter than it was during the last House of Commons session.

Then it was a police escorted motorcade to the Inner Harbor where the prime minister boarded an Air West twin Otter.

Two hundred persons watched the aircraft, bound for Vancouver, vanish into the light industrial haze clouding the Inner Harbor.

The prime minister ended his busy day which started in Saskatoon with a one-hour paid Liberal telecast in Vancouver, featuring an open line format.

the weather

The leading edge of a mass of colder and drier air will move over Georgia Strait and the Lower Mainland by early this afternoon. This will bring a change from the present rains to only a few showers. Winds which are blowing at a brisk rate from the southeast will change to equally brisk from the west or northwest.

On Thursday temperatures will be cooler in most regions in the afternoon with showers in many areas. Afternoon sunny periods will be present in some southern regions.

Canada Grants for U.S. War Work

MONTREAL (CP) — The department of industry, trade and commerce awarded more than $458 million between 1967 and 1971 to 154 companies in Canada producing war materials for the United States government, says a report released Tuesday.

The report was prepared by seven university students led by Prof. S. J. Noumoff of McGill University's department of political science.

The report — How to Make a Killing — says the federal government supported selected development programs, paid half the cost of modernizing plant equipment and supported establishment of production of components and materials destined for use by U.S. forces in Indochina.

The report says that 45 of the 154 companies were U.S. owned.

These companies received 40 per cent of the money granted by the Canadian government.

The majority of the contracts were for transport aircraft, aircraft engines and airfram components, electronic navigation and communication equipment, marine equipment, vehicle components and spare parts, the report says.

Prof. Noumoff said his researchers sent out 778 questionnaires to companies asking them if they received contracts from the Pentagon.

They received 205 replies, and 73 companies acknowledged receiving U.S. defence department contracts.

The report says four companies denied receiving such contracts although the Pentagon said they had.

Canadian universities were among foreign universities and non-profit institutions that received grants from the Pentagon for research, the report says.

McGill received $19,420 for basic scientific research from the Pentagon, the report says, compared to a $55,725 grant in 1967.

The University of Toronto received $45,658 in 1971, down from $164,000 in 1967.

The report says the University of British Columbia received $83,000 in 1971 for research, development, testing and evaluation.

The Vietnam war also edged into the fringes of Canadian election issues.

In Saskatoon, students hissed Prime Minister Trudeau when he told them President Nixon has been "trying pretty hard to end the war in Vietnam."

The students asked why Canada sells war material to the U.S. and he replied "we don't want bloody hands, but we have to make hard choices."

In Ottawa, informed sources said there is a possibility Canadian forces would take part in a peacekeeping force in Vietnam if U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators agree on a ceasefire.

The sources made clear, however, that the Canadian government has not been officially informed by any of the parties involved of a pending breakthrough in the present peace negotiations.

Many observers assume that if a ceasefire is worked out, an international truce team will be designated to keep watch over it.

Canada, with Poland and India, already is involved in a Vietnam truce supervisory role. The three countries make up the International Control Commission for Indochina established under the 1954 Geneva accords.

Suggestions have been advanced that if an expanded Vietnam truce control operation is mounted, it should be an all-Asian effort. However, if history is any guide, Canada will no doubt be asked to play a role. Canada has been involved in every international peacekeeping operation to date.

The Canadian government, tude of the Indochina commisdisenchanged by the ineptisions has said that it will closely examine the terms of reference before agreeing to take on any future such assignments.

But Ottawa officials concede that it would be difficult for Canada to say no to a request if it appeared that by refusing Canada would scupper chances for an end to the war.

MEETING ON WELFARE

A conference of provincial welfare ministers will be held in Victoria at the end of November, Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi announced in the legislature Tuesday.

Levi said the main purpose of the conference will be to discuss the $200 monthly guaranteed income legislation for the old-age pensioners introduced by the government in the special session.

Landfill Fire Deadline Won't Be Met—Chief

Langford Fire Chief Allan LeQuesne said today he won't make his Oct. 31 deadline for extinguishing the Millstream landfill fire.

"But unless we run into more trouble," he added, "we should have it out within two weeks after that."

The operation suffered a setback last weekend with the discovery of a large "hot spot" which burst into flames and forced project workers to back off from their extinguishing operations.

The "hot spot" consisted of several large stumps and old car bodies buried below the surface. LeQuesne said the flames had now been extinguished.

He said by the end of today's work 60 per cent of the fire would be out and that section completely covered.

Workmen at the operations, which is being financed by the Pollution Control Board as a research project, are using bulldozers to remove all large pieces of metal from the smouldering areas of the dump. Large combustible materials are being burnt and unburnt hog fuel is being buried and covered with dirt.

LeQuesne said wet weather is hindering progress, causing large amounts of steam which make visibility at the site difficult.

Ottawa Trims Length Of CS French Classes

OTTAWA (CP) — In what appears to be a move to churn out more bilingual public servants, the federal government is chopping nine weeks from its language school programs.

The reduction of the 36-week courses to 27 weeks is almost complete, a treasury board spokesman said Tuesday.

Last week, the Montreal paper Le Devoir published the findings of a 16-volume government report on bilingualism in the public service which said the government's 1975 goal would not be reached without drastic changes in present programs.

The report said the government's second-language courses, which cost about $54 million from 1966 to 1971, have only brought about eight per cent of the 22,807 public servants enrolled to the level of bilingualism.

It also said 92 per cent of the students enrolled in either French or English courses failed to complete their studies.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury said, shortly after the documents were leaked, that the study was based on out-of-date information and gave a misleading impression.

He said the papers were merely a background for a larger report on bilingualism and were mostly based on 1970 statistics. He said it did not take into account "the considerable progress" made in the last two years.

Engineers Probe Store Outage

Simpsons-Sears engineers are still trying to find the cause of a transformer blowout at the store in Hillside Mall Monday which knocked out power for almost six hours.

Store manager Jack Hutchins said Tuesday the power outage from 10:20 a.m. to 4 p.m. caused few problems in the store.

"We have emergency lighting and cranks on all cash registers," he said, "so there wasn't much confusion.

"We finally just took that transformer out," he explained, "and switched to another one. But we still don't know what happened.

"We think it was an overload somewhere but we're not sure," he added.

The transformer has been sent to Vancouver to be rebuilt.

A Jewel in the Crown

The well known Aylard farm property has been appropriately called the key to East Sooke Park. Its acquisition by the Capital Regional District Board as part of the regional parks system ringing Victoria is a most commendable development. It will provide an unsurpassed eastern buttress for the park by adding 248 acres of meadow and woodland with 1.5 miles of seafront.

Great credit is due the regional authorities who saw the possibilities of the property and negotiated successfully for its purchase. And the community owes thanks to the Aylard family, whose members wished the property to become parkland for the perpetual use of the public and co-operated generously in the transaction.

The park will now include more than 4.5 miles of seafront with coves and rugged rock outcroppings, and nearly 4,000 acres of varied woodland, hills and hiking trails. There remain two or three private holdings at the western extremity of the park, and if these are purchased to round out the plan, along with several parcels of provincial property, the completed project will be an asset of endless enjoyment and benefit to today's public and the generations to come.

The regional parks program has been advancing steadily for the past few years and now shows the results of careful selections of seafront and hilltop properties. The program is one of the most important to be launched by the region and will be one of the major successes for which the regional system will receive credit in years to come. Already the public of the regional district is making use of the new parklands, for they are within easy reach and are gradually being provided with parking grounds, foot trails and directional signs.

These are parks of a type which do not require much improvement, for their beauty and recreational usefulness lie in their unspoiled nature. The lands need little more than facilities for the people to get to them by car, and into the most attractive sections on foot. The rest may be left up to the outdoor devotees who are finding increasing pleasure in visits to the areas.

The main consideration for the regional board is to push ahead with other acquisitions to complete the program and ensure that choice properties are saved for future use. Thetis Lake and the adjoining acreage on its western drainage slope would be a natural addition to the parks system and it is time for the city and regional authorities to discuss this seriously with a view of doing what the public wishes, rather than what one or two aldermen may believe to be necessary.

There is no real ownership of a park by one segment of a community when the whole community uses it without charge. It should come under community management. And since this step would pave the way for the acquisition of the adjoining property which is necessary to protect the lake from future near encroachment of housing, there is little point in delaying. Thetis should become an appropriate part of the regional parks system, for its own preservation and the enhancement of the whole community.

Who's in Charge Here?

In his perceptive but always novel way of expressing himself Marshall McLuhan, the noted media expert, has come forth with another teaser. Writing in the Globe and Mail, Dr. McLuhan, who is now the director of the Centre for Culture and Technology at the University of Toronto, says: "Perhaps the civil service of experts and specialists has already taken over the Government, leaving the old politics behind as a kind of camp entertainment." These comments were meant in response to defenders of the issue-oriented, long-winded politicians we have known.

For anyone who has attended an election rally recently or thought at all seriously about the nature of politics today, Dr. McLuhan's remarks may confirm some suspicions.

Participation is the name of the game today, but it is well to recognize it is "name" that is the operative word, for the mills of government seem to grind on without apparent direction from the people. The most interesting part of a rally has come to be the question period at the end during which the audience seems, in some measure, to participate. We have, after all, few orators or original political views left.

This is not to suggest that we are moving into the best possible world. But Dr. McLuhan's perspective may help revamp our notions of the current political process and assist us to construct a philosophy to cope with it.

Trail Blazer

To millions of television viewers on this continent, the racial origins of athletes performing in the World Series completed this week were matters of complete indifference. Pigmentation was a negligible consideration. Superiority in their chores was all important.

A large percentage of both teams was Black, though not all of United States extraction. And many of these players were young — too young to remember the responsibilities and burdens shouldered by Jackie Robinson 25 years ago when the late Branch Rickey introduced him as the first "colored" player in major league ball. It is a tribute to the personality, ability, courage and character of Jackie Robinson that his example paved the way for others of his own and similar races, beating back the forces of prejudice and admitting into highly lucrative and glamorous activity men who had suffered long ages of discrimination.

Robinson's death this week marked the end of the opening chapter of black participation in the United States national game at the major league level. In this area of businessmen's sport, as in football, basketball and other team contests, American racial segregation has ended, with the memory of a great athlete standing at the open door.

Soft Talk on Bilingualism

OTTAWA — When John A. Macdonald, our first great political thinker, announced that elections are like horse races, he did not exhaust the subject.

In recent days it has become painfully clear to modern political thinkers that horse races are much more manageable. The track may be dry or it may be wet but at least people refrain from dragging dangerous obstacles across it.

First there was the welfare issue involved in unemployment insurance. It was not in the calculations of any of the parties and none of them handled it with assurance. The voters imposed it on the political leaders. Even now the basic questions are unanswered. There is disagreement as to the size of the mess but the Conservatives have yet to draw the conclusions suggested by their own belated criticisms or to say what effective action they will take if they come to office.

Equally unforeseen was the issue raised by the Coulombe report (or working paper), leaked to the Montreal newspaper, Le Devoir. This concerns the Government's bilingual policies but is quite different from the question which has been troublesome in a handful of public service constituencies.

Unfair to Unilingual

The general sense of the grievances, long known to be of importance locally, is that the policies, as applied, have been unfair to many unilingual civil servants and not always in keeping with the original assurances of Lester Pearson. An exploitable issue thus existed; it was, however, purely a candidates' issue which could not emerge nationally for the reason that all parties support the objectives of the bilingual programs.

Even in the Ottawa valley ridings, it has been a rather muted issue in public discussions although it may still have an influence at the polls. Within particular constituencies, all candidates are subject to the same constraints; the nominee who is too outspoken can only embarrass his leader and party. All, or nearly all, have found shelter in the conviction, widely shared, that Canadian parties should be hospitable to a wide range of ideas.

The more such candidates adjust to their local environments, the more they tend to sound like each other and the less they sound like their national chiefs.

With the appearance of the Coulombe papers, however, an issue of wider significance emerges. Given that the objectives are accepted by all parties, are the results adequate? In other words, are taxpayers generally getting value for their money?

Some points are clear, others murky. The amount of money involved is large, some $54 million; at least it will appear large to ordinary taxpayers who do not share Ottawa's peculiar sense of values. Student achievement was unimpressive. Of 22,807 civil servants who had enrolled in the period 1966-71, only 1,851 had been certified as bilingual. There had been 6,463 drop outs and, according to one paper, a lost investment of $17 million. By another estimate, the Government could reach its stated objectives only by ensuring that 85 per cent of high level appointments go to bilingual persons.

C. M. Drury, President of the Treasury Board, insists that the studies, which in themselves apparently cost $250,000, are dated and that more recent results are favorable. Close to 4,000 civil servants have now been certified as bilingual.

C. M. DRURY

It is conceded, however, that the Government has been concerned about the effectiveness of the program. Mr. Drury explains that ministers were aware from the outset that they would face difficult and frustrating years before signs of progress became evident.

This may well be so. But it may also be observed as a fact of some importance that Mr. Drury has not been dealing with run-of-the-mill students. In the matter of staffing, the Public Service Commission observed in its latest report (which incidentally contained a glowing account of the programs): "In the first place, the most talented and capable Canadians in all walks of life must be encouraged to join the public service as a first choice among career possibilities and this takes effort along many fronts."

If the most talented and capable have been flunking at anything like the rate indicated, the practicality of the methods chosen to attain the agreed objectives is bound to be seriously questioned. Further, unless there has been radical change, the difficulties already encountered by the Government may be expected to multiply. The existing morale problem in the service would certainly not be eased by any system of quotas governing appointments, as apparently envisaged by one of the studies.

Mr. Drury himself has touched on one of the key problems which does not appear to have been accorded anything like its due weight by those who planned the programs.

This is that "real bilingualism" depends on the schools. In effect because of the pressure for quick results, the Government has been betting heavily on schemes for teaching old dogs new tricks.

How heavily is not clear. One of the papers estimated the cost of training one senior servant at $29,000. Mr. Drury, using a figure of $1,200, refers only to the per capita cost of the schools. But there are many other costs, including that of detaching the student from a high level post for nine weeks each year.

Retention Problem

The difficulty is compounded by the fact that some costs are not measurasurable and unmeasurable program which may affect a good many people when posts are filled by substitutes.

Another problem is retention. A man may be certified as bilingual but he is not likely to remain so when he has returned from immersion to fight his way through a backlog of paper, and to work for many months, probably in his mother tongue. For many now the week includes a morning out of work and into French which must also enter into measureable and unmeasureable program costs.

It is not a new criticism — it has been voiced, for example by critical Liberals, such as Gordon Blair — that better and more lasting results might be obtained by concentrating more resources on language training in the schools, and by ensuring that resources now dedicated to that purpose, were properly and effectively employed.

But the issue of value for the taxpayer's dollar is not likely to loom large in the present election because the present relevance of the studies is in doubt and the parties are bound to be hesitant about crossing so dangerous a minefield. Of the leaders, only Real Caouette takes issue. He was never persuaded that the programs had much practical value and he has now renewed his criticism at Rimouski in Quebec — a course which would seem reckless in the extreme to most politicians in all parties.

WILLIAM R. FRYE

Fear of Public Knowledge

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Once again the ugly inner core of Communism has been placed on view. And once again it has been the Communists themselves who have unintentionally stripped away the covering.

The case in point involves the use of earth satellites for direct telecasting to home receivers. Although this prospect is some years from realization, it has already begun to fire the imagination of educators, news media, entertainers and others in the communications realm.

A news event in a remote part of the world shown routinely on live TV to hundreds of millions of viewers, as with the first landing on the moon .... a classroom in London presented to millions of school-age children in India and Africa who might otherwise have no teacher (and perhaps no school) ... a performance of the Bolshoi Ballet or the Metropolitan Opera live and in color around the world.

Unlimited Possibilities

The possibilities are virtually unlimited. The opportunity to shrink the globe, to bring people closer in mutual understanding, to share the best of one another's culture and see the world through other eyes — all this is as exciting to most observers as any other single technical development of our times.

But not, it seems, to the Russians. They see it as a menace, a threat to their system, a challenge to the ability of a central authority to control the information — and hence, to some degree, the thought processes — of a people.

So the Soviet Union has brought into the UN General Assembly, and has been seeking to promote, a draft treaty giving governments the right totally to control the program content of all direct broadcasts from satellites.

The Russians claim they want to screen out pornography, warmongering, racial slure. Anything which "misinforms the public" would be made illegal — and governments would determine what was "misinformation."

The UN is reacting cautiously, thus far. The United States and Britain are dealing with the matter in low key, proposing to refer the Soviet treaty draft to committee and pulling punches in their comments on it — in accord with the overall spirit of East-West detente which they seek to encourage.

Other debaters are reacting ambivalently, seeing both good and bad in the Soviet proposal and seeking further study to "clarify the matter." Few are saying forthrightly that the idea is an assault on the Universal Bill of Rights and an exposure of the restrictive nature of the Communist system.

U THANT
... just different

Yet privately a number of delegates have shown they appreciate this fact. This is one important function which, without conscious intent, the UN serves: it educates men, in the highest sense of the word. It strips away some of the veil of confusion produced by propaganda ministries.

In this case, the education is particularly useful. For some time it has been fashionable in the UN to pretend that there is no moral distinction between Communism and liberal democracy; that neither system is better or worse than the other — just different; that the ideal approach by an observer is an impartiality analogous to tolerance among differing religions.

Former Secretary-General U Thant was a great advocate of this view. It had the political motive of encouraging an easing of the cold war; but it was widely believed to be objectively true. To pass a value judgment on Communism and democracy was said to be "reviving the cold war."

This attitude has persisted, despite the ordeal of intellecutals in the Soviet Union; despite repression in Czechoslovakia in 1968 and thereafter; despite Soviet policy toward emigration by its citizens — notably Jews; and despite a wide range of human rights offences in the Soviet state.

Self-Inflicted Miasma

To the extent that the current debate on utilizing direct-broadcast satellites helps to dissipate this self-inflicted miasma, it will be useful.

UN veterans recall an occasion in the early 1950s when the UN was debating voluntary repatriation of Korean War prisoners. "You can't give soldiers a choice of where they wish to go," Andrei Vyshinsky, the Soviet delegate, said in substance. "They are the property of the state.

"You Americans are no different. You call your soldiers GIs. That means 'government issue,' doesn't it?"

When the UN stopped laughing, it realized that Vyshinsky had inadvertently exposed one of the more unlovely doctrines of Communism: that the individual exists only for the convenience of the state.

Today, 20 years later, East and West are seeking areas of collaboration. It is a healthy development, but the results will be more realistic if the search is conducted with open eyes.

Letter From a Reader

Talk or Action

At this time it is appropriate to question all the policies of our politicians seeking office in the federal election on Oct. 30.

Are you satisfied to accept the salary now in effect and if so, will you vote to freeze this amount during your term of office?

Do you consider you are entitled to a non-accountable tax allowance, approximately one-third of your salary, now granted to all elected members of municipalities, provincial and federal legislatures, as well as the recent tax revision to all elected representatives, namely Boards of Education, etc.? The Carter Commission Report stated there should be no non-accountable tax allowances granted to municipal, provincial or federal elected representatives.

Do you consider that it was fair to grant special pensions to elected representatives after they have served a minimum of four years, far beyond the pensions granted to senior citizens?

In the last revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act the new concept was universality of contribution and the only exception was to be the self-employed. When this act was being studied all members of the House Committee, I understand, were unwilling to move a motion to include themselves as contributors. It would appear that our elected members consider themselves employers, rather than the employees, of the people.

If our elected representatives wish to have justice in tax reform, I suggest they put their house in order by revoking all legislation granted as a privilege to themselves which is denied to the people they govern.

Faith in all political parties and politicians is at an all-time low and I believe many people feel that voting is a waste of time.

I challenge all parties to restore confidence in parliament by adopting a policy that "you can live a better sermon than you can preach one any day." — Gordon Dalziel, 2546 Maynard St.

The Big Flaw in Stanfield's Campaign

By PETER DESBARATS

With the 1972 campaign in its final phase, the cumulative evidence of numerous public opinion polls indicates that Conservative Leader Robert Stanfields intensive and expensive campaign has failed to produce significant results for his party.

Now time is growing short. There is still a real possibility that the Liberals will fail to maintain their majority, but the prospect of minority government now is no closer, to say the least, than it was at the beginning of the campaign. It is a good deal more remote than it was a year ago.

Without anticipating the outcome of the election there is sufficient evidence at this stage to justify a start on the post-mortem of the Stanfield campaign.

About a year ago, public opinion polls showed that the Liberal government was well below the level of public support needed for a majority. Why has the Conservative leader, in a campaign that is obviously crucial for his own future, been unable to develop this potentially strong position under the pressure of an election campaign?

The usual answer to this question has to do with Stanfield's personality and lack of political sex appeal.

But the "personality" explanation for Stanfield's failure to bring his party ahead in the campaign isn't the whole answer.

Last year, when the polls were more favorable to the Conservatives, Canadians had watched Stanfield closely for more than three years, and were fully aware of his political style. Those who then favored the Conservatives have seen nothing in the past year which would alter their assessment of Stanfield except in a positive way. Almost a solid year of campaigning has, in fact, sharpened his public personality, and made him a more effective campaigner today than at any earlier time in his career.

The explanation of Stanfield's problem in this campaign is deeper, more complex, and more serious for his party, than the old "personality" business. There seems to have been a serious conceptual flaw in Stanfield's campaign which has been reflected and aggravated by the failure to provide him with the intellectual backup required by any major party leader in this day and age.

As a result, the Stanfield campaign has been a curious combination of modern technique and old-fashioned content.

A typical campaign appearance by Stanfield goes something like this:

First of all, there is about 20 minutes of lively music from the six members of Jalopy, the musical group that travels across the country with the leader. Then Stanfield is introduced and speaks for five to 10 minutes, usually from a few notes. The basic elements of his speech are national pride, government mismanagement exemplified by unemployment and the cost of living, the income tax cut promised by the Conservatives and a pledge to "put Canadians back to work."

After the short speech, Jalopy strikes up again, and against the background of this cheerful music, the Conservative leader moves slowly through the crowd and on to the next stop, where the performance is repeated with little variation.

There have been few set speeches during the campaign — perhaps only half a dozen in the first month — and minimal discussion of policy. For a leader who is popularly supposed to be long on thought and short on charisma, it has been an unexpected and even astonishing performance.

The polls indicate that it hasn't been particularly effective.

At least up to this point, the Stanfield campaign appears to have deliberately ignored the extensive development of policy which has taken place within the party in recent years. Policy statements have been issued by party headquarters in Ottawa during the campaign, in pamphlet form, but there has been little attempt to draw attention to them and almost no attempt to relate them to the leader's campaign.

The structure of Stanfield's speech-producing system reflects this almost casual approach to the content of his campaign. It was described as "informal" by one member of the Stanfield entourage.

The few major speeches that have been delivered have been pieced together by a small number of writers and policy advisers in Ottawa and Toronto and then transmitted to Stanfield through Tom Sloan, a former journalist who has been at Stanfield's side throughout the campaign. The frequent short speeches delivered from brief notes on a single sheet of paper are usually worked out by Stanfield himself in consultation with Sloan.

As far as an outside observer can tell at this stage, this process has failed to produce a clear intellectual concept of the Conservative campaign. It has been, in many senses of the word, a "reactionary" process, responding to events and failing to provide the leadership with an opportunity to state his position in detail on many subjects of national concern.

The average voter, of course, has neither the time nor the inclination to formulate this critique of Stanfield's campaign, but the polls indicate that he might be reacting to an intuitive perception of aimlessness and lack of coherence.

In intellectual conception and actual organization, Trudeau's campaign is different. Before the campaign started, there was a fairly rigid plan for the development of certain themes at certain times before selected audiences. Research for the speeches in Ottawa has followed this plan, and the material has been transmitted as scheduled to Ivan Head, the former academic who has written every word of every speech that the prime minister has read during the campaign.

In some cases, the apparently extemporaneous speeches delivered by Trudeau have in fact been written out completely by Head and virtually memorized by the prime minister.

Particularly in the first month, this "intellectual" approach to the campaign was distrusted by some people within the party who felt that it was too removed from the bread-and-butter concerns of many voters. But it has enabled Trudeau so far to present a more complete and coherent picture of his plans for Canada than Stanfield has had an opportunity to do.

By WARD JUST
New Statesman

WASHINGTON — It has been some time since the stink of corruption has animated a presidential campaign. Official thievery and influence peddling as a political issue is seen to be almost quaint, an anachronism irrelevant to the Larger Questions of war, peace, and prosperity. Graft and men-on-the-take — these are 19th-century conceptions, plots for Theodore Dreiser novels.

There were no serious money scandals in the Kennedy years and Lyndon Johnston managed to evade entanglement in the exotic affairs of his Senate protege, Bobby Baker.

Discounting the Sherman Adams-Bernard Goldfine indiscretions (which, in any case, was never an issue in the presidential campaign) one is obliged to grope back 20 years, to the 1952 elections, for a serious charge of corruption. This was the Eisenhower-Nixon assault on Harry Truman, known as the 'K-1, C-3' formula: Korea, communism, corruption and controls. For anything truly dramatic, one has to reach back 50 years, to Warren G. Harding and Teapot Dome.

It is incredible that this should be the case, because in the last decade the lushest money tree in America has been the Federal Government. As always, it is the rich who benefit. Teapot Dome is a bagatelle compared to the daily (or hourly) waste in Vietnam, and one is not speaking of morals, one is speaking of cash.

Horrendous overruns on weapons systems, profligate use of private consultants, outrageous loopholes in the tax structure, the system is now a wonderful rip-off if a man has the means to get inside it. The tree need only be touched to strike, but he is now succeeding.

McGovern described the Nixon Administration as the most corrupt in the history of the country the other day, and in sheer dollar-volume that may well be the case. Of course the dollar is not now worth what it was. These figures must be seasonally adjusted.

Back in the bad old days a thousand dollars would buy a man admission to Lyndon Johnson's "President's Club". On the record, that meant a cocktail party and a handshake and (if I remember correctly) an embossed certificate. The Nixon campaign is now so stuffed with money they're turning some of it over to local candidates, and a thousand-dollars' contribution doesn't raise an eyebrow.

The succession of scandals beginning with ITT and the $300,000 milk fund, and ending with the Watergate affair and the suspicions surrounding the Russian wheat deals are truly unprececented in recent political history.

The odd part of all of this is that the President has emerged untouched. He is not much visible in Washington these days. When he emerges it is to deliver a carefully drafted speech, much of it centering on foreign affairs. The Watergate? This is the man who visited Moscow and Peking, and wrung the SALT agreement from Brezhnev and company.

The only private organization in hot pursuit of the Watergate affair is the Washington Post, which editorially describes it as "rancid". This is the Post's description of 'the character' of what it calls, appropriately, the Watergate crimes:

"... In short ... the Nixon campaign was running, under innocuous cover and with 'laundered' campaign money, a clandestine intelligence operation worthy of the Central Intelligence Agency ... The dirty tricks were not simply directed at Democratic Party headquarters ... they were directed at a variety of Democratic political targets such as activities at Senator McGovern's pre-convention headquarters and at the Democratic convention itself ... guns, code names, illegal hundred-thousand contributions, a stash of several hundred thousand in cash said to have been controlled by the Attorney-General of the United States while he was in office, burglars caught redhanded in a venture which everybody in authority tries to paint as the bizarre caper of a few mis-guided individuals..."

NIXON . . . a low profile

McGovern is talking about the Watergate affair at every opportunity. He speaks, too, of the milk fund (this was a questionable political contribution by dairymen) and of the ITT case and the others, but by most accounts receives a tepid reception. Perhaps it is that on top of everything else — assassinations, Vietnam — the public is not willing to believe that corruption is also an issue.

It seems to be generally understood that this administration maintains an open door to big businessmen, but no one seems unduly disturbed by that. Kennedy did. Johnson did. Why not Nixon?

The ITT affair, whose denouement came when a Senate investigating committee journeyed to Denver and interviewed the unfortunate Dita Beard in her hospital bed, collapsed into farce. The milk fund is abstruse, the wheat deal arcane — and, in a court of law, unproven; Watergate the weirdest of all of them.

Meanwhile, the Administration is in hiding. The President's surrogates comb the country, his daugher and wife proclaiming their willingness to die to ensure the survival of 17 million South Vietnamese, his economists insisting that economic improvement is around the corner and never, never never a rise in taxes, his Vice-President declaring that the Democrats are desperate.

The Watergate affair is one of the most squalid in American political history, but there is no outcry. The campaign has been unable to formulate and strike the issue.

The administration, operating against the backdrop of an adventurous and largely successful foreign policy, has been able to stonewall domestic issues. With one or two notable exceptions, this is probably the most second-rate Administration since Harding.

But McGovern, because of the controversy surrounding his own candidacy, won't persuade the voters. It's the easiest course just now to hang in with the incumbent.

"That McGovern," a voter told a newspaper reporter the other day, "He's a complainer."

The Society of Extremes

By ALEXANDER SOLZHENITSYN

(A quotation from the Soviet novelist's undelivered Nobel Prize acceptance speech.)

Our twentieth century has turned to be crueller than those that went before it, nor did everything horrible in it come to an end with its first half.

Those very same caveman emotions —greed, envy, unrestraint, mutual hatred—which in the course of their flight assumed such high sounding pseudonyms as class, race, mass or trade union struggle, are tearing our world apart and reducing it to chaos.

Caveman unwillingness to accept compromise has been elevated into a theoretical principle and is considered to be a virtue of orthodoxy. It requires millions of victims in endless civil wars. It keeps drumming into our hearts that there are no stable and universal concepts of justice and good, that all of them are fluid, that they change, and that this means one must always act as suits one's party.

Any professional group, as soon as it finds a convenient moment to grab off something, even if it has not been earned, even if it is not needed, will grab it right away, and society can go fall apart.

The extremes of the up and down oscillations of Western society, as seen from outside, are approaching limits past which the entire system will be unable to return to a state of stability and must fall into ruin.

Violence, constantly less restrained by the confines of a legality established over the generations, strides brazenly and victoriously through the world, unconcerned that its sterility has often been manifest and revealed by history.

Nor is it merely brute force that triumphs but its trumpeted justification also: the whole world is drenched with the crude conviction that might is right and righteousness nothing.

Youth—at an age at when it has no experience other than sexual, when it does not have behind it years of its own suffering and its own comprehension—rapturously repeats our discredited Russian bywords of the nineteenth century while imagining that it has discovered something quite new. The newfound degradation of the Chinese Red Guard movement is accepted by the young in every petty detail as a joyous example.

Superficial is their lack of comprehension of the age old essence of humanity, naive is the faith of their inexperienced hearts: "Now we will overthrow these greedy and savage oppressors and rulers, and then we who take over from them, putting aside our grenades and submachine guns, will be just and sensitive." Don't you believe it! And those who have lived their lives and who understand, those who could refute the young, many of them do not dare to refute them, and even flatter them and will do anything so as not to seem to be "conservatives" — and this again is a phenomenon of the Russian nineteenth century. Dostoyevsky called it "enslavement to progressive fads."

Decline of the Church

By KENNETH BAGNELL
The Globe and Mail

I do not often meet men as gloomy over the future of Catholicism as is Brian Moore, the author who I dropped by to see while he was in Toronto the other day. He says the Roman Catholic Church will disappear before the end of the century, that Pope John XXIII must be blamed for its irrevocable decline, and that when it goes we may be faced with a civilization bereft of values and swept with amorality.

Moore, it is worth mentioning, is not a practicing Catholic, far from it, for he defines himself as anything but anti-Catholic, an agnostic humanist, raised among the faithful but now a spectator in the bleachers of the secular world.

Still, the idea of God has always interested him and after all the Catholic Church is a massive institution, and its inevitable demise may well shatter the foundations of western tradition, and as Moore predicts, signal the decline of the liberal values of humanism.

It is a chilling spectre that Moore cast up as we talked. Over and over again, this slight man, so evocative in prose, kept talking as if burdened with worry that is not just a posture, but a deep anxiety.

In brief: "Look, I'm not a Catholic. But this is an important subject, of interest to us all. For if the Catholic Church goes, you remove a great sense of purpose from a huge segment of the Christian faith. Then what will happen to the Christian faith itself? That is the ultimate question. What have we got to put in its place? If we breed two generations of the young, who do not hold Judeo-Christian values, what's going to happen to us? I find myself amazed to be saying these things, but we could have a new amorality, the like of which we never realized possible."

All these values lurk behind the lines of his current book, Catholics, and he places much blame on the most beloved pope of recent history, John XXIII, the man whom liberal Catholics and Protestants came to regard as a saint of the modern world.

POPE JOHN
. . . blamed

"He was a kindly man," Moore says, "however he took an enormous gamble and failed. And history will judge him on his failure. History will very much account Pope John's papacy with the beginning of the irrevocable decline of the Catholic Church."

The reason, in Moore's view, is clear, in fact crystal clear. Pope John changed what Moore calls "the ground rules." He refers often to the "ground rules" for to him the Catholic Church is not the Catholic Church if the ground rules are being changed. "The Catholic Church always had this great strength, whether you liked it or not, it didn't change. It didn't run with the current tide. Now that's what it's doing."

There is, of course, an obvious criticism of Moore's position. For his view that religion survives only when it is largely unchanging, is hardly supported in history. In fact history suggests the opposite, that while religion must maintain continuity with the past, it flourishes only if it is regenerative. I suspect Martin Luther and John Wesley will agree.

For all this, Brian Moore has given himself to raising the most profound question of our time: the survival of humanism. I expect that in the next two decades, it will become the most common theme of serious writers and philosophers.

Permanent Ban Placed on Livestock Growth Hormone

OTTAWA (CP) — A permanent ban on use of the hormone DES as a growth stimulant in livestock was ordered Tuesday by the federal food and drug directorate.

In a trade letter to manufacturers to veterinary drugs and livestock feed manufacturers, Health Minister John Munro said the ban, which becomes effective Jan. 1, 1973, is to protect the public against possible health hazards.

DES, diethylstilbestrol, has been implicated in research studies as a possible cause of cancer in any animal species.

The drug was suspended in Canada in August by the food and drug branch pending further investigation. The United States also has banned its use in feeds.

The announcement said: "It has been concluded that the safety of this drug, when used as a growth promotant, has not been satisfactorily established."

The Canadian action also is effective against implants of the drug in muscle tissue.

The trade letter, signed by Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister, health protection branch, advised the drug now will be available only on prescription.

At the time the temporary suspension was annoounced in August, cattle breeders warned that a ban would cause higher beef prices. Graeme Hedley, secretary manager of the Ontario Beef Improvement Association, was quoted as saying farmers would have to use more feed to fatten livestock.

He predicted feed costs would rise about 10 per cent.

advertising of to- be continue to be pro- hi pite the NDP gov- e ifting of the adver- ti on tobacco prod- u rney-General Alex M said Tuesday in ature.

ald announced also ulations under the ent's Tobacco Prod- will require all ciga- tering B.C. from the tates to maintain the rgeon-general's warn- ut the harm to health ing.

OOF

raints will not be put on sing of cigars and pipe o, Macdonald said, be- no proof has been es- hed that these products rmful to health.

government is repeal- he former government's ban on tobacco advertis- ecause "it was not work- and it was not fair."

e main injustice of the he said, was that publi- ns like "TV Guide" were to carry the advertising use they were imported outside B.C., and local cations were unable to similar advertising.

acdonald statements e during debate on the ciple of the Tobacco Prod- Act, which got the sup- of the Liberals and ressive Conservatives, not of the Socreds.

e house also approved an- r bill that repeals the ner government's total on advertising of tobacco ducts.

acdonald said he wanted make it plain that the rea- for restraining cigarette ertising is that "cigarettes by inches."

.C.'s attempt will be to esh" its restraints on ad- tising with those imple- nted by Ottawa and the ted States.

TAL BAN

peaking for the Socred op- ition, Don Phillips (SC— th Peace River) called for total ban on tobacco adver- ing.

Macdonald answered that if ere is any evidence put for- rd that other tobacco prod- ts are harmful he would ex- nd the restraints.

But he said "I want hard idence before acting."

ONCERN

Macdonald added that the ly total ban that can be ade effective is one imposed Ottawa, and he said "I ould like all the people of .C. to apply to Ottawa with l their force for a total ban cigarette advertising."

PHILLIPS
. . . total ban

Other speakers in the debate supported the government's position on the legislation, but a Conservative spokesman expressed concern that some aspects of the new bill might be prejudical to certain groups and a Liberal said the new bill will never work.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) said it is obvious to all that smoking is harmful and that the legislature should do everything it can to discourage its use.

He called the Social Credit legislation "badly drafted" and said he was embarrassed as a legislator to have voted for it because it made B.C. "a laughing-stock" in a judicial sense.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace also supported the bill but said it may not be a good idea to isolate only one human practice for criticism. He said there are many other self-inflicted human conditions like obesity which require action as seriously as tobacco use.

Wallace said if the legislature begins trying to legislate good health practices, legislation of morals cannot be far away, something he said should not happen.

Advertising, he said, has a minimal effect on actual consumption of tobacco. The example should start in the home.

DANGER

Wallace urged against imposing restrictions on only certain individuals and groups, like producers and advertisers of tobacco products, and said a total ban of tobacco advertising is a dangerous precedent since tobacco is still a legal commodity in Canada.

MLA Hartley Dent (NDP—Skeena) said it is important that the government's legislation be credible. He criticized tobacco companies for associating themselves with sporting events in order to put their products in a favorable light with consumers.

Robert McClelland (SC—Langley) called cigarettes "killers that travel in packs" and said the legislation on the books now in B.C. should not be an embarrassment to anyone.

COMPLAINTS

He hit at newspaper publishers and radio stations for complaining that their revenues were being cut down by the ad ban, saying there are more than enough advertisers to go around who do not deal in tobacco products.

McClelland said the premier and all the members of his cabinet voted for the legislation when it was introduced by the Socreds and urged the government to "try to make it work before you throw it out holus-bolus."

Alf Nunweller (NDP—Fort George) said it is obvious the legislation has not been doing its job. He urged a close look at the packaging and labelling of all tobacco products with the aim of informing the public that they are dangerous to health.

Gary Lauk (NDP - Vancouver-Centre) said enforcability of the law is the main issue and that with the case of a law as unworkable as the ad ban, it should be withdrawn.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) told the government negative legislation of this kind will never work.

PERSUASION

Williams said only a positive approach, with education and a clear persuasion of individuals that it is more healthy not to smoke, will achieve the aim of the law.

Williams judged it wrong to exempt some tobacco products from the advertising restraint simply because there is not as much evidence of ill health caused by cigars as there is about cigarettes.

COMMONWEALTH 'ALIENS

LONDON (CP) — After Jan. 1, 1973, Commonwealth citizens wishing to enter Britain will be treated as aliens, for the first time since the origins of the British Empire.

Under new immigration regulations published Tuesday, Commonwealth citizens wishing to live and work in Britain will be permitted entry for a maximum of 12 months for a particular job with a specified employer. They will also require work permits.

At the end of the 12-month period, a Commonwealth citizen may apply for further one-year extensions as is the case now with aliens here.

A home office spokesman said the "nature of employment and continuity of residence" will be crucial factors in the decision for such extensions.

The new regulations, published under existing legislation, take effect at the moment Britain officially joins the European Common Market Jan. 1.

From that time, citizens of the other eight countries in the enlarged community will be free to enter Britain and take jobs here merely by producing a passport or identity card.

Employment vouchers have been relatively easy to obtain for citizens of the old Commonwealth—Canada, Australia and New Zealand—entitling them to work in Britain for an indefinite period.

Recently, however, immigration authorities have insisted more and more on issuing either three-year or 12-month work permits which are renewable.

BARRETT WANTS PRESS APOLOGY

On Tuesday Premier Barrett severely criticized a Vancouver Sun report of remarks he made during a recent house debate.

He said it was "a distortion" and misrepresentative of what he actually said.

The story appeared on the front page of Saturday's Sun and dealt with a house debate on proposed government amendments to the Mediation Commission Act.

The headline read: "Barrett Says 'Labor Pushing Us'," a headline Barrett termed "a falsehood."

He said the lead paragraph of the story was "a misinterpretation" and "no attempt to highlight what I said."

Barrett said he is demanding a front page apology in the Sun and statements from Sun publishing executives, including FP Publications general manager R. S. Malone, whom Barrett referred to as "Lance-Corporal Malone."

"If the Vancouver Sun wants to say it is at war with the NDP government, that's fine. Let them say it," Barrett said, commenting that newspapers in Regina and Winnipeg had taken positions in opposition to the two provinces' governments.

Barrett did not fault "the working reporters" who wrote the story, but suggested that the headline and lead paragraph may have been sent in "from Malone and his boys in Winnipeg."

Barrett made most of his remarks on the story outside of the house after the Tuesday night sitting, but had also mentioned it during debate on second reading of the amendments to the Mediation Commission Act in the house.

Gov't Risks 'Gestapo' Label: Grit

Liberal members of the legislature pushed strongly Tuesday for a reduction of the powers to be given the minister of labor under amendments to the Meditation Commission Act, b.it appeared to make little progress.

At issue was an amendment introduced by Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) which would require the miister to obtain a search warrant before inspecting premises of working areas and business establishments.

One of the aspects of the government's proposed amendments to the act is that the minister be given this power to inspect, during regular working hours, areas where work is being carried out, without having to obtain a search warrant.

The Liberals, specifically Williams, argued that the minister was being allowed too much power.

Williams said the government risks comments of "Gestapo tactics" and "improper use of authority" which might arise if the power were abused.

He said his amendment would encourage a sense of co-operation in labor-management relations and would remove the minister from criticism.

If the minister asked the operator of a business establishment if he couldd inspect the premises, he would likely find full co-operation, Williams said. But if he didn't then it would be justifiable to "come down hard" on those who resist, after a search warrant had been obtained.

Liberal leader David Anderson said the power is dangerous because it could be abused by some future minister. He said it would be a reasonable experiment to have the minister do without this specific power for awhile to see how it worked.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver ister. He said it would be a Point Grey) likened the power to a "police-state power" and said it would not help the labor-management situation.

Government members called the Liberals' argument "a red herring," saying there have never been any objections to the power to inspect when it was incorporated under the Mediation Commission.

Labor Minister Bill King said there is not going to be any "middel of the night raids by the RCMP" as a result of powers to inspect are solely the legislation and said the for the purpose of the Mediation Commission Act and nothing else.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said it is not the desire of the government "to turn employers into some kind of criminal." He said it is possible some injury could come to an employee during the time delay necessitated by the obtaining a search warrant.

Premier Barrett said the concerns expressed by the Liberals that the minister might abuse his powers were "wrong, unfair and could do damage to the kind of climate we're trying to create."

Highways Minister Bob Strachan said the key phrase of the bill is that the search can be carried out by the minister of labor or his officials only during working hours. He said searches will not be made "in the dark of night."

But Strachan also said the employer should not be given advance warning of when he would be visited by labor officials.

Dame Sybil Still Indomitable at 90 Mark

LONDON — Dame Sybil Thorndike, crippled by arthritis but still displaying the indomitable humor and gaiety that made her beloved in the British theatre, celebrated her 90th birthday Tuesday and embarked on a week of festivities.

Celebrations will be capped Sunday with a performance, entitled Sybil and staged at London's Haymaket Theatre, bringing together what one U.K. newspaper describes as "an illustrious company which can never have been equalled on one stage."

Among those taking part will be Dame Edith Evans, Dame Peggy Ashcroft, ballerina Dame Margot Fonteyn, Lord Lawrence Olivier, Sir Ralph Richardson, Sir Alec Guinness, Paul Scofield and Vanessa Redgrave.

VANCOUVER — Thomas A. Dohm, the president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, was named Tuesday to the board of directors of the Bank of British Columbia. Dohm was a justice of the British Columbia Supreme Court before becoming president of the stock exchange.

STOCKHOLM — The 1972 Nobel Prize in economics was awarded today by the Swedish Science Academy jointly to John R. Hicks of Oxford University and Kenneth J. Arrow of Harvard University for "their pioneering contribution to general economic equilibrium theory and welfare theory."

WASHINGTON — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis announced Tuesday that she won't be accompanying Sen. Claiborne Pell as reported earlier on a whistle-stop tour through Rhode Island scheduled for Oct. 28.

HOLLYWOOD — Claire Windsor, who came here as a star-struck girl from Seattle and became an actress in 45 silent movies and seven talkies in a 30-year career, died Tuesday at 74. Her last film appearance was in 1952.

BEWARK, N.J. — Reporter Peter Bridge was released from jail Tuesday after serving 21 days for refusing to answer a grand jury's questions about a story he wrote.

VATICAN CITY — Luigi Fedeli, butcher to Popes, is suing the Vatican. The Vatican closed Fedeli's butcher shop last April and took over direct management of his delicatessen. Now he has gone to court claiming the Holy See owes him $259,720 in back salary and for unpaid bills. The Vatican appointed Fedeli's father papal butcher in 1933.

VENTURA, Calif. — "Are you the Robert Harlock who volunteered to fight the great Ojai fire of 1948?" asked the man on the telephone.

"Yeh," answered Harlock "but why the call?"

Fire Capt. Sidney L. Ellis explained he was rummaging through an old desk at the station when he came across a pay cheque made out to Harlock.

"It's pay day," Harlock was told. "Twenty-four years later, but you've got $62 coming."

SHREVEPORT, La. — Doctors said Mike Walker, 38, tried to commit suicide over a long period of time by "eating himself to death." Tuesday he nearly accomplished it.

Walker, who weights 920 pounds, suffered a severe gall bladder attack in a tractor-trailer truck that is used to transport him to state fairs where he is a side show attraction and makes speeches against the use of drugs. He appeared to be recovering today.

ROME — The Radical Party has become Italy's first political group to offer mail order membership.

The party, which has promised to dissolve itself unless membership reaches 1,000 by the end of the year, sent word any Italian or foreigner older than 18 can become a radical by paying a $20.60 membership fee into the party's postal account.

Workers, pensioners and students can pay in installments.

JACKIE'S BUTT FOR SALE

TORONTO — Michael MacDonald who says he has the unused portion of a cigarette smoked by Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis in 1962, is offering the butt for sale.

He said he grabbed the butt when Mrs. Onassis tossed it out the window of a car as she was passing a New York hotel where he worked.

It is as good as new except for a half a dozen drags missing, he said.

Since he put an advertisement in newspapers a week ago, he has had about 300 calls, with offers ranging downward from $100 to $1.50.

Land Speculation—It's a Gamble

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Like all speculation, buying desert from a high pressure land development company is a gamble.

Some customers have won. Others have lost.

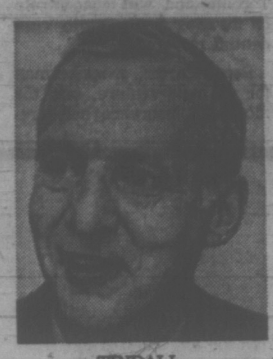
Among the winners was the man who paid $8,000 four years ago for a desert lot in a new Arizona city. It was speculation. Pure gamble. Today the lot is worth $24,000.

Then there is a woman who paid $10,000 for a flat building site and when she inspected the property she discovered there was an ugly rock-filled ravine at her back door. She demanded her money back. After two years she finally got it.

There are about eight land development firms operating in B.C. at the moment, although it is difficult to keep score. They come and go very quickly.

It is all legal. Most are financed by large very respectable corporations.

The land development companies make big profits — in most cases — because of high volume of land sold in a short period of time.



TENDALL
... tricky contracts

Some companies have salesmen working in many countries around the globe.

Is the land worth the asking price? Usually it is potentially worth it.

But the salesman's commission has to be considered along with the cost of the free dinners that are usually part of the come-on and the movie that is usually shown.

As well the company sometimes offers to fly customers down to the desert or the waterfront for an inspection of the property.

All these costs have to be considered by the purchaser when he considers the asking price.

The advice of William Tindall of the Victoria Better Business Bureau is to contact the real estate board nearest the site and obtain an appraisal of the value of the land.

READ CONTRACT

In addition, if the asking price is $5,000 or above — and in most cases it is — the purchaser is advised to hire a lawyer.

Reading a land sale contract can be tricky.

To begin with, a customer must be absolutely certain he does read the contract.

Most land sale contracts have a clause that reads something like this:

"This contract contains all of the terms and conditions of the agreement between buyer and seller. No verbal representation or warranty of any kind or nature whatsoever made by either party hereto or any other person with respect hereto shall be binding upon either party hereto unless incorporated herein."

This means that regardless of what a salesman may tell you, you are stuck with the small print of the contract — so read it carefully or have a lawyer do it for you.

If checking the contract yourself, says the Better Business Bureau, check for the wording of the guarantee.

There is a big difference between being guaranteed a refund "if the buyer is not satisfied" and "a refund will be paid if the site is not as represented."

The woman with the ravine got into difficulties with the "not as represented" language of the contract.

She had been shown a photograph of the site taken from an angle that did not show the ravine. The company argued that the site was as represented in the photograph.

After an exchange of letters lasting many months the company finally arranged for a refund in full.

A small minority of customers have not been quite so lucky. They dealt with companies that went bankrupt. Such bankruptcies, however, are rare and can happen in any business.

RED TAPE

The Better Business Bureau urges potential purchasers to ask land sale companies to hold their deposits in a trust fund so that the money can be speedily returned if the site does not satisfy the customer. Part of the difficulty in the ravine case may have stemmed from the red tape the company faced in regaining funds that had been sent to the central office.

The bureau also urges potential cutomers to watch for any time limit in the guarantee. Here's a sample guarantee from a land sale contract:

"At any time within 30 days from the date hereon purchaser may complete a company-guided inspection tour and at the immediate conclusion of which either confirm this purchase or exchange for a lot of equal or greater value or rescind this purchase with a complete refund if in the opinion of the purchaser the property does not meet the qualification as presented to him at the time of signing this contract."

The phrase "in the opinion of the purchaser" acts as added protection for the buyer but the phrase "at the immediate conclusion of which" should also be noted.

OUT OF LUCK

The bureau says people who wait until they get home after a visit to the site may find they are out of luck. The wording allows only an immediate protest, an immediate request for a refund while at the site.

However, despite all the land sale companies operating out of British Columbia, there have been very few complaints.

A similar tale was told by the Vancouver Better Business Bureau.

A large number of inquiries have come in. The bureau is watching the activities of the companies very closely. But there are very few complaints.

And those who have made profits on the transactions are not complaining at all.

Says Vincent Forbes, manager of the Vancouver bureau: "The important thing to remember is that speculation means you are taking a gamble. If you are taking a big gamble, hire a lawyer."

Hudson Bay

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. reports consolidated net loss for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $197,000 compared with a loss of $425,000 in the same period last year.

The loss figure includes a special charge this year of $9.4 million to cover the write off of the Wellgreen Mines in the Yukon.

Consolidated net earnings before the extraordinary item totalled $9,210,000 or $1.02 a share. There was no similar extraordinary item in the 1971 nine-month loss figure.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminum Ltd. reports net earnings in U.S. funds of $47.3 million or $1.38 a share for nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $47.7 million or $1.39 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Third quarter earnings were $14 million or 41 cents a share compared with $15.2 million or 44 cents a year earlier.

National Steel

National Steel Corp. reports 1972 third-quarter profits were up a 300 per cent from the same period a year ago.

Earnings for the third quarter of this year were $15.2 million, or 81 cents a share, compared with $4.1 million, or 22 cents a share, during the 1971 third quarter, the firm said.

Weyerhaeuser

Weyerhaeuser Company Ltd. of Tacoma reports nine-month earnings of $116 million or $1.70 a share compared with $76 million ($1.10) for the first nine months of 1971.

Sales for the nine-month period were $1.2 billion, an increase of $265 million over the same period in 1971.

The company says that while its profit margin is improved, it is still below those of the late 1960s.

Strengths during the past nine months were high demand for building materials and strong linerboard and shipping container markets.

Problems during the period included the generally soft market for pulp and construction delays caused by labor disputes in British Columbia.

Canada Perm

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation and its subsidiary, Canada Permanent Trust, had a net operating income of $9,389,000 during the nine months ended Sept. 30.

The earnings, equivalent to $1.32 a share, were up from $6,198,000 or 87 cents a share in the comparable period of 1971.

After extraordinary gains and losses on the sale of assets for the first three-quarters of each year, 1971 earnings were $1.08 and those for 1972 were $1.23.

DONALD MUNRO

CONSERVATIVE

ESQUIMALT - SAANICH

The incredible government bungling which has produced an unemployment insurance fund deficit that could easily hit $700,000,000 by the end of this year is just one part of the four-year national scandal that has been the Trudeau Regime.

Haphazard, ill-conceived welfarism and the unemployment insurance mess now facing the taxpayer has been Canada's lot since the Trudeau clique took over in Ottawa.

Canadians can no longer tolerate such mismanagement of their business, but the Liberals indicate they plan no improvements. If anything, they suggest, the situation will only worsen.

The Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich hinted as much, when he said at his nominating meeting "it is essential that we maintain a high level of taxation" to support what the Liberals claim is social reform.

BUT . . .

A Stanfield Conservative government in Ottawa will immediately move to put the Canadian economy back on sound footing, with positive programs of job-creation replacing the unthinking, demoralizing and bankrupting handouts the Trudeau regime has used to create a generation of welfare bums.

Mr. Stanfield is committed to full employment policies because the Conservative Party believes Canada needs the contributions of all citizens and that the vast majority of jobless Canadians now would prefer to live from the fruits of their own efforts.

Donald Munro, your Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, is a member of the Stanfield team and the best man for the big job ahead in Ottawa.

For further information contact Mr. Munro at his headquarters, 2940 Douglas, Phone 382-7155.

Loan for Turkish Mine

MONTREAL (CP) — International lending by the Export Development Corp. (EDC) topped $1 billion Tuesday with the signing of an agreement to lend $21 million to a Turkish mining firm to finance half the cost of a zinc plant in central Turkey.

Jean-Luc Pepin, federal industry and commerce minister, said the Crown corporation's lending has increased to $400 million from $50 million annually in the last decade.

He said that "serious consideration is now being given to making a substantial increase in the amount of financial resources available through EDC."

The EDC's lending activities are intended to promote growth of Canada's export industries, Pepin said at a signing ceremony with Turkish officials.

The $42-million zinc plant is to be designed and managed by Surveyer, Menninger and Chenevert Inc. of Montreal for Chinko-Kursun Metal Sanayii Co. (CINKUR), a privately controlled mining corporation.

The project is expected to provide about 500 jobs in Canada over he next two years with supply contracts going to a number of Canadian manufacturers.

A Surveyer spokesman said negotiations now are under way with Canadian suppliers, including Canadian General Electric, Canadian Vickers, Canron, Marine Industries and Dominion Engineering.

Construction is expected to start in Turkey at the end of this year with completion set for December, 1974, or early 1975.

The plant, to be built in Kayseri, will produce 40,000 tons of zinc annually. About 25,000 tons are for use in Turkey while the rest will be exported, largely to European countries.

A spokesman for the Surveyer engineering firm said the contract was won against international competition from the United States, Germany, France, Belgium and Eastern European countries.

MORTGAGE INSURANCE VENTURE

TORONTO (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada has announced plans to head a group of Canadian financial institutions in a mortgage insurance company that will insure conventional house loans against default.

The bank said the new company will be called Insmor Mortgage Insurance Co. and will be in operation by 1973.

The announcement said the company will be located in Toronto and will concentrate on insuring single family residential mortgages.

Peter Carter, a spokesman for the new venture, said the mortgage insurance helps reduce down payments by insuring conventional home mortgages against default.

The bank said the company will insure loans up to 90 per cent of the value of the property. Initially the insurance will cover single, family residential properties only.

The other founding members of the company are Banque Canadienne Nationale of Montreal, Canada Trust Co. of London, Ont., Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Montreal Trust Co., Hamilton Trust and Savings Corp. and Waltson Properties Ltd.

The only company in the field now is Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada, Toronto.

P & O Merger Approved

LONDON (AP) — Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co., Britain's oldest passenger shipping line, and Bovis, a major construction company, agreed Tuesday to merge.

The merger terms, which have been criticized by a group of dissenting P. and O. directors, would give 63.48 per cent of the equity capital of the combined group to the shipping company's deferred shareholders and the remainder to Bovis stockholders.

P. and O. directors Denys Brown, Sandy Marshall and Clifford Nancarrow criticized the terms.

They calculated the merger terms valued Bovis at about £190 million (about $456 million) and said: "This is less than the market value of the P. and O. fleet without taking into account the properties recently valued at £108 million ($259.2 million) and the road transport fleet or P. and O's substantial liquid resources and trade investments."

The deal has to be approved by the stockholders of P. and O. at a meeting planned for Nov. 16.

P. and O., which started a mail delivery service to the Far East in 1834 and built up a major passenger trade to India and other ports in Asia, has suffered from the decline of sea passenger traffic and has sold some of its liners.

Ouster Angers Blacks

TORONTO (CP) — Four lawyers representing Toronto's black community have labelled the swift deportation of a U.S. convict a "shocking violation of human rights and natural justice."

The group said Edwin Brockton Hogan, a convicted murderer who escaped from Ohio State penitentiary, had been denied justice because he was deported from Canada before his lawyer had a chance to further appeal his case.

They said Hogan was taken from his jail cell in Toronto and illegally surrendered to U.S. authorities in Buffalo, N.Y.

The statement issued Tuesday by Hogan's lawyer, Charles Roach, and three others at a press conference at the United Negro Improvement Association, demanded that Canadian authorities request Hogan's return to Canada.

Hogan, 32, escaped last June 10 and was arrested here June 27. He fought deportation proceedings, claiming he was framed on robbery and murder charges because he was a Black Panther.

CONSPIRACY SUGGESTED

The lawyers' statement called Hogan a fugitive from political injustice in the United States and said he had a right to appeals when the deportation order was upheld against him. They said there appeared to be a "conspiracy" between U.S. and Canadian officials.

Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey, in an interview from Moncton N.B., said he approved of the handling of the case and noted Hogan was a convicted murderer and robber and "he has opportunity for further justice in his own country."

During his appeal against the deportation, Hogan testified he hoped to arrange asylum in Cuba or some friendly African country.

The Immigration Appeal Board's decision against him was mailed Thursday and Hogan received the notice Monday morning. His lawyer didn't get the notice until Monday afternoon.

Mr. Roach said that by 12:45 p.m. Monday Hogan had already been taken from his jail cell and was on his way to Buffalo.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 17-year-old youth was sentenced Tuesday to five months definite and seven months indeterminate by Judge William Ostler in provincial court.

John Dwayne Paul Cindler, 219 Quebec, pleaded guilty Oct. 20 to two counts of theft under $200. He pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of breach of probation.

Saanich police said Cindler stole a hunting knife and sheath, valued at $5, from a car parked in front of a residence in the Burnside area Oct. 19.

On the same day he stole $7.75 in silver from another parked car in the 500-block Nora Place, police said.

On July 12, Cindler was placed on two years' probation for breaking and entering and theft. He was charged with breach of probation after entering guilty pleas to the theft charges.

Library Budget May Jump 28%

The Greater Victoria Public Library's 1973 budget may increase by as much as 28 per cent, according to preliminary figures aired at a board meeting Tuesday.

The finance committee presented a preliminary budget total of $1,202,350, compared to the 1972 total of $938,367.

The board members stressed, however, that these were rough figures and could be drastically changed before the budget is finally approved early in 1973.

The preliminary budget was prepared on the request of the city of Victoria's administration, explained Donald Miller, library director.

Legally, the board must provide the municipalities which support the library with a provisional budget by Dec. 15. Miller said that this year, as in 1972, the city had asked for earlier information on the budget, presumably to prepare its own budget.

Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry and Victoria Ald. Alf Hood expressed concern that releasing figures at this stage was premature.

Hood said, "These first figures are provided as a guide. We've got to make this abundantly clear."

Newberry commented, "It seems to me these figures don't mean very much. I don't see why the city wants it anyway."

It was agreed the figures would be given "unofficially" to the city comptroller by Miller.

Finance committee chairman R. G. Campion said his committee held two meetings and had "done some slashing in some areas."

"Major increases," he explained, "are in salaries, additional expenditure on books and the establishment of a branch four (somewhere in northeastern Saanich)."

Campion said the figures included an extra $64,000 for staff salary increases, an additional $60,000 for hiring of new staff, and $77,000 for the establishment of the other Saanich branch.

Stressing that the preliminary figures were a "very rough approximation," chairman Brian Tobin said:

"When we put in the centennial branch and closed down the Town and Country one Saanich didn't gain a branch, they just got a better one."

The board was told by Campion and Miller that there could be a $14,650 surplus from its 1972 budget. They explained that $11,000 of this was due to some staff positions not being filled for the first part of 1972.

The board will ask the municipal councils for permission to spend the money in ways that would probably decrease the 1973 budget.

They felt the money should be spent because, not to do so, would make it difficult to justify an increase in 1973.

The board approved a $3,007.80 progress payment to Albert Bowen, a Toronto library consultant who is making a $10,000 survey of the capital region's library facilities and future needs.

Miller said he expected to have Bowen's report next month.

In other business:

—The board set fees for rentals of meeting rooms at the Saanich-Victoria branch at 880 Seymour.

If meetings are free the large meeting room (70 people) will cost $5 for two hours and the smaller one, for 35 people, $3.

If admission is charged the fees will be doubled. Meetings must be held during the branch's opening hours. Bookings can be made at the branch or by phoning 385-2023.

—The board asked Miller to keep looking for premises to house a new Saanich branch, hopefully, to open in April, 1973.

—Miller reported that the library system appears to be heading for a record year in circulation of books.

—The board agreed the libraries will be closed Christmas, Boxing and New Year's Days.

Martlet to Cover UVic —Until Apathy Returns

The Martlet has decided to return to news coverage of University of Victoria affairs, but with a word of warning.

The weekly student newspaper published by the Alma Mater Society, reacting to apathy in student elections and lack of volunteer reporters, had abandoned news coverage in favor of lengthy features and opinion articles.

In an editorial in its latest issue, the paper says it intends to report news of student activities, but adds: "We were serious when we said we would stop if students didn't appear to want it any more."

"The turnout at the student election (Oct. 13) was only 14 per cent and we connect that fact with the problems we are facing," the editorial said.

"We don't know the reasons yet why students don't care any more about campus government, about how their lives are controlled here and about how they can possibly allow 14 per cent of their number to elect spokesmen for the rest.

"But it is certain that unless they are willing to participate in the management of their affairs, things are going to get a lot worse. Unless students start to care again there may not be any student government next year," the editorial said.

Co-Op Car Care Planned

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A special committee of the Alberni Labor Council Monday night accepted a motion that a low-cost co-operative car service centre be organized to fight the high cost of automobile maintenance.

The motion was passed by 28 representatives of eight unions.

Described as the first undertaking of its kind in North America, the co-op would furnish normal service station maintenance and repairs to domestic cars and pickup truck-camper units owned by shareholders at a reduced hourly rate. Parts would be at wholesale prices.

The committee has an option to purchase property and a building for $55,000 which could house five service bays.

Walter Behn, committee president, said the total cost of setting up the operation would amount to about $100,000.

The membership, he said, would be open to the public at $45 a share with a required purchase of two shares.

It was indicated that a membership of at least 1,100 would be needed to support the venture financially.

The service centre would offer better-than-union rates to a mechanic and guarantee him full-time employment.

Five Years for Addict: 'Leniency Didn't Work'

A 22-year-old Victoria man was sentenced to five years in prison on a drug charge Tuesday after being told by a county court judge that leniency towards him had failed in the past.

Terry Mullaney of no fixed address had earlier pleaded guilty to possession of MDA for the purposes off trafficking. About 50 caps of the drug were involved in the charge, which was dated June 16 in Esquimalt.

Judge M. L. T. Drake said Previous lenient treatment by the courts, including probation, has not worked in the accused's case.

The public is strongly opposed to such offences and a sentence to deter others from doing the same sort of thing must be imposed, he said.

A probation report showed Mullaney was selling MDA to support a heroin habit.

Killer-Robber Gets Life Term

RIVIERE DU LOUP, Que. (CP) — Luis Pichette, 39, of Montreal, was sentenced to life imprisonment Tuesday for the murder last March of 17-year-old Daniel Beaulieu.

Beaulieu, a bus boy, was robbed before his throat was slit, testimony at the trial showed. Pichette pleaded guilty.

Judge Pierre Cote of Superior Court imposed the sentence.

Physician Eyes Acupuncture

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP) — "Now I've become a student again," says a world-famous surgeon who developed an operation that brought hearing to many deaf people.

Dr. Samuel Rosen is studying acupuncture as a possible method of helping some deaf children hear better, or for the first time.

And he is thinking of using chicken legs or grapefruit as practice objects to develop the finger muscles needed in skillful application of the hair-thin acupuncture needles.

Dr. Rosen and his wife, Helen, his research assistant, recently returned from a month in China where they looked into Chinese reports that acupuncture has helped overcome nerve deafness in some children. It was the Rosen's second trip within a year.

Dr. Rosen, clinical professor emeritus of otolaryngology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, developed a surgical technique that overcomes deafness caused by the immobilization or rigidityof the stapes, the small bones within the ear that permit sound signals to be translated into nerve responses recorded in the brain. He has travelled the world demonstrating the technique.

WORK IN SCHOOL

He was among the first medical scientists to warn that loud and excessive noise could cause permanent damage to hearing.

In their first visit to China, the Rosens became interested in reports that acupuncture could aid in treating nerve deafness, even though the acupuncture needles inserted around or near the ear never come close to the nerve of hearing itself.

This last time they worked for a month at the No. 3 Peking School for the Deaf, helping Chinese specialists test the hearing of 111 children aged nine to 13.

The tests set a baseline or "floor" of hearing ability, using an audiometer that records hearing level electrically. The Chinese had been using spoken words or handclapping, at various distances, to assess hearing ability. The audiometer can standardize the response.

Future tests can show whether acupuncture sessions actually improve hearing ability.

Dr. Rosen plans to work with a similar group of American children for an objective measurement of what benefit, if any, results from acupuncture.

Dr. Rosen says neither he nor the Chinese have any idea how the acupuncture technique could work beneficially on hearing, and "it might be 25 years before we get an insight." He said the Chinese told him they began acupuncture without knowing that nerve deafness is supposed not to be correctable.

Agrostologist, Hedger Replaced by Numbers

LONDON (CP) — Once in Britain there was the baby-sitter and exhauster, the shot blaster and agrostologist, the apiarist and festooner, the gaffer and the hackler, the corset strapper, slagger, stripper and gut seeker.

And that was just the beginning. Now they're mere numbers: 713.13, 629.99, 541.55. . . .

The national employment department has just published a three-volume job classification list with 3,500 occupations all numbered for computer consumption.

Gone are the potato crisp inspector, poker-in, rumbler, hedger, roughneck, roustabout and trouble shooter.

And adding salt to the wounds is the fact that the employment people apparently rank the occupations in a way which gives the lowest numbers to those they consider most important.

The highest rating—00—predictably goes to cabinet ministers, to MPs and top civil servants who get 001 treatment while 002 goes to industrial managers.

Stockbrokers come out with 034:10 while a false twister, apparently a kind of leather worker, weighs in with 542.75. A wood stainer comes out with 812.70.

Strippers (of vegetables) end up with 551.55 while strippers (entertainment) turn out with 173.50.

That's not far behind journalists who finish with 151.30.

Students Give Six Candidates Biggest Forum

University of Victoria students surprised Victoria federal election candidates with the best audience turnout of the campaign at a lunch-time meeting on campus Tuesday.

"This is by far the largest crowd we've had out of some seven meetings," Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon told the 150 students.

"So far the meetings seem to have been attended by friends, relatives and campaign managers," he said.

Speaking at the meeting were McKinnon, David Groos (Lib), Flemming Hansen (NDP), Dan Heffernan (Independent), Michael Hall-Patch (Independent), and Clifford Stretch (Socred).

EXCEPTIONS

All the candidates adhered to material they had presented at earlier meetings, with the exception of these highlights.

Hansen accused McKinnon of lying when McKinnon listed what he said were election campaign donations declared to the 1968 returning officer in Victoria.

McKinnon said his party had received 137 donations averaging $123 each. He said the New Democrats had received nine donations averaging $447 each, and the Liberals had received three donations averaging $2,656.

"That's a lie," shouted Hansen when his party's figure was mentioned.

"Then the NDP party agent must have lied to the returning officer — these are public figures," McKinnon said.

APPLAUDED

Hansen was applauded when he told the audience that in this election campaign he had received $250 from the B.C. Federation of Labor, small donations from three or four hundred people and other funds from "passing the hat round" at meetings.

Groos said he would be happy to have his campaign funds made public, but he would not like to know them himself because he would feel "beholden" to people.

A questioner seemed to have Groos at a loss for an answer with a query about what should be done about heroin use and hard drugs in general.

SHAKES HEAD

"Two acquaintances of mine died of heroin overdoses this summer," the questioner said. "What do Mr. Groos and Mr. Heffernan think should be done about heroin?"

Groos sat shaking his head and appeared reluctant to answer the question. After a long pause in which he seemed at a loss for words, Groos stood up.

"Everybody knows the problem, but I don't think anyone has the answer. I don't know the answer. Do you know the answer?" he said.

The audience jeered Groos and cried for a reply.

Heffernan said he favored federally-controlled clinics to dispense heroin to registered addicts and provide help to rehabilitate the addict. He said such measures would undermine the business of the professional drug pusher.

Groos then rose and said he knew "quite a bit" about Heffernan's proposal, which he said was the "English system."

"I don't think it's been an unmixed blessing," Groos said. He said more study should be done.

NOT GOOD

The Independent candidates both took the position that party politics were not good for government. Heffernan said members of the cabinet should be elected from a house of independent members. Hall-Patch said independent members could return government to the people.

Hall-Patch, whose witty approach got plenty of laughs, was asked to comment on Groos' performance as federal member for Victoria.

"Well, we could have had somebody who did something bad," Hall-Patch said. "And in addition Mr. Groos has given the riding a good laugh at his expense with all that stuff about listening to people at the bus stop."

"Don't you ever take the bus?" interjected Groos.

Quebec Park Gets $16M

QUEBEC (CP) — Artillery Park, located inside the old walls of the city, will get an extensive facelifting thanks to a $16 million restoration program announced Tuesday by Jean Chretien, federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development.

Chretien said the area, which includes fortifications dating back to 1693 and soldiers' barracks built in 1749, is to be turned into a national park during the eight-year restoration program scheduled to get under way in 1973.

Nightclub Receiver Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three of the city's best known nightclubs, Oil Can Harry's, The Cave and Isy's Strip City, have been placed in receivership, with liabilities estimated at about $860,000, it was announced Tuesday. All three clubs are controlled by Danny Baceda. The Bank of Montreal Tuesday appointed chartered accountant Stanley Horner as receiver.

The Cave was closed Monday night after the musicians' union told seven of its members not to work because of unpaid back wages. Isy's and Oil Can Harry's remain open and The Cave may reopen under the receiver.

Baceda acquired The Cave in October, 1971, and Isy's a month later from Isy Walters. Walters said today he hopes The Cave could be reopened but said it had lost money with almost every act to appear.

He added that Isy's and Oil Can Harry's are both making a profit. He estimated The Cave's losses in the last five or six months at $100,000, not including the cost of renovations.

Radiology Unit

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $265,000 radiology centre is scheduled to open today at Vancouver General Hospital, upgrading the hospital's facilities for investigating brain and arterial diseases. The unit, which can handle eight patients a day, will have its own staff of technicians.

Distillery Talks

WINFIELD (CP) — Talks are scheduled to open today on a new contract for more than 100 workers employed by the Hiram Walker Distillery here. The men are asking a 25-per-cent wage increase to give them parity with employees of the same company in Ontario. The current base rate is $3.65 an hour.

Grant Queried

QUESNEL (CP) — Town council will ask the provincial government to confirm a $75,000 grant approved by the Social Credit government before the August provincial election for a new bridge across the Quesnel River, and will also seek additional financial assistance from the province for the job. The old wooden bridge over the river was permanently closed to vehicle traffic in September, 1971.

Power Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday gave unanimous approval to a suggestion that the Greater Vancouver Regional District be asked to petition to provincial government to allow the district to take over distribution and sale of electricity and natural gas in the district. Ald. Walter Hardwick said a regional distribution system would allow checks and balances to counter the "monolithic bureaucracy" that is B.C. Hydro.

Term Increased

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Court of Appeal has changed the sentence given to Patrick Jeffries for armed robbery of a Hudson's Bay store at Kitwanga, northeast of Terrace, to 12 years from five. The Crown had appealed the five-year sentence — handed down in Prince Rupert country court — as too light.

Slaying Charge Laid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A charge of non-capital murder was laid Tuesday against Mervin Brent Smith, 43, in the beating death of Freda Fowler, 43, whose body was found in a city suite Monday. An autopsy showed she probably had been dead since the previous Saturday.

Guess Backs Pesticide Ban

VANCOUVER (CP) — The educated guess, or "informed intuition," must be used by governments in fighting pesticide pollution, Donald Chant of Toronto, an official of the organization Pollution Probe, said Tuesday.

He told about 200 persons at the University of British Columbia that because it is close to impossible to gather conclusive scientific evidence about complex natural processes, the only alternative is the educated guess.

"Our informed intuition should say we cannot tolerate certain materials in our environment, or at most a low level. We should be able to make that decision from what is known," he said.

A Place for Patriotism —As Dr. Grant Saw It

The comments here some little while ago about the Soviet-Canada hockey series, notably the opinion that our people represented us badly as goodwill ambassadors, have come to the attention of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Hunter Grant, of our town, who went to Russia to see the games.

Some of Dr. Grant's points:

"We went there to root a tired, discouraged team out of the valley of defeat and home to victory. And we made it stick. At least Phil Esposito, who just might know something, thought the turning point of the whole business came at the end of the first heart-breaking game, when a tired, understandably demoralized team trudged off the ice and halted, heads raised in disbelief, to see massed fans on their feet, giving them a fiercely loyal ovation in defeat. . . ."

"In the three heart-stoppers that followed, it brought a large lump in the throat of a veteran puck-watcher to see weary, sagging men lifted again and again by the fearsome tribal war chants from the south end. This never was more apparent than in the last full clutch when a seemingly beaten outfit flashed back to do first the improbable and then the impossible. I was proud, not merely to be a Canadian, but to be in the company of the people in those end seats. . . .

"Alan Eagleson is a disgrace to Canada; he has no place in any sport or among decent citizens of any country. Parise's stick-raising was beyond pardon, even though the referee he threatened was rawly partisan and obviously had seized on the first flimsy excuse to penalize a Canadian. But Stapleton, White, the great Quebecois defence pair, the Espositos, Henderson and Ellis, Clarke, Cournoyer, Pete Mahovlich and others — these are thugs and hooligans? My dear man, there lies here an issue that far transcends the fact that they did what neither you nor I probably could do, even given their reflexes and their other physical talents. They fought back, on faraway foreign ice, to do what just about no one believed could be done. . . .

"As an unofficial consultant to the team surgeon, I spent some time at one particular practice and talked with a few of the players, none of whom I'd met before. I'd be happy to have any one of about 18 of them as a son-in-law. Further, I have good reason to know that their behavior off-ice qualified them as good ambassadors for Canada. One, whom I won't name, is a foul-mouthed animal, but he didn't play on Russian ice. Rumors were abroad in Moscow that a few steady performers were dead drunk in the early mornings. Some of these drink not at all. . . .

"Kicking, spearing and blind-side butt-ending, in my book, call for suspension or expulsion from organized hockey. Ragulin — at six-foot-two and 220 pounds the biggest man on the ice — not only had an educated trio of elbows, each equipped with hooks and knobs; he got in quite a bit of the nastiest kicking and spearing in my watching experience. Mihailov was worse.

"I think — and I sincerely hope you're man enough to do it loud, so to speak, in print — that you owe a handsome and unreserved apology to the hard core of young Canadians who gave us a tremendous display of talent and courage in a comeback in what was, after all, a phase of the Cold War. . . .

"You don't know great theatre when you see it. Olivier doing Hamlet? Quinn in Zorba the Greek? Kid stuff alongside the performance of that big Phil from the Soo. Early high comedy, later stern Greek stuff when he uncomplainingly took nine straight minutes for giving Ragulin, at last, what had been coming to him for a long time and, believe me, it was truly artistic. But the finale should escape no one who claims to enjoy theatre. Almost too tired to stand, fresh from scoring the tying goal and making an incredible passout to Henderson for the winner, the big fellow ended it all hounding a Russian behind his own net. Who could have written the script? . . .

"Finally — and here comes the nasty bit I'll probably be sorry I added — what species of Canadian are you? Until you produce proof to the contrary, you go down in my book as one of that unhappily large group that gets published and, as Bruce Hutchison has long said, seems to extract some sort of bizarre ecstasy out of denigration of Canada and Canadians. This explains in part, I haven't a shred of doubt, a very damaging Canadian inferiority complex. I haven't any use for chauvinism, but there is a place for a little quiet patriotism here and there."

Great Day for Pat and Mike and Pierre

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Their mother figured "they could learn more in one afternoon by seeing Trudeau, than they could in school."

So Pat and Mike were permitted to take Tuesday afternoon off classes and trundle down to the Royal Theatre to see "the politician."

"Yeah, I'm Liberal," said Pat, 11, who had managed to plunk himself down in the best seat—fourth row centre—in the full house.

His sidekick Mike, 10, was right beside.

"We had to wait an awfully long time though," Pat added, leaning back in his chair, arms folded as if commenting on the world situation.

"Definitely," piped in Mike, as the gala political happenings went on in the background. Popcorn machines were minus popcorn, but supplied with Liberal candidate bumper stickers and party organizers handed out placards to the theatregoers instead of peanuts.

The boys arrived at about 2 p.m. — the more enthusiastic fans had started the line-up at 11 a.m.

We managed to "sneak in a bit." A sly grin crept over Pat's face.

Mike, the more serious of the pair, expressed a concern about what exactly Mr. Trudeau was going to do about pollution.

"I'm interested, you know. I sort stuff for pollution, aluminum from papers and stuff."

Trudeau managed to keep the youngsters' interest throughout his speech. Not once did they yawn, there were no hecklers and some in the audience even found they could spare more attention to the prime minister's words if they closed their eyes.

Mike relaxed when Pierre promised to fight pollution

The boys' attention might have been in deference to their mother's views, however. Mrs. Ann Konopski, sitting right behind, described herself as an "avid Liberal" and "Trudeau fan."

Mike sat up a little straighter when the politician —who mentioned every level and possible cause of alienation in society (except politicians) and how the Liberal party would continue to cope — finally got around to pollution.

"We'll continue our fight against pollution," the P.M. promised.

Mike relaxed.

The boys said they found the experience exciting, but not too much out of the ordinary.

In their lives they've become used to a carnival atmosphere — theatres, lineups, and even the 15-piece Show You Care band, on hand for the festivities, failed to spark an exclamation.

Even Trudeaumania took a subdued form that mixed grey-haired gents, blue-rinsed women and a few youthful long-hairs together in a hand-shaking, but relatively quiet, crowd.

It was over about 5 p.m., and Pat and Mike filed out of the theatre a little relieved like the rest of the crowd. The politician had promised to do something about their concern.

Escaper Captured In Vancouver

A man who escaped from William Head minimum-security institution Sept. 17 was arrested by Vancouver city police and charged with possession of 225 capsules of heroin Tuesday.

Donald William Valouche, 39, was arrested in Vancouver apartment and charged with possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking.

Colwood RCMP said a charge of escaping lawful custody will most probably be waived to Vancouver provincial court where Valouche is to appear today.

Valouche was sentenced in Burnaby Oct. 25, 1967 to 10 years for possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking. He was due for release Dec. 16. 1975.

Valouche escaped from the prison with two other inmates, David Jack O'Brien, 28, and Neil Thompson, 24. Thompson is still at large.

Colwood RCMP said William Head escapees are returned to the federal B.C. Penitentiary if, and when, they are apprehended.

Saanich Post for Quebecer

By AB KENT

The city manager of Dollard des Ormeaux has been chosen to succeed John Tribe as municipal manager of Saanich at the end of January, 1973.

The appointment of W. M. Tremayne, 48, ends a search that began early last summer in which 32 applicants from across the country were considered for the municipality's top administrative post.

By last week when council's personnel committee had completed its last interviews, the field had been narrowed to seven, including two local applicants.

Tremayne will start at a salary of $24,000 and arrive the first few days of January in order to spend familiarization time with Tribe before his retirement Jan. 31.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tremayne is "an intense, innovative senior administrator with a full knowledge of all aspects of municipal government.

"He has worked well in leading an administrative team and had good relations with councils," Curtis said.

As city manager of Dollard des Ormeaux, a city of 30,000 on Ile Montreal, Tremayne has had experience working with municipal neighbors and Greater Montreal regional affairs, Curtis noted. Little adjustment will be required to deal with similar matters in the capital region, he thought.

Tremayne is bilingual, married with two children and a graduate in civil engineering from University of New Brunswick, 1945.

His experience ranges from Canadian Engineering Ltd., where he was a junior structural engineer, and municipal engineer for the city of Mount Royal, to self-employment in the field of residential and commercial construction, and engineering projects on commission by architects.

From 1963-65 Tremayne was a project engineer in Montreal for Canadian National Railways, and for the last seven years he has been in Dollard des Ormeaux, a community that has grown from about 500 persons in 12 years. This "astonishing growth" fits Tremayne for work in the burgeoning capital suburb of Saanich, Curtis said.

BARRETTS CHOOSE ESQUIMALT HOME

Premier Dave Barrett and his family will move into the home he's bought at 1178 Munro in Esquimalt in late January.

Barrett said Tuesday he will rent his home in Port Coquitlam. All of the family will move to Esquimalt, except for a son attending Simon Fraser University.

Asked to comment on reports that he paid $65,000 for the home, Barrett said he did not think this was of public interest.

Although there has been no official release on the premier's new address, residents of the area confirm that Barrett has bought the waterfront property.

Flour Prices Up and Going Higher

Increased Bread Costs 'Inevitable'

Millstream Flour Mills of Victoria has increased its flour prices 30 cents per 100 pound sack to counter increased wheat prices.

Manager William Metcalfe said additional flour price increases could be expected as additional hikes are anticipated in the wheat price.

Other British Columbia flour mills have either increased their prices a similar amount or will do shortly depending upon their supply of stored cheaper wheat, Metcalfe said.

In Vancouver, a spokesman for Robin Hood Flour Mills said his company had not increased prices so far this year but the prices now were under review.

Generally the flour industry had not yet raised prices although some increases seemed inevitable before year's end.

Metcalfe said flour mills had absorbed increased wheat prices that resulted from increases given to grain handlers earlier this year. But prices were rising to a level where mills had to increase their prices when they ran out of stored wheat purchased at lower prices.

Much of this flour is sold in 50 pound sacks and the whole sale price has gone to $4.55 from $4.40, he said.

He said it was important to ease prices up gradually as costs rise rather than holding the line too long and then submitting customers to huge increases.

Increases in the minimum wage will also add to costs of flour mills and might lead to price increases, he said.

Meanwhile John McDonald, manager of McDonald's Bakery, said increased flour costs would inevitably lead to higher bread prices.

No immediate increase is expected in McDonald's prices, he said, because flour prices to his bakery have not yet been increased.

His firm has held wholesale prices for 18 months to their present level of 29 cents for a one-pound loaf and 41 cents for a 1½ pound loaf.

He said increases in flour costs are anticipated this fall and, if the increase was substantial, bread prices would be increased.

Private Rink Plan For Saanich Study

A mainland company now building a four-rink arena complex to be run at a profit in Burnaby is interested in discussing a shortage of rink facilities in Greater Victoria.

Floyd Harris, sales manager of Columbia 4-Rinks Ltd. — formerly Floyd Harris Arenas Ltd. — said he will contact Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and is willing to come to Victoria at the invitation of municipal and sports officials.

Curtis has also expressed interest in the privately-run operation, which is scheduled to open in early January and already has all of its ice-time booked.

Saanich council last week committed itself to preparing information on construction of a second ice surface in the municipality for presentation to ratepayers as a borrowing bylaw as soon as possible.

The mayor and three other aldermen are opposed to further capital borrowing for recreation facilities in Saanich at this time in view of other priorities facing Saanich — among them road and drainage improvements.

Harris said community response to his company's plans was "fantastic," even before construction commenced. When word of the project became commonly known, most of the ice-time was already spoken for.

He said population is not as important a factor to consider as the level of community interest and participation in athletics.

"A single sheet of ice is not a good investment," he said. Economies of scale are possible with multiple ice facilities that permit the profit-making arena to offer competitive rates and still pay taxes and make money.

HEAVY MAIL FLOW CAUSES BACKLOGS

Heavier than usual mail volumes are causing some backlogs, a Victoria post office spokesman, Ken Stofer, said today.

He said Toronto, in particular, is experiencing "tremendous mailings" which amounted at one point to 200 carloads.

"Over the last month mails have appeared to be very heavy. Vancouver has had considerable amounts of mail. This is mostly third class mail. On Monday we still had some third class mail that came in on Friday."

Asked about reports of a work slowdown in connection with negotiations between postal unions and the government, Stofer said there is "nothing that anyone can say to the effect there is a slowdown. All our staff seem to be giving it all they've got."

Road Work Cuts Posed 'Too Early'

Reports that Victoria may delete several public works projects from its capital budget and reallocate the money for land acquisition were described as premature today by two city aldermen.

Ald. Percy Frampton said the suggestion was aired only briefly at Tuesday's meeting of council in committee by Mayor Peter Pollen, who indicated he would like it to be discussed at a future meeting.

Frampton said he doesn't know how the suggestion arose that council will probably "chop" several road-widening and extension projects in the five-year capital works budget, when the matter hasn't even been discussed.

In certain cases, he added, he would strongly oppose such a proposal — particularly if it meant abandoning the plan to eliminate the steep grade at the foot of Blanshard, or the proposed extension of Finlayson from Blanshard to Shelbourne.

Realigning the southern end of Blanshard is vital to the city's long-range plan of developing a southern ring road, Frampton said, and Finlayson should not be left as "a dead end."

Ald. Mike Young said if certain deferred items in the budget were deleted and the funds reallocated to other purposes it might free some $800,0000 for land acquisition, possibly including the Marathon Realty property at the Inner Harbor. But he stressed that the proposal is still tentative and has not been formally presented to council.

Citizenship: 'Bad With the Good'

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

A thin red carpet, chrome and plastic chairs and large modern lights in a small room hardly created the solemn, awe-inspired atmosphere one would expect at a court where new citizens adopt their country.

The Queen's portrait was there and so was the flag, the Canadian emblem and a real live red-coated Mountie, but the pomp and ceremony and intense emotion were missing.

Even without the trimmings the occasion in Citizenship court Tuesday afternoon was probably the most significant event in the lives of 30 Victorians.

The men and women, mostly in their 20s and 30s, represented 12 countries of origin and occupations ranging from engineer to housewife to monk.

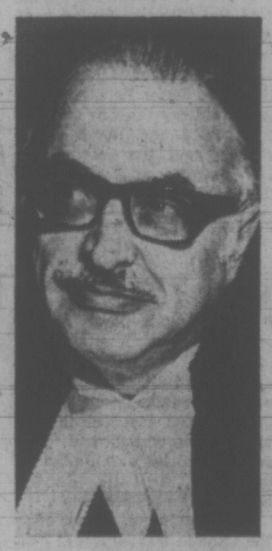
Together, each with a bible in hand, they recited their allegiance to the Queen and their promise to fulfil the responsibilities of Canadian citizenship.

"Adopting new citizenship is a bit like getting married," Judge Norman Oreck told them, "you have to take the good with the bad and make it stick."

The courtroom was crowded with friends, relatives and restless children as well as a group of students from Lansdowne Junior Secondary School who came "to watch the democratic process in action."

The ceremony was short. The new citizens sat quietly, rising only to swear their allegiance and accept their citizenship certificates.



ORECK
. . . like getting married

Most of the time was taken up with a welcoming speech by Judge Oreck.

The judge explained Canada's political and court systems and described her symbolic ties to Britain.

"Canada is one of the most democratic countries in the world," he told them.

"It is yours to improve and to change," Oreck said, "perhaps by protest but especially by the ballot."

(These new Canadians will have to wait three or four years before they get to cast that ballot however, since the closing date for the federal polling lists was Oct. 13.)

New citizens sworn in on Tuesday included:

Carl Evers, Mrs. Froukje Radersma, Mrs. Baukje Speller, Cornelis Stoop, Everardus van Adrichem and Judocus Van Bree, all originally from the Netherlands.

Mrs. Sui Chow, Keng Lo, Mrs. Lai Lum, Mrs. Siu Yee and Mrs. Mary Cheung, all from China.

Mrs. Audrey Van Eerden, Mrs. Ann Walker and Albert Lacrouts, all from the United States.

Johannes Huber and Mrs. Genovova Huber, Mrs. Christel Meseyton, Mrs. Anna Ossege, Mrs. Gerda Renner, Mrs. Monika Rovinelli and Mrs. Ilse Strasdin, from Germany.

Henri Cescutti and Jean Louis Giffon, of France.

Rodolfo Bianco (Italy), Mrs. Maria Cabecinha (Portugal), Georg Crha (Czechoslovakia), Mrs. Anna Pugh (Denmark), Mrs. Gertrude Smythe (Austria) and Ingvar Tonseth (Norway).

Bargaining Group Sworn In

The five-member commission which will inquire into civil service collective bargaining was sworn in today by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton.

Public hearings will be held in Prince George Nov. 20, Kamloops Nov. 22, Nelson Nov. 24, Victoria Nov. 29 and Vancouver Dec. 1.

Commission chairman R. D. Higgins, senior classification officer in the Civil Service Commission, said "with the deadline for our report being mid-December, our schedule is tight. But we have endeavored to time public hearings in such a fashion that all interested parties will be able to appear before us."

Other commission members are John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union; Norman Richards, BCGEU president; Prof. Norman Ruff of the University of Victoria; and Lorne Tomalty, personnel officer in the mental health branch.

Jackie Robinson: He Cut Through Racial Barriers

A man who has to be admired for his contribution, not only to sport, but for the cause of racial inequality, died Tuesday. Jackie Robinson, 58, won't soon be forgotten.

Robinson was the first Negro to play professional baseball in the majors, and he opened the flood gates for a rash of Negro stars when he survived that first year with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

That was in 1947, and now just 25 years later, Negro players not only dot the starting lineups of every major league team, they completely dominate the game in many departments.

It may have happened regardless, but in 1946 Robinson was the guinea pig who was given the job of seeing if it would work. He was the man Branch Rickey of the Dodgers picked to make the incursion into a white man's sport. If he succeeded he would break down the race barriers, not only for baseball, but for all professional sport. Before then, Negro stars were confined to their Negro leagues, and to exhibition games with whitey and major league all-stars. In those games, they had even beaten the best in the majors. But still, no Negro had ever donned a uniform in the majors.

Chances are that Robinson never had an idea that when he was a young black man, just out of the army, and playing with the Kansas City Monarchs, that he would be the first black man to play in the majors. And chances are too, that, in the beginning, he only half believed his opportunity was real. Sociological change is not that simple.

He 'Stored Up All That Stuff'

Still, he was it, and Rickey, often described as a bull-headed man, but with tremendous foresight, picked Montreal as the place to put his thoughts into action. After all, perhaps Canada would be less biased, or less prejudiced, agains a Negro.

Jackie was told he would have to show more than others with comparable ability. Second best just wouldn't be good enough. He would also have to exercise terrific restraint. Baseball players, then, and even now, are without peers in the bad-mouth department. For a Negro, it would be vicious. And Jackie would have to take it all. He did, and as he once said:

"Mr. Rickey, I have two cheeks."

A reference to the Bible, perhaps, but for Jackie, it was mandatory that he "store up all that stuff," as he said later. Because it was vile, and endless.

And his troubles started early. When Montreal had their spring training camp in Florida, some teams said they wouldn't play if the Royals used their "nigger." The Royals replied: if Robinson didn't play, they wouldn't either. They had helped Jackie win the first round.

The manager of the Royals then was Clay Hopper, who doubled as a Mississippi cotton broker. He knew what the word "nigger" meant. The blacks picked his cotton for next to nothing, and often were treated like nothing on earth. Still, Hopper was more than fair.

Of Robinson, he once said to Rickey: "He can't be human, and take the stuff he's been taking."

But Robinson took it through the first season. He survived the foul barbs and innuendos, and finished not only as the Royals' leading batter, but also their top fielder. He had received a $3,500 bonus to sign, and the princely sum of $600 a month to play. It wasn't enough.

Later, He Was Aggressive One

The next year, it was Brooklyn and the Dodgers, and if the barbs were bad in the minors, they could be almost unbearable in the majors. They were.

"Even I couldn't stomach some of them," Rickey once said. But Jackie did. Because one moment of wavering, one sign of weakness, one false step, and his race would be stamped: failure.

Later, as other negroes joined the big leagues—Larry Doby was the first at Cleveland, and Roy Campanella came to join Robinson at Brooklyn—Jackie became more militant, even aggressive.

He now had a few words for his tormentors. Besides, he could talk back on even terms, or better, with the players. He won the NL batting title, was once named "most valuable," and helped the Dodgers to six world series. He had a right to talk.

Sure, he changed in later years. Instead of the quiet one who had said little at the start, he now was the champion of his race, a clubhouse lawyer, an agitator, and people listened.

Jackie had been well taught, and he remembered.

Now the negro, especially, should remember him. They are abundant in all sport. What is it?—42 per cent in the majors; 68 per cent of all starters in pro basketball; and 38 per cent in pro football with 64 per cent of the running backs. Those are some recent figures, and the percentages may be even higher now, in favor of the black man.

Mostly, with thanks to Jackie, because many can recall when it couldn't happen.

Handlers 'Restrain' Jumping Ali

ALI'S CLOWNING ROUTINE UPSET BY NERVOUS FAN

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A boxing fan nearly got into as much action as the fighters Tuesday night when Muhammad Ali bounded into the audience after clowning through four exhibition bouts.

Ali apparently was only joking when he jumped into the crowd, but an unidentified spectator took him seriously and tried to hit him.

Security guards and ringside s kept them apart.

Another man slapped at Ali after he climbed back to the ring and later tried unsuccessfully to get into his dressing room.

It was the end of a clowning act for Ali, who boxed four Texas heavyweights effortlessly.

He fell down at one point, obviously on purpose, during a three-rounder with Terry Daniels of Dallas.

Ali pretended he was in a frenzy when Daniels was introduced as the man who recently fought Joe Frazier, who won the crown from Ali. He rolled his eyes and made as if he were ready to take on Daniels before the bell rang.

Later, when he fell down, he bounced back up immediately to continue his tongue-in-cheek performance.

Ali also fought Ronnie Wright, a Dallas fighter, Sonny Moore also of Dallas, and Elmo Henderson of Fort Worth, Tex.

No Surprise—Sparky Top National Skipper

NEW YORK (AP) — George (Sparky) Anderson, molder of the Cincinnati Reds, today was named Manager of the Year in the National League.

Anderson's Reds won their second pennant in three seasons and he beat Pittsburgh skipper Bill Virdon in an Associated Press poll of sports writers and broadcasters for the Manager-of-the-Year award.

The margin was 271 to 179 for Anderson, in balloting conducted before the National League playoffs and World Series. Montreal's Gene Mauch was a distant third with seven votes.

Cincinnati lost in seven games to Oakland Athletics in the World Series that ended Sunday. Anderson's team lost the 1970 series to Baltimore Orioles 4-1.

The Reds won the Western Division of the National League by 10½ games this season, while Virdon's Pirates breezed by 11 games in the East. The, Cincinnati beat the Pirates 3-2 in the playoff for the pennant.

"It feels great although I know awards are won because the team did well," said the 38-year-old Anderson, who once managed Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League.

"I really wanted this award. Tell everybody I appreciate it."

The former second baseman, who spent 10 of his 11 playing years in the minor leagues, was sitting in his office at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium when he heard the news.

Anderson, a native of Bridgewater, S.D., broke into baseball as an infielder with Santa Barbara of the California League in 1953. He played in the big majors only in 1959 with Philadelphia Phillies.

Anderson hit .218 with the Phils and earned a trip back to the minors where he played four seasons at Toronto before turning to managing with the Mpale Leafs in 1964.

Delighted Charlie O Hikes Williams' Pay

OAKLAND (AP) — Manager Dick Williams of the World Series champion Oakland Athletics has received his third raise in three months from Charlie O. Finley, owner of the American League baseball club.

Finley announced the pay raise at a victory party, saying: "For taking us to the World Series — and Dick doesn't even know this — he has received another increase in salary."

When Williams was signed to a second two-year contract Aug. 12, it was at a "substantial increase" in salary, and after the Athletics won the pennant Finley gave another raise to the only manager he's ever kept through two consecutive seasons.

No figures were mentioned, but one published report said the latest raise boosted Williams to about $80,000 a year.

Williams had an announcement of his own later — that he is retaining all his coaches for next season: Irv Noren, Jerry Adair, Vern Hoscheit and Wes Stock. Stock is taking the place of retiring pitching coach Bill Posedel.

Finley said also that he is restoring a five-per-cent cut pitcher Ken Holtzman took when he was acquired from Chicago Cubs.

Vernon Trips Kelowna

VERNON (CP) — Vernon Essos picked up their fourth victory in 10 starts Tuesday as they defeated Kelowna Buckaroos 7-5 in a British Columbia Junior Hockey League game before about 300 fans.

Dan Kuntz, Bob Burgoyne and Tim Sanche each scored two goals for Vernon. Greg Howe added a single. Murray Hanson, Gordon Neilson, Ken Loehndorn, Ken Weninger and Brad Owens scored for Kelowna.

Goalie Mike Smithson of Vernon made 22 stops and Dan Teeter stopped 27 drives in the Kelowna net.

Berger Reported Ready to Sell Als

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference will be sold this week by owner Sam Berger.

It says that last week there were "vague rumors" of a proposed sale, but this week the reports are serious.

Berger said in a telephone interview with La Presse from New York he had not been approached by any group.

"However, I remain open to any serious proposal," he said. "Even if it's not my intention to sell the Alouettes at the moment, I will examine attentively any purchase offer."

Berger purchased the Canadian Football League franchise for a reported $1.2 million in December, 1969.

La Presse indicates that a person already involved in professional basketball and hockey will purchase the club.

Robert E. Schmertz, a New York millionaire, is one man who could fill these qualifications and who has already expressed an interest in the CFL. Schmertz is involved in the ownership of Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and New England Whalers of the new World Hockey Association.

Schmertz made a strong bid to convince the CFL to expand to New York at the league's last annual meeting. The CFL declined.

The Alouettes have been drawing meagre crowds to the 26,000-seat Molson Stadium this season. They have drawn between a low of 10,000 and a high of 18,388 for their seven regular-season games.

Berger moved the club from the 33,000-seat Autostade at the start of this season.

Penguins Break Canuck Bubble

(Times News Service

Vancouver Canuck's bubble, inflated greatly by Sunday's 5-4 National Hockey League triumph over Boston Bruins, broke abruptly Tuesday.

Pittsburgh Penguins, aided by a loose Vancouver defence, skated to a 4-0 shutout before 15,570 fans at the Pacific Coliseum.

The Penguins jumped on three defensive errors to take a 3-0 lead into the final period and then picked up a brilliant goal by Ken Schinkel to grab the victory and a share of first place with Chicago Black Hawks in the NHL's Western Division.

Bryan Hextall, Duane Rupp and Syl Apps all capitalized on Vancouver miscues and rookie netminder Denis Herron played flawlessly in the Pittsburgh Nets to record his second shutout of the season.

If coach Scotty Bowman appeared worried Tuesday night after his Montreal Canadiens had played two periods against New York Islanders, he had every reason to be.

The Canadiens were down 2-1 to the Islanders—one of the two new teams in the National Hockey League this season—going into the third period. But three quick goals in the first five minutes of the period gave them a 4-3 victory.

"We probably took them a little lightly," Bowman said of his Canadiens, who remain unbeaten in the NHL, "and just because they are an expansion team.

"I was concerned with the score 2-1. I'm always concerned when we play an expansion team."

THREE FOR LEMAIRE

Jacques Lemaire scored three goals for the Canadiens, including two of the final three, to give the Canadiens the narrow win.

In other games Minnesota North Stars nipped St. Louis Blues 2-1 and California Golden Seals blanked Los Angeles Kings 5-0.

Lemaire's second goal of the game at 1:13 of the final period started the Canadiens' comeback. Sixteen seconds later Yvan Cournoyer scored to put Montreal ahead 3-2. Lemaire got his third goal of the game at 4:54 to make the score 4-2 but Germaine Gagnon scored at 9:39 to narrow the lead to 4-3.

Phil Goyette, the Islanders' coach, said the game had to be considered a victory of sorts because it was a one-goal decision.

PLAYED BETTER

"We are playing better all the time and we are learning," said Goyette, who once played with the Canadiens.

The Canadiens' victory was their fifth in eight games. They have tied three. The Islanders's loss was their fourth straight. They also have a win.

The North Stars used their veterans to stop the Blues in St. Louis. Bobby Nevin and Dean Prentice provided the scoring while goalie Gump Worsley stopped 28 shots en route to the victory.

Nevin's goal was the winner at 11:44 of the third period. A rebound hit his skate and rolled behind St. Louis goalie Wayne Stephenson. Prentice's goal at 12:37 in the first period was unassisted.

St. Louis scored in the second period when Jack Egers scored from close in.

Rogatien Vachon recorded his 14th career shutout but the Los Angeles goalie needed only 18 saves to do it. The Kings scored two goals in the first period when Ralph Backstrom and Juha Widing beat Seals' goalie Gilles Meloche.

Bob Berry scored his eighth goal and fifth power-play goal of the season early in the second period when he deflected a shot over Meloche's shoulder. Serge Bernier made it 4-0 midway through the second period and Butch Gorin rounded out the scoring for Los Angeles at 7:43 in the finial period.

BOBROV CRITICIZES CANADIAN CONDUCT

MOSCOW (UPI) — Vsevolod Bobrov, head coach of the Russian national ice hockey team, said Tuesday his squad would not play the Canadian professionals again as long as the pros continued to show "the worst side" of hockey.

In a signed article in Trud, the trade union newspaper, Bobrov said "The conduct of our rivals in Moscow and also on board the plane from Moscow (I was an unwilling witness) was improper."

The Canadians, who won the eight game home and home September series 4-3-1, tried to intimidate the Russians and "seriously injured" some, "but their psychological attack failed," the coach said.

"We are ready to play with them the real and noble hockey that requires courage but the USSR national is not in the future going to meet players which show the worst side of professional hockey, who do not respect either the rival or the spectator," Bobrov said.

But both sides learned from the series, he said.

"They decided to adopt our program of comprehensive physical training," he said, adding "we also learned something from the Canadians.

"They skate splendidly and rough check very well. It is well to learn from the Canadians their skill, to play up to the last second."

Blades Rout Westminster

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon Blades scored seven goals in the third period in romping to a 13-1 victory over New Westminster Bruins in the Western Canada Hockey League Tuesday before 2,138 fans.

It was the Blades' fourth win in six games and moved them into a tie for second place in the league's Eastern Division.

The line of Bob Bourne, Byron Jackson and Bill Laing paced the one-sided Blade victory, accumulating a total of 15 points. Bourne led the way with six points, including two goals. Jackson had four points with three goals and one assist, and Laing had five points, including one goal.

Seven other Blades got one goal apiece.

Emile Demoissac scored for the Bruins, who trailed 3-1 after the first period and 6-1 after the second.

Brian Holderness made only 16 saves in the Saskatoon nets, while Terry Richardson stopped 24 shots in the first two periods for the Bruins, and Kelvin Erickson made 15 saves in the third.

New Westminster was assessed nine of the 15 minor penalties.

Flyers Reclaim Junior 'B' Lead

Fuller Lake Flyers struck for three late goals, including one on a penalty shot, to defeat Racquet Club Kings 6-3 Tuesday night and regain first place in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League at Juan de Fuca Arena.

In another game, Saanich Braves outshot Lake Cowichan 38-12 while picking up a 7-5 victory.

Doug Clark connected on the penalty shot while Lee Clarkson and Mike Rogerson notched the other tallies within a span of five minutes late in the third period. Peter Rogerson, Paul Livingstone and Des Shearing scored the earlier goals for Flyers.

Kings' marksmen were Bryan Smelser, Bruce Brekke and Bob Boyd.

Flyers regained the lead from Juan de Fuca Gulls, who moved to the top with a 7-4 win over Esquimalt A and W on Monday.

Brad Addison led Braves with two goals while singles were counted by Tom Davies, Ken McLaren. Brent Patterson, Yvon Clavett and Dwight Crockett.

Mark Coulombe, Jim Woodside, Don Peterson, Fred Swain and Dave Slobodan scored for Cowichan.

The two teams were tied 4-4 going into the third period.

Sonny Wade Through For Season

MONTREAL (CP) — Quarterback Sonny Wade of Montreal Alouettes remained in hospital Monday after X-rays showed he broke a small bone in his neck in Sunday's 17-7 loss to Ottawa Rough Riders here.

With two plays left in the Eastern Football Conference game, Wade decided to run the ball towards the sideline. As Ottawa tackler Dick Adams approached, Wade put his head down and the pair met in a head-on collision.

X-rays taken late Sunday night showed Wade had broken a small bone in the seventh cervical vertebrae. Further tests Monday indicated he is likely through for the season.

Multi-Nation Meet Slated for City

It's going to be a really big show.

Ron Bowker, president of Invictus, announced Tuesday that Victoria will play host to a multi-nation track and field meet early next July.

The event, which will likely be held over two days during the early part of the month, has already attracted five national teams — Australia, Japan, New Zealand, United States and Canada.

All five countries will be competing in the second Pacific Conference Games in Toronto the weekend before and have agreed to send full-strength contingents to the Victoria meet in Centennial Stadium.

Bowker added that there is a move afoot to get China's national team involved in both the conference and the meet here.

Other feelers are out to attract entries from Russia, Mexico and South America, which may all be added before the next Conference Games in 1977.

Victoria got the nod ahead of Vancouver to hold the meet because of the readily-available facilities and a competent group to run it.

But, cautioned Bowker, it could very well turn out to be the last meet of this calibre in Victoria for some time.

"If our facilities aren't upgraded, the way we hope they'll be upgraded, it could be a loss for a lot of people."

It has been estimated that the revenue generated by the meet in Victoria could fall in the $15,000 to $20,000 range.

Swangard Stadium in Burnaby is currently being upgraded from a soccer facility to the top track and field setup in British Columbia — primarily for the Canada Summer Games next year.

But any major meets after the Canada Games would likely go to Swangard.

In an effort to keep the Victoria meet low-key, Bowker explained that officials aren't even going to keep a list of points for each country.

"People get so hung up on how many medals each country gets — just look at the Olympics — and the meet is ruined," said Bowker.

Individual performance will be stressed and teachers and top local school athletes will be invited to attend the meet to learn something that could prove lasting.

Island's Cougars Under Scrutiny

stewart lang

Did everyone notice, when the new regulations came out, that the Northwest Bay region is closed to cougar hunting?

Last week, acting on a tip from regional fish and wildlife branch supervisor Charlie Lyons, we found out why.

Percy and Penny Dewar of Extension, a former coal-mining community near Nanaimo, are conducting a study of cougars in the Northwest Bay claim of MacMillan-Bloedel — hence the lack of an open season in that particular spot.

The study, which began this spring, consists mainly of tagging the cougars at present. But, as Penny explained, they eventually plan to put radio collars on the animals they capture.

One of these "tags," supplied by the fish and wildlife branch and designed mainly for larger animals such as elk, was unsuccessfully put on a cougar this spring — before they set up camp near Blackjack Lake for the summer.

Apparently the battery was faulty.

They hope that a less bulky radio collar, such as one currecently being used for cougars in northern Arizona, might be the answer.

But what got them started on this project?

Percy grew into it, having hunted cougars since the age of 14. Penny, who graduated from the University of Victoria two years ago, decided he "wanted to do something on cougars."

"I wanted to study behavior and I like cats — and cougars are cats," she quipped.

Penny embarked on what could easily turn out to be a life-long study by raising a couple of cougar kittens last year but changed over to the tagging project after meeting Percy near Christmas.

The couple use six Bluetick hounds — two 10-year-olds, two nine-year-olds and a pair of gangling pups. It is these dogs that spell the difference between success and defeat.

Sometimes "aided" by Penny's pet dog Yaku, the four older hounds tree the cougar, which is then tranquillized with a gas-powered dart gun.

In theory the method sounds great, but in actual practice it has a few flaws. Out of 11 "treed" cougars, they have only managed to tag two.

The large cats seem to have an aversion for staying in the tree after a human arrives on the scene.

While hunting cougars, the animal is killed right away. But before tagging, the dogs have to be tied up so they don't chase the cat once the effects of the drug wear off and Percy then has to get into position to "shoot" the dart into a meaty part of the animal.

Because of dense foliage and short (60 feet) range of the pistol-sized dart gun, this means he sometimes has to climb an adjoining tree.

All of which takes time.

And nine cougars apparently didn't like waiting around while all this activity was going on.

The dart itself is interesting. A minute explosive cap detonates on impact, driving the drug out of a chamber and into the animal.

Once the cougar is "out," two plastic tags of different colors can be attached — one on each ear.

"Originally we just wanted to determine the size of the population. Nobody really knows how many cougars there are in British Columbia," said Penny.

"We're also trying to determine as much about behavior as possible."

Since there have been quite a few sightings of cougars this year, we asked Penny about the possible cause.

"Percy has a theory about cougars coming in around people. He said it almost invariably happens in hot weather."

Percy explained that the best spots for finding and tagging cougars are in areas covered with fairly high trees. Ridges or swamps are ideal but slash and low second-growth timber can prove to be hazardous for the dogs.

"It's not safe. It's quite dangerous really," said Percy. "The cougar that might want to go up a tree just doesn't have a chance."

It might then turn on the dogs.

Swamps are ideal in another way too. "They've got it made if they can find a lot of beaver — especially for raising young ones," he explained. "We found they spent a lot of time in swamps where there were beaver," Penny chipped in.

"They're great travellers. I guess they're born travellers," Percy said. He also explained that, despite an abundant supply of food, a male cat may wander off on a whim. But they always return to their "home" territory.

What next?

Percy and Penny plan to stay in the area for the winter and continue working on the study.

"It's nice. We're looking forward to being snowed-in there," she said.

And you know? They just might have the right idea.

WEARING DAZED EXPRESSION after being tranquillized is first cougar tagged by Percy and Penny Dewar last spring. Couple is conducting population and behavior studies on large cats near Northwest Bay on Vancouver Island.

Kirkham Wins Fourth Straight

Richard Kirkham of Oak Bay seems to be running away with the whole show in the Victoria Senior High School Cross Country League.

Kirkham won his fourth straight race Monday, collecting the maximum of 40 points at the halfway point of the schedule. Fraser Syme of Mt. Douglas and Gordie Evans of Belmont share second spot with 15 points each.

Clocking the 4.4-mile course in 24 minutes, 26 seconds, Kirkham finished two minutes ahead of runner-up Evans and Mike Long of Mt. Douglas, who moved up to fourth place in the individual standings.

Jill MacLeod of Claremont won the 2.4-mile girls' race in 14:47. Bev Cox of Victoria finished second and Michelle Brownsey of Claremont placed third.

Miss MacLeod tops individual girl's standings with 30 points after winning three of the four races. Debbie Reid of Mt. Douglas is second with 16 points while Kathy Sapsford and Kathy Bertoia share third spot with 14 points each.

Development Plan Endorsed

TORONTO (CP) — A joint meeting of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Hockey Canada here during the weekend endorsed a major hockey development program costing upwards of $500,000.

Gordon Juckes, CAHA secretary-manager, said the plan envisages a variety of training and development aides and materials that will reach "several hundred thousand boys playing hockey in Canada."

Juckes said the initiative for the weekend meeting came from the minor council of the CAHA at its annual meeting and the joint committee of both the CAHA and Hockey Canada agreed at the meeting here on the preparation of the program.

MATERIAL AVAILABLE

Hockey Canada, he said, would raise the money and provide materials such as films and books and undertake a research program designed by a joint technical committee.

The CAHA, for its part, would get the material to players and coaches in almost every community in the country, using coaching seminars, team and individual teaching methods.

These, Juckes observed, would be arranged through the CAHA's massive base of volunteers.

"In effect," he continued, "we are trying to upgrade the training methods of coaches and players based on their individual skills."

Among those attending were T. B. McCormick of Thunder Bay, Ont., chairman of the CAHA's minor council, and Charles Hay of Hockey Canada.

SERIES DISCUSSED

Following the meeting, CAHA members of the development committee met with representatives of Team Canada to review the recent Russia-Canada hockey series.

"We just discussed the series and agreed to meet Nov. 11 and 12 to go into the whole sphere of Canada's participation in international competition," said Juckes.

Team Canada was represented by Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the NHL Players' Association, Al Scott, Douglas Fisher and Hay.

Hey Mom! Your boy or girl could win a C.C.M. high-rise bicycle in The Campbell Vegetable Hunt.

Campbell is giving away 500 Mustang and 500 Cheetah bicycles.

Your child could be riding down the street on his very own brand new bicycle! Think how proud he would be. And now you can help him win his bicycle.

Campbell is giving away 1,000 C.C.M. high-risers – lime green Mustangs for the boys, blue Cheetahs for the girls. These bicycles have 20" wheels. They sport rugged knobby rear tires, adjustable black Mustang saddles and high back bars. All the things your youngster would love on a bicycle!

Be sure your youngster enters The Campbell Vegetable Hunt today. It's fun! Exciting! And he can learn his vegetables from The Campbell Vegetable Farm.

THE CAMPBELL VEGETABLE HUNT OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM

It's so easy! Just colour all the vegetables on The Campbell Vegetable Farm. Colour them the same colour as the clues below. All the vegetables in The Campbell Vegetable Farm go into every can of Campbell's M'm! M'm! Good Vegetable Soup. Happy Hunting!

RULES OF THE CAMPBELL VEGETABLE HUNT CONTEST

1. Colour the picture, using the correct colours for each vegetable you can find in the picture. Fill out the entry form and send two Campbell's Vegetable Soup labels (or facsimiles - hand drawn, not mechanically reproduced) with the coloured picture of the Campbell Vegetable Farm to:

   The Campbell Vegetable Hunt,
   P.O. Box 8189,
   Toronto 1, Ontario.

2. Contest is open to residents of Canada, under 14 years of age, except employees and their immediate families, of Campbell Soup Company Ltd, its advertising agencies and the contest judging organization. Enter as often as you wish, but mail each entry in a separate envelope. Only one prize per family will be awarded. Please remember to indicate if you would like to win a girl's or boy's bike.

3. PRIZES: 1,000 prizes, 500 each of C.C.M. Cheetah (Girls) and Mustang (Boys) high-rise bicycles will be awarded.

4. To be eligible, entries must be postmarked by midnight, November 30, 1972 and be received no later than midnight, December 6, 1972.

5. Selections will be made at random from among entries received. Selected entrants, (or their parent or guardian) must first correctly answer a time-limited skill-testing question before being declared a winner. (The Campbell Vegetable Hunt Contest is for fun! In fairness to children of all ages, all entries are eligible to be selected regardless of the quality of the colouring.)

6. All entries become the property of Campbell Soup Company Ltd, which reserves the right to publish winners' names and addresses. All decisions of the independent contest judging organization are final. All prizes must be accepted as awarded; no substitutions will be made. The contest is subject to Federal and Provincial laws.

Sanderson Keeping Word

Times News Services

Derek Sanderson injected a bit of color into professional hockey when he was with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League and it was expected he would do the same with Philadelphia Blazers of the new World Hockey Association.

So far, he has not disappointed the fans.

The controversial centre, who jumped the Bruins this year to join the Blazers, picked up two 10-minute misconduct penalties and a game misconduct Tuesday night as the Blazers were beaten 5-3 by Winnipeg Jets. It was Philadelphia's sixth loss in six games.

In other games, Quebec Les Nordiques defeated Houston Aeros 8-3, Alberta Oilers and Chicago Cougars played to a 3-3 tie and New England Whalers edged Cleveland Crusaders 3-2.

Sanderson, one of the best checkers in the NHL, complained earlier Tuesday that he was being checked repeatedly in the WHA.

"Guys I've never heard of are running around like angry tigers trying to check me," he said. "They don't respect a guy anymore."

GAVE UP LEAD

Despite the close checking he says he is receiving, Sanderson still managed to score a goal Tuesday night—the first goal in the game—but it was not enough to spark his team.

Although the Blazers were leading 3-2 in the final period, persistent checking and skating paid off for the Jets and Wally Boyer tied the score at the 4:15 mark. Then Norm Beaudin scored two goals, the last at 18:41, to stop the Blazers.

It was Beaudin's goal that roused not only Sanderson, but John McKenzie, the playing coach and a teammate with Sanderson on the Boston team. McKenzie, sidelined with a broken jaw, threw towels on to the ice and was given a bench penalty, while Sanderson argued until he received a 10-minute misconduct and a game misconduct. It was his second misconduct of the game.

Reynald Leclerc and Michel Parizeau paced Les Nordiques with two goals in their win over the Aeros before 6,245 fans at Quebec City. It was the fourth win against two losses for the Quebec team.

The Cougars rallied before 2,830 fans at Edmonton to tie the Oilers who had taken a 3-1 lead on two goals by Brian Carlin and one by Jim Harrison. But Brian Glenwright and Jan Popell scored three minutes apart to force sudden-death overtime.

In the overtime period, both clubs had opportunities to score but netminders Jack Norris of the Oilers and Jim McLeod of Chicago held off all attackers.

At Cleveland, John French's goal on a rebound at 5:27 of the overtime period gave New England its win over the Crusaders. French also put the Whalers ahead in the second period when a shot by defenceman Ted Green glanced off his stick and rolled past Cleveland goalie Gerry Cheevers.

Here's Your Big Chance For 900-Pound Metal Tiger

DETROIT (UPI) — Sculptor Donald Thibodeaux thought he had a tiger by the tail but wound up instead with 900 pounds of metal nobody seems to want...

Thibodeaux created a statue of a tiger of steel, copper, zinc, bronze, magnesium and other metals and erected it outside Tiger Stadium at a time when pennant fever was at a high pitch in Detroit...

Its value as a mascot has gone down considerably since Detroit Tigers lost their World Series tickets to Oakland A's and pro football took over at the stadium...

Now Thibodeaux can't get rid of the statue. He wasn't even able to unload it on the Tigers.

One of the reasons he's had difficulty selling the work was the asking price —$175,000. Now he's down to a "rock bottom" $130,000 and still nobody's biting.

Thibodeaux had hoped John Fetzer, owner of the Tigers and the stadium, would buy the creation, which he said took him four years to finish. But he concluded "Fetzer is real tight with a buck."

He said he hopes a public campaign can be launched to raise $130,000.

Meanwhile, the artist is leaving the tiger outside the stadium. At least there, he said, it will be appreciated by football fans, whom he described as "one-beer drinks."

During the final days of the baseball season, Thibodeaux hired uniformed guards at $96 a day to protect the tiger from frustrated fans. Now that his funds are depleted, he said he goes there every night to make sure the statue is all right.

The sculptor's labor, however, has not been entirely without profit. Thibodeaux was cited for civic-mindedness by the Wayne County board of commissioners.

Rugby Divisions Make Changes

Victoria Rugby Union officials announced Tuesday that two wins over Saanich Velox, a club that recently dropped back into the second division from the first because of a player shortage, will be struck from the records.

Affected were a 20-0 shutout by Oak Bay Wanderers and a 23-3 win by University of Victoria Norsemen.

The Union decision dropped Oak Bay out of second place and into a three-way tie for third with Cowichan and UVic Vikings while leaving Norsemen winless in the basement.

The Union also announced that the Oct. 14 first-division match between Oak Bay and Cowichan, not played because of a Cowichan player shortage, has been rescheduled for later in the season.

Camosun College has dropped out of the second division and Royal Roads, though remaining in the second, has withdrawn from the third division. All scheduled matches against these clubs have been cancelled.

Tory Claims 'Guts' On Inflation Issue

DUNCAN — The Conservative party is the only party "that has the guts to say we will bring in wage and price controls if necessary," conservative candidate George Macpherson told more than 100 Cowichan residents Tuesday evening.

Macpherson, along with four other candidates contending for the Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands seat in the Oct. 30 federal election was speaking at the Chamber of Commerce sponsored all-candidate meeting in Duncan.

Macpherson said his party is the only one that can solve inflation and unemployment because it is neither tied to the labor movement or big business.

Macpherson said he would like to see the department of manpower streamlined so it is now such a "ho-hum" organization but one that attempts to match employees and employers.

Liberal candidate Bill Matthews said his main campaign platform is to stand on the record of the current government whose "action policies" he feels "have given us Canadians the best living conditions in the free world.

"It seems almost a fetish with us Canadians to run down and disown what to very many others would gladly have."

Matthews feels that in order to create employment "we should encourage the four-day week."

He claims this is the best answer to unemployment because it will give others the chance to work and earn a living while other employees enjoy three days off work.

Matthews said that, in order to speed up the first unemployment payment after proof of qualifications and the waiting period first payment should be made at the local office.

With the single man receiving $150 and the married $200, it would help tide them over until mail cheques commence, he said.

Matthews said his suggestion has been received favorably by Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey.

If a large number of people are cheating on unemployment insurance, incumbent NDP candidate T. C. Douglas, feels this is "not only a reflection on the people but also on the government because the act is very specific."

Douglas said that if there are people drawing money who could work and have refused jobs then it is because of "incompetence."

Douglas told the audience that he does not believe in many changes in the new unemployment insurance act because there are thousands of people entitled to the benefit who can't get it.

Extra money is being paid by the taxpayer of the country into the UIC fund because "the Trudeau government has failed to cope with the unemployment problem," he added.

Social Credit candidate Stockwell Day said he favored capital punishment being reinstated for such crimes as assassination, perversion, murders and police slayings.

Day feels that Canada should take immediate jurisdiction over the continental shelf to 1,000 fathoms.

"Those fish belong to Canada," he said. "Salmon licence funds should be used for hatcheries and stream rehabilitation."

Independent Ken Hasanen claimed that the single issue in his campaign is Vancouver Island.

"We do not have the authority or capacity to make decisions in our own right," he said.

Hasanen feels that Island residents should have more say about what goes on on the Island.

"We should seriously consider instituting a study of Vancouver Island's economics, atmosphere, resources and people."

Nitinat Fishing Extended

The massive commercial fishing operation on Nitinat Lake on the west coast of Vancouver Island which was to end tonight has been extended by the federal fisheries department until further notice.

The ban on commercial fishing at the lake, in effect for more than 10 years, was to crop the unusually large schools of chum salmon in the area.

The lake is crammed with boats, including 80 seiners and 95 gillnetters.

One of the fishing companies involved — Canadian Fishing Company — is making history by trucking the catches from the lake to Cowichan Bay. From there the fish is being shipped by packers to the company's cannery in Vancouver harbor.

Some of the other companies involved are B.C. Packers, Queen Charlotte Fisheries and Francis Millerd. They and others are taking the catches through the "gap" that connects the lake with the Pacific Ocean.

From visual observations, fisheries officials estimate that there were between 500,000 and 725,000 fish in the lake before the fishing began Sunday.

Dick Crouter, manager of fishing operations in the area for the federal fisheries, says 60,000 fish have already spawned in the Nitinat River, which feeds the lake. It can hold about 150,000 spawners.

'Cracker-Box' Plans Opposed

LONG BEACH — The Alberni-Clayoquot Regional District will ask the provincial government to approve a zoning bylaw to save the approaches to Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach from "cracker -box' development.

Tofino Mayor Hugo Petersen said the board will discuss the bylaw with Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer near the end of the month.

"We are confident the new government will approve the bylaw," he said. "We want to preserve our environment. We don't want haphazard type of development or ribbon development on land situated outside the boundaries of the village."

The Social Credit government had refused to approve the bylaw.

The land lying between the park boundary and the Tofino-Ucluelet boundaries is owned by the Crown, private individuals and logging companies.

The matter reached a head when logging companies announced last spring they planned to subdivide their tree farms.

Ucluelet Mayor William Russell said he hoped logging companies would not be able to subdivide their tree farms.

"This is a beautiful area," he said. "We don't want a Coney Island type of development around here. We don't want to be faced with paying for problems arising from undesirable development.

CLIP AND TRY THIS DELICIOUS ROGERS' RECIPE

Hallowe'en Treat Taffy Apples

1 dozen eating apples
½ cup Rogers Golden syrup
2 cups granulated sugar
¾ cup water
Pinch of salt
Red food coloring
Vanilla
Tongue depressors

Wash apples thoroughly, wipe dry. Place syrup, sugar, salt and water in large heavy cooking pot. Stir over medium heat until sugar dissolves. Cook without stirring to brittle stage (300°). Remove from heat and place over hot water. Add food coloring and vanilla. Remove stems and insert tongue depressors in apples. Dip and twirl in hot syrup. Remove and place stick end through cake rack on bowl. Let cool. Best made day before serving. Do not refrigerate.

POLICE SEEK THIEVES WITH DYNAMITE HAUL

LAKE COWICHAN — Police here are searching for thieves who stole about 750 pounds of dynamite last weekend from B.C. Forest Products Ltd. Caycuse logging division.

The cause for alarm, a police spokesman said, is that a 50-pound case of explosive was taken from the company Oct. 6 and detonated the following week at Cottonwood Creek near Youbou. RCMP said the blast was an attempt to block the creek.

The company is uncertain of the exact amount stolen last weekend because the theives also took the magazine records.

Disaster-Suicide Link Refuted

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — The shock of losing homes and businesses in last June's devastating flood has left thousands here frustrated and depressed, but the prediction of a rash of suicides hasn't come true.

And a medical official in the hard-hit Wyoming Valley — where 15,000 homes were ruined, more than 1,200 stores wiped out and property damage exceeded $1 billion—says it won't, despite the terrible personal problems in the continuing cleanup, repair and recovery.

"I know the people here," says Dr. Edward Janjigian, a psychiatrist who is president of the region's 400-member medical society. "They are not the suicide type. They are not thinking of that junk.

"People who were psychotic and emotionally unstable are going to have more demands, and the flood, for them, may help pull the trigger.

"But you shouldn't say suicides will increase. We flood victims will come out of this hardship with flying colors and few, if any, deaths due to despondency."

SEES NO INCREASE

Dr. George E. Hudeck, Luzerne County coroner, agrees.

"We have had two suicides since June 23 when the Susquehanna River inundated a large portion of the valley, and that's no increase," he says. "We've had 19 suicides to date this year and that's about normal.

"I don't think these people are going to take their lives. They're tough. They are used to hard work, and they will work, not quit."

Janjigian, chief psychiatrist at the huge veterans administration hospital, and Hudeck, a pathologist, agree that depression is rampant.

"Who wouldn't be if they lost everything they owned in life?" asks Hudeck.

Janjigian adds: "Certainly there's a lot of down in the dumps, frustration, even resentment at the government for moving too slow to help. It wouldn't be normal if it wasn't. I'm depressed. I had $30,000 worth of instruments that were ruined, things that I loved. And my child's grave in the Forty Fort cemetery was washed out."

HAS MORE PATIENTS

Dr. Edward Whalen, a psychiatrist on the staff of the Luzerne-Wyoming County Mental Health Centre, originally predicted suicides would climb. But now he is backtracking.

"We expect people to continue to have disturbances, and some may even commit suicide, as they do all over the world, but these won't be all flood-related," he says.

Whalen says, however, his clinic is treating greater numbers of persons for depressive syndromes, roughly 45 per cent greater than the pre-flood caseload of 800.

Janjigian does express concern as winter approaches, which can be especially bitter with heavy snows in this northeastern Pennsylvania region on the edge of the Pocono Mountains.

"There will be sickness this winter because of inadequacy of shelter and a lack of proper nourishment, particularly among the elderly and the very young," Janjigian says.

"Some of the mobile homes — the government already has provided more than 9,200 in the area—are not very well built."

Song Winner Gets $10,000

TORONTO (CP) — Marty Butler of Montreal has been selected winner of the $10,000 first prize in the Hear Canada Singing song-writing contest, it was announced Monday.

The contest, sponsored by the Canadian Conference of the Arts and supported by Molson's Brewery Ltd., drew more than 5,000 entries from across the country.

Most of the contest's leading entries will be included in a special television show to be taped this week for later showing.

Butler will sing his prize-winning Can't You Hear the Music?

Russian Rail Repairs 'Better'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has a behemoth track repair train that can rip up and fix a mile of rails and roadbed in four hours, which outmatches anything in the United States, says John W. Ingram, Federal Railroad Administration chief.

The Russians can rip up a mile of track, repair it and replace it with only a four-hour shutdown of rail service, Ingram said.

In the process they use equipment unmatched in size and capability in the U.S., including huge electronic electromagnets that yank the tracks up by their roots—ties and all, he said.

Ingram visited several Russian cities with a 10-man delegation of U.S. railwaymen and government rail experts.

"The Russian approach to track maintenance is very simple," Ingram said.

"The tracks are pulled up by magnets, cut up in pieces, and hauled to a place where they dry clean it and press it, and then haul it back.

"The repair train stretches over a mile. There are about 10 sections to it, some holding new rails, some picking up old, and a unit big as a couple of 100-ton tanks welded together forming the track ripper upper.

"The train picks up ballast, shoots dirt out through high pressure hose, and lays down clean ballast.

"We are ahead on high-speed train operations. They are ahead on track maintenance.

Public, Private 'Mix' Eyed in Saskatchewan

SASKATOON (CP) Saskatchewan resources should be developed by a mix of public and private enterprise, Kim Thorson, provincial minister of mineral resources, said Tuesday.

Addressing the annual western meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, Thorson said "nothing is less productive than foolish statements to the effect that private enterprise can do the job if left free of government regulation or government action.

"It is equally sterile to suggest that there is no place for private enterpreneurs in the mineral industry."

In determining who should develop resources, the government will consider the number of jobs which would be created, conservation of resources, pollution levels and fair royalty and tax returns for the Saskatchewan people, the New Democratic Party minister said.

He said the "mix" of public and private enterprise would depend upon the particular circumstances and requirements and minerals to be utilized.

Act Proclaimed

REGINA (CP) — Labor Minister Gordon Snyder Tuesday announced the proclamation of the new Occupational Health Act, passed at the last session of the legislature.

The act, concerned with the health and safety of persons at work, contains key provisions related to the establishment of an occupational health council and joint labor-management occupational health committees in places of employment.

Higher Food Prices

WINNIPEG (CP) — The president of the Manitoba Hotel Association said Tuesday food menu prices "are going to have to increase" due to higher taxes and labor costs.

Ted Bloomer of Winnipeg, interviewed at the association's annual meeting, said too many hotels aren't making the profit they should on their food departments.

No Inquiry

EDMONTON (CP) — A judicial inquiry will not be held into the death of a Calgary woman who died while being held by police, Attorney-General Merv Leitch said Tuesday.

The inquiry was requested by the mother of Jeanine McKenzie, 29, who died despite three trips to hospital for the treatment of heroin withdrawal symptoms.

Hearings Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — The Edmonton chapter of the Committee for an Independent Canada today called for public hearings at major Canadian cities on the proposed Mackenzie Valley energy corridor.

A letter was sent by G. A. Mulhall, vice-chairman of the committee, to Premier Peter Lougheed and other provincial party leaders urging MLAs to press for public hearings in Alberta.

Tenure Plan Hit

WINNIPEG (CP) — P. Smith Churchland, University of Manitoba faculty association secretary, said Tuesday implementation of University president Dr. Ernest Sirluck's proposal to limit tenured positions at the institute would be a serious mistake.

Mrs. Churchland told the special executive committee of the board of governors that Dr. Sirluck's proposal constitutes a breach of faith, which, in turn "breeds mistrust, cynicism, resentment and all those undesirable qualities which hinder the pursuit of excellence."

Indian Rights 'Eroded'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Bill of Rights is being used to erode treaty rights to natives under the Indian Act, Helen Gladui of the Winterburn Reserve said Tuesday.

Mrs. Gladue, president of the 12-member Committee of Treaty Women of Alberta, said the committee was formed Saturday at Hobbema, Alta., to protect rights of Indian women under the Indian Act

Caboose Fight Lost

CALGARY (CP)—A dispute which disrupted CP rail freight traffic south and east of Edmonton has been settled, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Thirty-one trainmen booked off at Red Deer Sunday, complaining about the accommodation at the end of the Red Deer-Edmonton run. They had been staying in cabooses but wanted the company to provide rest houses or hotel rooms.

The spokesman said "an understanding" was reached and the men will continue to stay in cabooses.

Pork Sales Debated

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The government must first act as a contract negotiator if Canada is to get a share of the international pork trade, says Dr. Joseph Richter, trade specialist with the University of Alberta.

He told the Canadian Pork Council annual meeting here Tuesday that tariffs are not the "real hurdle in international trade."

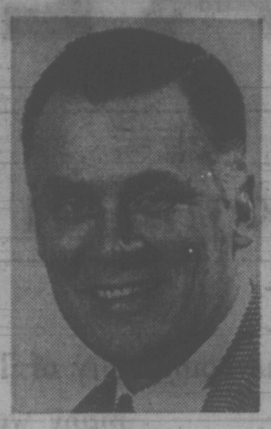
'Cadillac Exodus' Denied by Barrett

There will be no "Cadillac exodus" from B.C. as a result of the Gift Tax Act being kept on the statute books, Premier Barrett said Tuesday.

Barrett was commenting on opposition criticism of his party's proposed amendments to the act, which were given second reading — approval in principle — in the legislature.

"If one rich man leaves this province because of the legislation, I say let him go and good riddance," Barrett said, "rather than have someone living here trying to get by without living up to his taxation responsibilities."

"Capital won't flow out of this province. There will be no Cadillac exodus from B.C."



GARDOM
. . . spaghetti plate

45-7 VOTE

Earlier, spokesmen for the Liberal and Conservative parties had argued against the concept of gift taxes and succession duties. When the vote on second reading came, the two parties joined in opposition against the Social Credit and New Democratic members, making the vote 45-7 in favor.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) called the legislation "a spaghetti-plate of tax law that will end up on the lap of the taxpayer." He said all it will result in is more bureaucracy, duplicity and red tape.

Gardom said the presence of succession duties and gift taxes will "stimulate an exodus of capital from B.C." He urged repeal of both pieces of legislation.

The Liberal urged the government to make the gift tax law ineffective for 1972, that is, delay its implementation until next year, so that a proper piece of legislation can be drawn up for the spring session.

And he urged that husbands and wives be given total exemptions for the gifts they wish to give each other. Under the present legislation, the exemption extends to gifts of $10,000 or less for spouses.

Conservative house leader Scott Wallace said his party considers succession duties an unfair form of taxation.

He said that since society is able to tax individuals "all along the way" when they are building up their estates, there should be no reason why more taxation should be added upon the person's death.

Wallace said he was not thinking of millionaries but of ordinary citizens.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) said gift taxes raise very little revenue and succession duties only raise about $30 million per year in B.C.

He said there is a system of double taxation whereby the federal government taxes capital gains and the provincial government gifts and successions and said the two governments should work in concert on taxation.

McGreer said the present legislation will penalize the middle income groups rather than the wealthy.

'WOOLLY HEADED'

In his response to the opposition criticism, Barrett said the government intends to make B.C.'s gift tax laws conform with federal legislation so that B.C. can enter into an agreement, as other provinces are doing, with Ottawa to collect gift taxes.

He countered Gardom's comment that the legislation might be "wolly-headed" by saying he got it from the federal finance minister, John Turner, "and you're saying that right in the middle of an election campaign."

Barrett said the matter of gift taxes and succession duties was an issue in the election, because the Social Credit government had promised to backtrack on its own legislation by repealing its statutes in a special session of the house.

He said the issue is one on which the separate parties in the province will have to disagree.

"If you don't like it, put your names on the books. You tell them what you did, and we'll tell them what we did," he said.

To McGeer's statement that $30 million was not a great amount of revenue, Barrett said it would go a long way towards supplying senior citizens with needed supplementary income.

Opposition Enthused About House Reform

An effort by the NDP government to modernize the B.C. legislature and make it more accessible to the public was greeted with enthusiasm by government and opposition members in the house Tuesday.

The only critical comments during debate of the speaker's bill were reserved for the Social Credit party, which was charged with failing to do anything to improve legislative practices during its 20-year term.

The bill, which was given unanimous second reading, will enable Speaker Gordon Dowding to appoint a committee to investigate practices of other legislatures in Canada with an eye to improving the way the B.C house does its business.

Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said the Speaker is being given all the powers possible for the study and said the result will likely be an "altered style, thrust and perhaps behavior" in the house.

Liberal leader David Anderson said he is pleased to see the wide-ranging terms of authority given to Dowding's committee under the bill but urged that the bill be repealed after the legislative study is completed.

Anderson said he did not doubt that Dowding would use the powers under the bill wisely but warned that the bill is "a blank cheque, or a blank air ticket to anywhere in the world almost."

He said the Liberals will heartily support the government move but would be proposing some amendments to it.

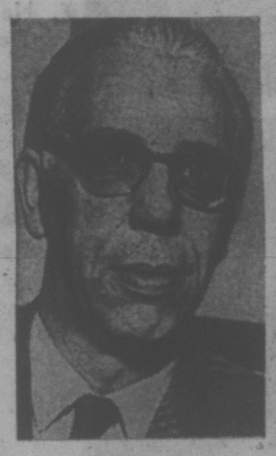
Patricia Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) urged Dowding to appoint members to his committee who would be above reproach since the committee is to be given "unlimited power to toy with the democratic process and the parliamentary system."

Jordan said the job facing Dowding is "a complex and arduous task, for a person so new in his position," and said the bill leaves him open t possible criticism of political patronage in the hiring of his staff.

BENEFIT OF DOUBT

"The actions of the new socialist government to date, in its hiring and firing practices, have left the impression that the first qualification for a high-paying job is that you be an NDP member or supporter," Jordan said. "You are a new government and we must give you thebenefit of the give you the benefit of the doubt, but we also must judge you upon your actions to date."

In supporting the bill, Conservative house leader Scott Wallace called it "one of the most exciting bills of this session" and said it should provide for the era of open government promised by the NDP.



DOWDING
. . . blank cheque?

But Wallace came down hard on the Socreds for failing to make any effort during their 20-year time in office to bring about such changes.

Wallace said the items touched on by the bill are documentation of the very reasons he left the Social Credit party to sit as an independent, and then as a Progressive Conservative.

HITS SOCREDS

"All we hear from the Social Credit party is criticism of all those things they totally neglected when they were government," Wallace said, to desk-thumping applause from NDP and Liberal ranks.

He said the B.C. public has become "cynical" about the manner in which the house is run and that he came across many people during the election campaign who were so discouraged they had decided not to vote at all.

Wallace said he "cannot be impressed by the apparent concern of the lady from North Okanagan (Jordan) when her party did absolutely nothing over its 20-year term to modernize the province's legislative function."

Wallace said it is perhaps time that the B.C. house was enlarged from its present 55-members to something closer to the 75-member Alberta house, which he said represents a lesser population than B.C.'s.

He urged more work by legislative committee in the province and said ordinary citizens must have some way of expressing themselves to their elected representatives rather than through newspapers and other media.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre said the first priority for changing the house rules should be institution of daily question periods of the kind that leads off the day's business in Ottawa and other parliaments.

High priority should also be given to television coverage of debates, and a closed circuit television for use of house leaders and members of the news media.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver - Point Grey) said that by not having a full Hansard, British Columbia has the "very unique distinction of being 200 years behind."

He said the last government had believed in the "divine right of kings," and made itself "totally unanswerable" to the people not only in the house proceedings but also in its conducting of the province's financial business.

Saanich Shore Decisions Urged

Saanich has come to its moment of truth on control of offshore territory, members of the municipal planning committee were told Tuesday.

"The time has come to decide what we would like to see on the waterfront," municipal administrator John Tribe told aldermen.

A provincial order-in-council last summer granted Saanich jurisdiction over foreshore and waters up to 1,000 feet from municipal boundaries, chiefly in Haro Strait, representing some 13 miles of "new territory."

Senior officials have discussed a number of matters over which the council may want to impose controls, Tribe said. These include the possibility of police patrol and rescue apparatus, control of beach fires and firefighting apparatus access, the cost of beach maintenance and the control of animals such as horseback riding on beaches, he said.

"These are some of the implications the committee will have to think about," he added.

The planning committee may want to suggest new zoning controls, such as a bylaw for the designation and requirements of marinas, he thought. Tribe also said finance and legislative committee and others would have their own interest in the subject.

Assistant planner Gil Laurenson said the matter is complex and involves the riparian rights of waterfront owners, municipal green open space concepts and the possibility of special legislation to protect some scenic areas as inviolate.

Aldermen deferred the matter for further consideration.

The committee recommended to council that farm market zoning be established in Saanich, recognizing the fact that farmers have traditionally sold their produce at the roadside.

But the proposal probably will go further to permit the marketing of produce at one place that may have been produced at a number of other places and include besides unprocessed foodstuffs such items as homebaked bread and preserves.

"We certainly should encourage farm marketing and home processing," said Ald. Edith Gunning.

Chairman Frank Waring said the committee should know details of what is proposed by applicant Harvey Lim for an outlet on West Saanich Road.

The planning department recommended a farm market zone be established to cover unprocessed goods, eliminate any distinction between those produced on site and those from elsewhere, and set standards of siting and setbacks. There also should be prohibited uses specified, the planning report said.

A proposed play lot in Bisley Place subdivision between Columbia and Torquay, was referred by lands and housing committee to outdoor parks and recreation committee because of bleak design and possible improvement through more planting.

The subdivider wanted to donate a 60 by 108-foot lot to the municipality as a child's play area and the committee was shown a sketch indicating about 60 per cent asphalt surrounded by a link chain fence.

Chairman Gunning said she liked to see play parks dedicated, "but it certainly bothers me to see half go in asphalt and surrounded by chain link fences . . . Why not shrubs instead of fences?"

"If the shrubs are thick enough and prickly they (children) won't run through them then," remarked Ald. William Campbell.

The plan showed playground equipment, four small planted areas, some lawn and a sand-covered area, with the rest paved.

Laurenson said the parks administration prefers easily maintained play lots to keep costs down, and the proposed plan was a compromise.

OTTAWA SUES QUE. FIRM OVER MERCURY DUMPING

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to The Times

OTTAWA — The environmental protection service of the federal environment department is taking a Quebec chlor-alkali plant to court over mercury pollution in the St. Louis River, near Montreal.

The case, involving Standard Chemical Company of Valleyfield, is the first federal prosecution involving mercury pollution in Canada.

The Valleyfield company is to appear in a Valleyfield court on the morning of election day, to face 20 separate charges of allegedly dumping a deleterious substance, in this case mercury, into a river frequented by fish, in this case the St. Louis River, between Sept. 2 and Oct. 9.

Upon summary conviction, each charge could result in a fine of as much as $2000 for the company.

The federal government is invoking new regulations on mercury effluent from chlor-alkali plants that came into effect June 12 under the federal fisheries act.

Under the regulations, a chlor-alkali plant is not allowed to "deposit" in a fish-filled river more than 4 certain amount of mercury per ton of chlorine produced at the plant.

Standard Chemical is being charged with dumping more than the limit for 20 days between Sept. 2 and Oct. 9.

A spokesman for the environment department, in confirming the charges against the company, said there are 14 chlor-alkali plants across Canada: one each in B.C., Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, and Nova Scotia; and five each in Ontario and Quebec.

MAN WHO GAVE NIXON A MILLION

NEW YORK — A big hunk — nearly $1 million — of the money that went into President Nixon's re-election drive before April 7 came from Pittsburgh millionaire Richard Mellon Scaife.

Scaife acknowledged Tuesday night that over a period of time prior to the April 7 reporting date, he made out 330 separate cheques in behalf of Nixon's re-election, each for $3,000.

His total contribution to the campaign so far is $990,000.

He said that, "I've also made other contributions to house and senate races around the country . . . they total probably another $60,000 to $70,000."

Scaife is a principal heir to the vast Mellon fortune of Pittsburgh and, as one friend described that fortune Tuesday night, it "makes the Rockefellers look poor."

Scaife said he also contributed heavily to Nixon's campaign in 1968, to Barry Goldwater's campaign in 1964, and "to congressional and senatorial campaigns in '66 and '70 and so on."

Scaife heatedly denied a report that his contribution was aimed at getting him named ambassador to Britain.

"There's not one shred of truth to that," he said. "I have sought no favor and I seek none, and I received none."

Ottawa Funding Quebec A-Plant

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Atomic Energy of Canada Limited will lend Quebec half of the funds needed to build a new $300 million nuclear generating station at Three Rivers.

The nuclear station, to be called Gentilly II and to be built next to a prototype reactor Gentilly I, will be Quebec's second large nuclea reactor and the province's first commercial power reactor.

Gentilly II will be built, starting early next year, to be ready by 1978 in time to provide needed additional power for the province until the first parts of the huge James Bay hydro-electric power development come into operation.

Gentilly II will produce some 600 megawatts of power and will use heavy water as a moderator, to control the nuclear fires, and as a coolant.

The design will incorporate many of the features of the existing Pickering 500 megawatt units, near Toronto, and the larger 750 megawatt Bruce reactors, now being built at Douglas Point, Ont.

The building of Gentilly II will represent a major victory for AECL, being the first domestic reactor for commercial power production outside of Ontario.

AECL officials are confident that it will be only the first of a series in Quebec. Estimates of the escalating power demands in that province indicate that Quebec will need to start building more power generating capacity in the mid to late 1980s, to keep up with power needs beyond even the mammoth James Bay project.

Some, if not a large percentage, of these units will likely be nuclear, the experts suggest.

Elsewhere, AECL officials are still negotiating with New Brunswick about constructing a Canadian nuclear power reactor there.

And the financial assistance approved by Ottawa for Gentilly II could re-awaken considerations by Manitoba officials, who AECL says have been "toying with the idea" of building a nuclear plant there, especially if the federal government were to provide financial assistance.

AECL has still not given up hope of seeing a reactor built in British Columbia, even with comments by the new premier there that nuclear power was out as far as he was concerned.

Under the terms of the financial agreement, Quebec will receive the estimated $150 million loan from AECL as needed during the five to six year construction period of the reactor.

Quebec will then have to pay the money back, with low interest, to Ottawa starting the day the reactor is actually declared "in service" and turned over to Hydro Quebec, the provincial utility.

Ontario was given similar financial assistance amounting to about $150 million to help in the construction of the first two of the four-reactor Pickering complex, near Toronto.

"IT LOOKS APPETIZING AND TASTES GOOD!

And the children like its overall taste and especially the nice even pieces of meat and the taste of the gravy."

Last-minute shopping on decrease, stores say

It may seem a bit early to start thinking about Christmas but sales people claim they're only meeting the demand of the consumer

(See Santa Page 40)

Nine 'Short' Weeks to Go

Buy now — there are only nine short shopping weeks left until Christmas.

Seem ridiculously early?

Maybe, but it works, according to sales managers of Victoria's major department stores, as they stock Christmas sure-sellers on already tinselled shelves.

While the sun shines and temperatures hover around 60 degrees, consumers ponder over which brand of artificial snow to buy, and push overladen carts full of Christmas wrapping to summer sales counters.

"We're always faced with the criticism of establishing our Christmas business early. But customers buy early — it's a proven fact," says Jim Forward, a sales manager at the Bay.

"Last minute shopping has decreased over the last three years, but my sales are increasing the month and a half before.

"Earlier shopping is the key, but maybe not this early," he admitted. The Bay started displaying Christmas cards, tree decorations and artificial trees two weeks ago, two weeks later than last year.

An Eaton's staff member explains the decoration onslaught this way: "The space for the stuff was allocated to us, and because of postal regulations, a good number of people are buying presents, cards and wrapping paper to send overseas."

"Personally I think Christmas is getting too commerical," said Ron Ellis, of K-Mart.

"But we start getting the Christmas stock at the end of August, and we have to get it out on the shelves. The Easter stuff starts coming in January. That's just the way it works.

"The requests are unbelievable. A lot of people found they were disappointed when they left buying until the last moment in previous years — because of poor selection — so they're starting now."

Woolco, has only one and one half counters displaying Christmas items.

"But there will be more soon," Terrence Wilkins, Christmas sales manager, hastened to add.

Expert 'Matcher' For Big Brothers

It's not everyone who gets a chance to choose brothers for a perfect working relationship.

But that's the job of Peter Kagis, and he considers it a very real goal.

The 25-year-old social worker has been hired as a part-time, professional "relationship-matcher" by the Victoria chapter of Big Brothers of B.C.

Consistent

Also a group leader at the Pacific Centre for Human Development, Kagis interviews prospective brothers, matches them, then follows up the relationships.

The move "will insure consistent matching as new big brothers are added and consistent following through in each relationship," says Gordon Cruse, Big Brothers spokesman.

Professional advice will also be available when needed.

The constitution allows for a part-time social worker when the organization membership reaches a total of 50 big brothers.

Cruse says the organization has matched about 80 relationships but there are still 60 little brothers on the waiting list.

Kagis' salary — listed at $150 a month — will be financed through the Vancouver operation, Cruse said.

"To me, Big Brothers is a preventative measure," said Kagis. "The operation will work best if we get the kids between the ages of eight and 12, before they get into trouble."

Age is one of the biggest concerns, according to Kagis.

"Mothers wait until the kids are 13 and 14; about that age most get into trouble, become mobile and begin to distrust adults."

Big Brothers should be contacted when the child is at an earlier age; "When they are most open to adults and open to establishing a relationship," Kagis said.

Another concern is the shortage of big brothers.

"There's only a slow trickle," said Kagis. "Most are single or newly married, with families at a younger age than the little brother.

"There should be more. It's a comfortable society. People don't take citizenship seriously. Big Brothers is a duty. It's not as if people don't have time -- the work week is no longer 60 hours.

No Hard Sell

"But we aren't hard sell — we don't go out and knock on doors to get Big Brothers — we're here when people get the urge," he said.

Big Brothers, which operates on a $2,500 to $3,000 annual budget, is financed through an annual Presto Log Blitz at all city shopping centres.

The event, which raised $2,700 last year, is scheduled for Saturday. Presto logs will be sold for 10 cents each.

CAC Criticizes Import Quota

Low income consumers are being made to support Canada's flagging shirt industry, says a Consumer's Association of Canada brief this week.

The association has asked the Textile and Clothing Board to drop the import quota on men and boys' shirts in effect since November 1971, restricting the number of shirts imported from countries such as Japan, Hong Kong, Korea and Taiwan.

"The low income consumer is paying the shot to provide stability to the Canadian shirt industry," says CAC vice-president Dr. H. E. English, adding that it already benefits from a 25 per cent tariff protection. The restriction on numbers of imported shirts, he says, makes the low income consumer "spend a greater percentage of his income on shirts."

What's Inside That Red Suit . . .

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

If your department store Santa Claus seems a bit overpadded and talks to you with a Scottish accent this Christmas, fear not.

It's just because someone took a newspaper assignment too seriously.

This particular five-foot, 10-inch reporter, weighing in at 150 pounds after a hefty plate of porridge, checked out six large department stores in Victoria in search of a job as Mr. Christmas.

The reception was really surprising.

The Bay was very sorry but its position has been filled for a couple of weeks now by "someone who had walked in by pure chance," the personnel department said.

'Skinny Guy'

I shouldn't feel too dispirited, however — the successful Santa was "a skinny guy who would need padding anyway."

One strike against me — but still in the game.

Wooloo shares Santa with the rest of the Town and Country shopping mall. The mall's business office thought my lack of weight nothing to get heavy about.

"There's no problem," said the friendly voice, "and you've applied at the right time."

He had my name down on file before you could say Donner and Blitzen. The going rate for Santa hadn't been finalized, but it would be $2.25 an hour, I was assured.

Zellers and Simpsons-Sears give Mr. Claus a place to hang his stocking cap, along with the other stores in the Hillside mall.

"We've already taken on our Santa," I was told. But once again, they didn't want to dampen my premature Christmas spirit.

"You could come along for an interview anyway . . . you may be able to step in if the regular Santa went sick . . ."

The successful candidate at Hillside would have been too tough a competitor for me, anyway. He weighed around 170. Worse still, he was shorter than me. (Probably had rosy cheeks, too.)

My prospects of getting on the Victoria-Greenland sleigh run were looking bleak.

At Eaton's, the outlook was better. They hadn't yet settled on their man, being thin was 'in'. Perhaps, if I left my name, the advertising manager would call me back.

But it was at Woodward's that triumph came closest to my skinny grasp.

Here, Santa's house was already being prepared for the Man's arrival in mid-November. The store had plenty of padding to offer, the timing for applicants was right and the wage, still to be confirmed by Vancouver head office, would be over $2.50 an hour.

Good Personality

All I really needed was "a good personality . . . and (to) be able to get along with children," and I would be in with a running chance, said the personnel department.

In the end, I decided against the red suit job.

Still, it only goes to show it's not just a reject like Rudolf that can make the Christmas lineup by a nose.

A Wise Choice

DEAR ABBY: I am a happily married woman with two children. My problem is my 17-year-old sister. (I'll call her Brenda.) Brenda is a senior in high school.

Brenda asked me if I would get some birth control pills for her. I told her nothing doing, she should behave herself and she wouldn't have to worry.

To my amazement, Brenda asked Mother to get them for her, and as unbelievable as this may sound, Mother got them for her. When Brenda told me this, I couldn't believe it, so I went straight to Mother and asked her if she was out of her mind, Mother said, "I would prefer that Brenda save herself until she marries, but if she is going to have sex, I would rather have her safe than sorry."

Believe me, Abby, if I had asked my mother for the Pill when I was 17, she would have kicked me out out of the house.

I don't know what's come over my mother. She is 50. Is it possible that she is going through her change and has flipped her lid? — Worried

DEAR WORRIED: Your mother may be going through the change — but so is the world. I do not condone premaritial sex, either, but when one considers the alternatives, your mother may have made a wise choice. Ask any mother whose daughter is about to become an unwed mother.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are a young married couple with two children. We've been married for three years, but our marriage isn't the problem. The problem is that my husband has started taking flying lessons, and I am upset over it because we can't afford it.

The course is $800, which he doesn't have to pay for all at once. He pays for a lesson at a time.

He works eight hours a day, six days a week. Then he works for two or three hours every evening on our house, which we are building by ourselves. When Sunday comes he goes to the airport for two hours.

I say he should cut out the flying lessons because we can't afford it. My husband says, "Write to Abby and see whose side she's on."

I promised if you were on his side I wouldn't say another word about it — Red Baron's Wife

DEAR WIFE: From your letter, I suspect it's not the money you resent so much as the time and energy your husband spends on his flying. If he's laying out money that puts you in a bind, financially, of course he should quit flying. But if that's not the case, and his only hobby takes him away from home for two hourrs every Sunday, don't nag him about it.

Gorge's Tooth Fairy Tells

elizabeth forbes

Mention in this column, last Friday night, of early days in Gorge Road Hospital, resulted in a spate of reminiscences from nurses who have served the hospital since those days.

One of the most amusing stories dates back almost 20 years. It had to do with a mix-up in one of the extended care wards, of six sets of false teeth.

As told by the nurse concerned (who wishes to remain nameless) every one of the "old dears" in that ward had false teeth. And it was the custom each night to take them out, put them in small containers of fresh water and leave them on a stand beside each bed.

First Duty

In the morning, first duty of a nurses' aide was to take each set of Gorge teeth separately and wash them. She then changed the water in the containers and put them back ready to be popped into the six mouths when the day nurse had the patients ready for breakfast.

One morning a new nurse's aid reported for work. Immediately she was told to clean the false teeth.

Not really familiar with the routine, yet determined to do a good job on her first morning in the hospital, this young woman quickly filled a basin with water and before anyone could tell her differently, dumped in all six sets of teeth.

Then she retired to the utility room to scrub and clean them with a nail brush she discovered there.

The nurse who told me this story was on duty in the ward that day. And when she arrived the basin with its six sets of teeth was handed to her.

"It wasn't too hard to match up lowers and uppers," she reminisced, "but when it came to deciding who owned which, it was a different matter."

The "old dears" themselves were so vague they were not of much help. So, all she could do, she says, was start at the first bed, fumble a set of teeth into an open mouth, then watch to see they didn't "wobble" too much. "If they did, out they came and I tried a second set."

Eventually all six were in place "but to this day I've never been sure the right ones got into the right mouths."

She ended her story with "I wondered then, and I still wonder, why dentists don't put the initials of a person concerned somewhere on the back of a set of false teeth ... it certainly would have made it easier for me to match up the six old dears to their own chompers that particular day."

Amusing Incident

This same nurse remembered still another amusing incident that took place about the same time as the mix-up. Again it had to do with false teeth—this time, one set only.

Seemed that one morning when a very elderly patient in another ward first received her teeth, they fitted perfectly.

Later in the day however, they were so loose the woman could hardly talk.

Nurses on the floor became concerned that the woman might have developed a sore (or sores) in her mouth and that possibly she was easing the teeth out to protect the sores.

They tried to persuade her to let them take a look. She refused.

After considerable coaxing however, she finally mumbled an explanation for the one who told me the story ... because she said she trusted her.

Folded carefully above her upper plate was a one dollar bill. She was saving it, she said, for her granddaughter. And that was the only place she believed it was really safe.

"I could tell you enough stories about early days in Gorge hospital to fill a book," this particular nurse assured me. "but then, many of those stories should never be told. It just wouldn't be right!"

According to a saying, you cannot make an omelette without breaking eggs! But there are lots of other epicurian delights you cannot make without eggs.

The eight-page folder Eggs offers directions from how to prepare simple egg dishes and such elegant culinary creations as Chinese omelet, cheese souffle and quiche Canadienne to fancy desserts like zabaglione and angel pie.

Store leftover yolks or whites in a tightly-covered container in the refrigerator. Add some water to the yolks and use them within two to three days. Egg whites will keep up to one week.

When a recipe calls for one egg, you can usually substitute this by two egg yolks. Egg yolks can also be used in salad dressings, ice cream or meat loaves. Egg whites will be handy for gelatin desserts, sherbets, fruit whips and angel cake.

Lincoln Brigade Cleared

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Court of Appeals ordered the attorney general Tuesday to remove from his list of subversive organizations the Abraham Lincoln brigade, a group of Americans who fought against Franco.

The unanimous decision found that continued listing of the brigade and its veterans "cannot be tolerated" in view of the attorney general's failure to comply with earlier court rulings concerning the groups' listing.

The court's decision, unless appealed, appears to bring to an end the 24-year battle by the groups to resist government attempts to have it register as a Communist-front organization.

Put on a Funny Face With Halloween Cookies

By MARY MOORE

There were 10 of us for dinner when I tested these Funny Face cookies. Four of our group were little girls ranging in age from 6 to 10 — all with elaborate plans for dressing up for Halloween.

They were my two granddaughters Hilary and Jennifer and my two grandnieces Sian and Kim.

If you have the time and energy to make them for handouts on Halloween you really should have your children make the faces. They will put eyes and noses and mouths where they belong but oftener where they do not and it makes lots of fun.

FUNNY FACE COOKIES (40)

1 c. butter
1½ c. icing sugar
2 small eggs or 1 very large
½ tsp. vanilla
2½ c. sifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. cream of tartar
¼ tsp. salt gum droys
chocolate chips

In beater bowl, cream together the butter and icing sugar then beat in egg and vanilla. Sift together the sifted flour, baking soda, cream of tartar and salt. Add to beater mixture and beat in.

Turn dough out on large sheet of heavy wax paper and shape into a 14" roll 2" in diameter. Roll up in wax paper, smooth out flat side if any and chill until firm. (I put mine in the freezer for half hour.)

With heavy sharp knife, cut into ¼" slices and place THREE INCHES apart on ungreased cookie sheets (preferably teflon).

Now make the faces: cut cake-decorator gum drops into four slices each. I used green ones for eyes, red ones for noses (big end down). Use about four chocolate chips for a smiling mouth.

Bake at 375 deg. THESE COOKIES SPREAD to 3" diameter and bake in about eight minutes so watch them carefully. Remove to cake rack, using lifter, and cool.

You should taste one while it is warm because the gum drops are soft then but return to their original firmness when cool.

The children were enchanted with these and so were the adults. Actually, the cookie dough is refrigerator sugar cookies with a rich homemade flavour.

Priest Backs Common Law Marriages

TORONTO (CP) — Father Leo Lafreniere of Thunder Bay, one of Ontario's leading exponents of sex education for children, has criticized the Roman Catholic Church for refusing to change time worn dictums which condemn common-law marriages.

He told a meeting of Parents Without Partners that common law union is sometimes as strong as legal marriage.

"It depends on the commitment that the two people have for one another . . . it can be a union conducive to a better relationship between a man and a woman."

He added that he was against indiscriminate premarital sex and attacked Marion Powell, a University of Toronto professor, for advocating in a recent book that all teen-age girls should be given the pill.

"If she were drawing on public funds, I would say that she ought to be sued," Lafreniere said. "What she is proposing is violating the sacredness of the home."

He told the meeting that through interviews with hundreds of teen-agers for a study on human sexuality, he has seen the harm indiscriminate sex can cause.

Laos War Settlement Dwarfed By Vietnam Peace Discussions

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON —The war in Loas has long been a subplot playing in the wings of the greater Vietnam theatre. The speculation over a Vietnam settlement has overshadowed the peace talks that began in the Laotian capital last week — the first substantive peace talks between the Communist-led Pathet Lao and Prince Souvanna Phouma's government since 1964.

The Laotian civil war is a captive of the Vietnam war in the sense that as long as the United States and the North Vietnamese need Laotian territory to fight each other, there can be little hope for peace in Laos.

For no matter what is agreed upon in Vientiane, the Pathet Lao cannot force the North Vietnamese out of Laos, and Souvanna Phouma does not have the power to force the Americans to stop bombing.

Were the Americans and the North Vietnamese to come to an agreement which would allow them to free their Laotian clients, however, perhaps even in advance of a total Vietnam settlement, then the warring Laotian factions should find it far easier to compromise than will the Vietnamese.

It has long been Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma's hope that a Laotian settlement could be worked out in anticipation of a Vietnam settlement to lead the way towards a general Indochina peace.

The issues that divide Laotians are not as deep as those that divide Vietnamese. Unlike Vietnam, the Loatian government and the Pathet Lao agree in principle to a return to coalition government based on the 1962 Geneva Accords.

The Pathet Lao have never demanded the overthrow of Souvanna Phouma. They have not even renounced him as the head of a new government of national reconciliation.

Despite the bitterness and bloodshed, the Pathet Lao have always maintained a representative in the Laotian capital and, unlike the other Indochina states, the Russians, Chinese, Americans and North Vietnamese are all diplomatically represented in Vientiane.

Compared with Vietnam, the dividing line between areas of government and Pathet Lao control is fairly straightforward, with few of the "leopard spots" of mixed control and contested areas that make a cease-fire in place so hard to bring about.

Despite the annual offensives, the Pathet Lao and North Vietnamese have never seriously threatened the Mekong River Valley, the seat of government power, and the government has not had the muscle to take and hold the eastern regions under Communist control.

Perhaps most important of all: the hatreds that divide Laotians are not as fierce and implacable as those that divide Vietnamese. There is more give and bend in the Laotian character, and it is of more than symbolic importance that Souvanna Phouna and his rival Prince Souphanouvong are half brothers.

When the talks opened in Vientiane last Tuesday the "Lao Patriotic Forces" delegations was led by the No. 4 man in the Lao Communist movement, Phoun Sipraseuth. Although he added a few new wrinkles, such as insistence that Thai troops quit Laos and a promise to exchange prisoners "of whatever nationalities" after a ceasefire, his negotiating position is based on the five-point program put forth in March, 1971.

The first point calls for the neutralization of Laos, and end to U.S. bombing and of all U.S. intervention. The second and third points call for a respect for Laotian sovereignty, an end to all military alliances, "respect for the throne" and free elections.

The fourth point provides for a provisional coalition and a "consultative political conference" prior to free elections to meet in a "security zone" where both sides could feel safe.

The last point is that neither side should "nibble" at the other's territory and that people forcibly removed from the Pathet Lao zone should be repatriated.

As in Vietnam, one result of the U.S. bombing and the Meo guerrilla operations has been to depopulate the land and to fill refugee camps, which Phoun called "concentration camps."

In 1970 the Pathet Lao called for an immediate and unconditional bombing halt to "create conditions" favorable for talks. That peace talks could begin last week without a bombing halt is seen as encouraging, even though a bombing halt still remains a top priority in the Pathet Lao peace proposal.

The tripartite agreement of 1962, from which the Pathet Lao withdrew, awarded four ministries to the left wing, four to the right and 11 to the neutralists.

Souvanna Phouma's bargaining position is that he represents the right wing and the neutralist factions and that the Pathet Lao should simply take up the four portfolios he has always left open for them.

The Pathet Lao, however, also claim the true neutralist mantle and say that the settlement should reflect "present realities."

The reality is that since Souvanna Phouma assumed office as the head of the neutralist faction, in 1962, the neutralist position has been whittled away to the point where today there are no true neutralists. There is only the government and the Pathet Lao.

Drug Fight Reviewed

GENEVA (Reuter) — The International Narcotics Control Board began a three-week meeting here Monday to review the latest progress in the worldwide fight against drug traffic. The 11-member board, elected by the United Nations Economic and Social Council, will assess efforts by countries to fulfil their obligations under international narcotics treaties.

Group Seeks Volunteers For Overseas

Canadian Crossroads International is looking for young people to live and work abroad for three to six months in places like India, Africa and the West Indies.

The CCI is a private voluntary organization which works, with help from groups such as Miles for Millions and Oxfam, to send students on projects overseas.

The aim of the group, according to its pamphlet, is to "provide cross-cultural educational experience for individuals while they attempt to fulfil a development need in the host country."

Anyone wishing to apply for a position should contact Nell Alexander at 658-8916.

George and James Thomson have the know-how

Fishermen Pair Off To Pare Expenses

By DOREEN HUNTER
Times Correspondent

Fishermen have always been known for their rugged and often lonely existence on the high seas.

But pairing — a new method of seining — may end this, at least for part of the commercial fishing year.

Pair seining, a federally-sponsored project aimed at increasing the incomes of commercial fishermen in the groundfish industry is being demonstrated in Sidney.

Two experienced Scottish fishing skippers, Captain James Thomson, age 62, and his brother Captain George Thomson, 64, both of Lossiemouth, Scotland, are teaching local fishermen the potential of the "Canadian pair-seining," netting techniques.

Captain James Thomson, a veteran of 42 years on the sea, developed the concept while he and his brother were demonstrating the Scottish sein-net method to Maritime fishermen.

"Pair-seining was never done in the world before 1969 when we tried it with two Prince Edward Island lobster boats," he said. "It is for small, light-powered boats from 35 to 45 feet. It was so successful there, at least 60 boats are now the same job."

Essentially, it calls for two commercial fishboats to tow modified gear and a seine-net between them, co-ordinating their operations by radio-telephone.

Tests alongside draggers show the pair-seine method taking three to four times as much fish, at the same time burning half the fuel, and literally cutting the work in half. Initial cost of gear is reasonable. The demonstrations are open to all fishermen.

So far, trials carried out on the Gambler I, skippered by Will Egeland, and the Taplow II by Bill Lumbley, both of Sidney, have been successful. Single catches of 5,000 pound of cod, and 4,000 pounds of sole in a different area, have been unloaded. Total catch of groundfish in 16 days is about 65,000 pounds.

From the deck of the Gambler I, I watched as the two boats sidled up alongside in Swanson Channel, a nearby area ideal for this type of fishing which requires clean bottom, mud, sand, sand and mud, and sand and shingle.

The Taplow II was shooting the net. When the appropriate net's bridle was relayed over and hooked up to Gambler I's gear, the two boats took on speed and parted, straightening out the net, and each spinning out 200 fathoms of 2 and ⅝ in. Manila rope.

GEAR TOWED

One half-mile apart, the boats turned on to a parallel course and let out a further 250 fathoms of ⅝ in. cable. The net and gear now formed a U shape between them, and they began towing it with the tide which was rippling the asphalt-like sea at about three knots.

In about an hour, the two boats once again approached each other and joined. Egeland and Lumley manned the winches, and their crewmen Bobby Lumley and Magnus Mackay began pulling the gear. The dripping cable, then the rope, were winched aboard. When the net surfaced, Mackay transferred to the Taplow II.

Both men had donned waterproof coveralls and gloves, and began extricating fish that had been gilled, that is, caught in the meshes. A scattering of gulls noisily descended when the cod-end of the net broke surface with its bulging silvery haul.

WINCHES STRAIN

With winches straining, the Taplow II heeled over, and the mainhaul of 1,100 pounds of pale-bellied flatfish was hoisted above her deck. Bobby Lumley untied the cod-end of the net and the catch cascaded into her hold. The whole procedure has taken about two hours.

Captain Jim Thomson, also aboard the Gambler I, who had been standing bare-headed on the scrubbed deck watching the proceedings, turned into the wheelhouse as coffee was poured.

He whistled into the radio for his brother, George, who is showing two more boats, the Selma H, skippered by Ed Odberg, and Don Hansen's Terapac, their paces. In broad Scots' accents, they converse.

It has been a fair "set."

The Pacific coast trials will be reported to Ottawa in a few days by the two men, who will then return to their homes in Scotland. They'll return next year.

A full report of the conversion and trials carried out in the Maritimes, including specifications of gear, diagrams, and photographs, is now available from fisheries official, Robert McIlwaine, 1090 W. Pender St., Vancouver.

HEART PATIENTS ARE 'BYSTANDERS'

TORONTO (CP) — A nursing professor at the University of Manitoba told the annual meeting of the Canadian Heart Foundation recently that heart patients are often relegated to the role of uncomprehending bystander by medical staff.

Irene Nordwich said many cardiac patients do not take their prescribed medicine after they are discharged from hospital because no one has explained the situation to them.

After talks with 13 former hospital patients, she said, she found them unaware of the drugs they were supposed to be taking.

Miss Nordwich said patients told her that hospital nurses simply handed out prescriptions and told them to get them filled.

She said there is a tremendous need to keep in touch with patients after discharge to help them manage their ailments.

"We relegate patients to the role of passive, uncomprehending bystander and then expect them to go home and rely on their own knowledge," she said.

Air Force Dismisses Charges Against Lavelle

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Air Froce dismissed the remaining charges against Maj. Gen. John Lavelle Tuesday and announced it planned no further action against him.

Lavelle, when he commanded the 11,000-man Seventh Air Force in Vietnam, ordered 24 unauthorized bombing raids against North Vietnam and the falsification of reports on them between November, 1971, and March, 1972.

The air force relieved him of command for exceeding his authority and recommended that he be promoted from his permanent rank of major general to lieutenant general in the retirement book — one star below the temporary four star rank he held in Vietnam and thus a demotion in air force eyes.

Air Force 1st Lieut. Delbert Terrill, stationed at Bolling Air Base here, argued that this was not adequate punishment and filed a separate set of charges through air force legal channels against Lavelle.

Terrill said "law and order" up and down the air force chain of command was at stake.

Under the uniform code of military justice, one man in uniform can file charges against another in the service.

Terrill's charges left to Air Force Secretary Robert Seamans the decision on whether to start court martial proceedings against Lavelle — as some senators had urged.

Seamans decision against doing anything further against Lavelle came in the short air force announcement released yesterday, stating: "The charges were dismissed after thorough investigation and review of all facts and material in connection with the matter . . ."

Young Winston Wants Lusitania Script

LONDON (CP) — Young Winston Churchill, grandson of the late Sir Winston, is investigating a BBC television program which suggested his grandfather may have deliberately allowed the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania in the First World War in order to involve the United States as an ally.

Churchill is reported to have asked for a transcript of the dramatized documentary entitled Who Sank the Lusitania? The program was broadcast Sunday night.

Presented in the form of a courtroom inquiry, it suggested Churchill, as first lord of the admiralty in 1915, may have permitted the tragedy to happen in order to shock the United States out of its neutrality.

Nearly 1,200 persons, including more than 200 Canadians, 140 Americans and large numbers of children and babies, were drowned when the 32,500-ton liner was torpedoed by the German submarine U-20 off Ireland's southwest coast May 7, 1915.

Churchill's post-war account, The World Crisis, was quoted in the program to show that he referred to the strategic value of provoking German submarines to attack neutral vessels.

AMERICANS JOLTED

American public opinion was largely jolted out of its neutral stance by the sinking, which the Irish coroner at Kinsale termed "wilful and wholesale murder" on the part of Germany.

Young Churchill says he views the speculation about his grandfather "skeptically," and that he has asked for a transcript to see whether there is any substance to it.

"If it is nothing more than hypothesis, it is not worth shooting down."

The Lusitania program was based on formerly secret archives recently released in the British admiralty and the U.S. state department. The same sources are exhaustively explored in a newly-published book called Lusitania, which formed the starting-point for the program. Written by Colin Simpson, a special correspondent for Lord Thomson's Sunday Times, it claims the Lusitania carried an explosive cargo of munitions and 70 volunteers from the 6th Winnipeg Rifles—all of whom were apparently drowned.

CRUISER WITHDRAWN

The book also examines the chain of admiralty failures to warn the Lusitania of U-boats in her path and the fatal decision—perhaps made jointly by Churchill and Lord Fisher, the first sea lord—to withdraw the armed cruiser escort which the Lusitania's captain expected to meet off Ireland.

At one point in the program, an actor speaking for the German government says: "It was Churchill's publicly declared policy to sink ships carrying American civilians. The Lusitania was his first great success. In a sense he won the war with it."

Both program and book stress the frantic efforts made in admiralty circles to ensure the official inquiry blamed the ship's master, Capt. William Turner.

Lord Mersey, who headed the inquiry, produced a compromise verdict, although he was previously instructed by an admiralty memo that it was "considered politically expedient that Capt. Turner . . . be most prominently blamed for the disaster."

The program's closing suggestion was to compare the possible strategic value of the Lusitania sinking with the atomic bomb on Hiroshima in 1945, which aimed to shorten the war and save a larger number of lives.

16 Buses Bombed

U.S. Anti-Gold Law Extends In Canada

By DAVE ABLETT
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — U.S. treasury department has made a new ruling extending U.S. laws to Canada.

It has ruled that Canadian subsidiaries of U.S. firms cannot buy or sell gold for their own use on the Winnipeg Commodities Exchange even though the subsidiaries are technically Canadian firms subject to Canadian laws.

Moreover, it is ruled the subsidiaries must take "reasonable measures" to assure that Canadians — or other non-U.S. citizens — "are not acting on behalf of U.S. citizens" when they buy gold future contracts on the Winnipeg market.

The firms, under the ruling, are allowed to engage only in brokerage — buying and selling gold future contracts for non-U.S. citizens — and taking the standard brokerage fee.

It is not clear how these firms will prevent Canadians from buying gold futures for U.S. citizens. Nothing in Canadian law prevents them from doing so.

But it is apparent that the Canadian subsidiaries for U.S. firms will have to ask their Canadian customers questions that strictly Canadian firms will not.

And, while it is not stated explicitly in the treasury order, it is clear that if Canadian subsidiaries do not take "these reasonable measures" the treasury will find the U.S. parent companies in violation of U.S. gold laws.

Under Canadian law, companies and individuals can buy and sell gold. Under the treasury department law, they can only do so which are supposed to qualified users of such as dentists, jewelling and specialized industry.

In essence, the rul have this effect:

Strictly Canadian f be able to sell gold f U.S. citizens or C acting for U.S. citi only the U.S. buyer tures will be subje law.

Subsidiaries of U on the other han breaking the law ther sell to U.S. fail to take "reas sures" to assure ans they sell to a for U.S. citizens both seller and treasury's penalt

The ruling says that U.S. firms that are members of foreign commodity exchanges may engage in brokerage activities on such exchanges with a treasury licence.

"At the same time," it continued, "brokerage firms may not acquire any interest in gold for their own account for present or future delivery.

"They must also take reasonable measures to assure that non-U.S. citizens with whom they transact business are not acting on behalf of U.S. citizens."

Community Action Saves Family From Separation

CREMONA, Alta. (CP) — Roy and Jean Luyendyk, who have provided a home for 31 children in 14 years of marriage, agreed four years ago to take care of four children from a family which the wife had deserted.

The understanding was that the husband might have them back as soon as he was able to provide for them.

But his contacts with the children became less frequent and the Luyendyks applied to the health and social development department of the Alberta government to make the children temporary wards.

The application was granted.

For three years the youngsters had a relatively secure home—in the company of eight other children, three of them adopted.

Then in May a social worker told the family the father had proved himself responsible and the children were to be returned at the end of the month.

The parents were upset, the children were opposed and the community was none too happy either.

DECISION REVERSED

Almost 100 letters of protest were sent to the government from neighbors who also urged the Luyendyks to seek legal aid in fighting the decision.

The outcome was a family court ruling allowing them to keep the children and proceed with adoption.

"We didn't wish the father any harm and we do realize that parents do have certain rights," said Mrs. Luyendyk.

"But we also believe that children have rights, too."

The community had earlier provided collective action to keep together the four children: Catherine, 6; Anne, 7; David, 8, and Timothy, 9.

The welfare department, as it used to be known, wanted to split them up because officials said the housing was inadequate.

So community residents collected nearly $1,000 which enabled the family to complete the basement of their house and use it as sleeping quarters for the children.

Mrs. Luyendyk said they have no qualms about looking after so many youngsters.

"We promised the Lord we'd never turn a child away."

STAYING TOGETHER as a family seemed a distant possibility for the four brothers and sisters above. They can ride a horse as a family today only because of their foster parents, who were aided by residents of Cremona, Alta. Roy and Jean Luyendyk (right photo) adopted the four children after their mother deserted them and their father seemingly lost interest. (CP Photos).

Van. Centre Planned

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The National Harbors Board is ready to negotiate with North Vancouver district for a lease of at least 60 years for 100 acres of NHB land on the waterfront near the Second Narrows Bridge for a proposed $150 million town centre, Ray Perrault, Liberal candidate in Burnaby-Seymour, said Monday.

He told a news conference he would seek federal financial support for some aspects of the proposed development.

Acting district Mayor Pat Slattery said negotiations with the NHB are expected to begin later this week when Mayor Ron Andrews returns from other business.

Extra Value means more than just a low price

Tip Top promises the best clothing values of any store in Canada. Which means two things.

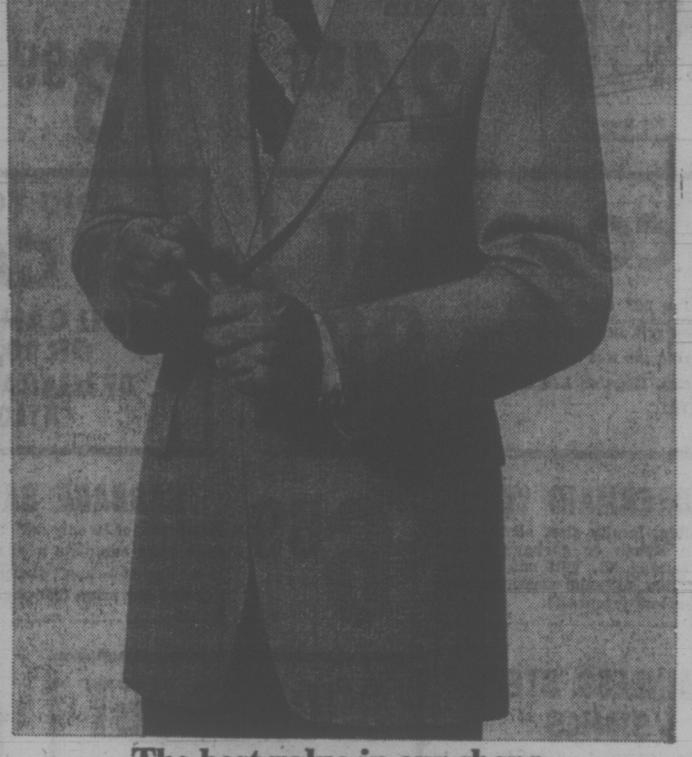
It means that our clothes are better. There's more care and skill in the tailoring. There's better cloth. And the very latest style details.

And it means our prices are better. Because we make most of what we sell in our own factory, we can sell it for less.

Our sport coats and blazers

What's big now in jackets? Colours. And we have them in country feelings, city feelings, or anywhere you're going feelings. In another store they would cost up to $75.00.

$59.88



The best value in our shops. Or anywhere else.

The crisp good-looks of a Tip Top two-pant suit will last for seasons. Fine, long-wearing, all-wool cloth.

$109.99

Beautifully patterned and currently coloured. Our competition wants up to $150.00 for this quality.

City Suitings

We're famous for our suit value. And why not?

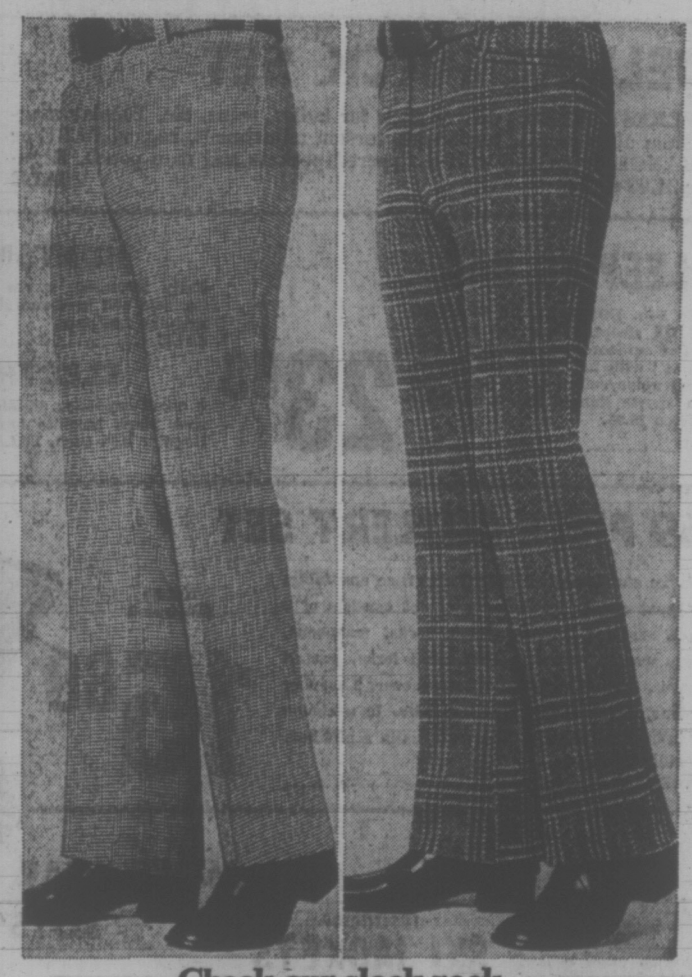
From our own fine tailors come suits, handsomely tailored from fine all-wool cloth. Checks (bold or glen), jacquards for the adventuresome, traditional solids for the traditionally solid. The kind of fashion other stores sell for up to $120.00.

$99.88

A different way to meet winter

Head straight into winter wearing a self-assured looking leather trench coat. Handsome detailing shows up in this double-breasted, semi-fitted style. Compare at up to $115.00.

$89.99



Check our slack rack

Knit pants. What better way to finish-off a look that starts with one of our sport coats. They never wrinkle. They're always comfy. And neatly patterned. Compare at $19.95. Plus, traditional weaves. $19.99. A $22.00 value.

Nurses Fight Apartheid

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — Living in what has been called "the last aristocracy in the world," most white South African children have a nurse or "nanny"—and she is always black.

But when those children grow up, fall ill, go into a private hospital and are faced with a black nurse at their bedside, many of them object.

One result has been a warning from the director of hospital services in the Transvaal, Dr. H. A. Grove, that such institutions may be closed if they continue to use black nurses.

His directive, designed to bring private hospitals into line with state-run institutions and also in line with apartheid, was met with an immediate reaction from a number of nurses. They formed what they call "a strong, tight action group" to campaign against "a disgrace."

Organizer is Irene McFadzean, a white nursing sister who resigned her post at the Johannesburg General Hospital to run the campaign.

The existence of apartheid in hospitals is not new nor are complaints against it. The state-run hospitals have for years been either white or black —increasingly so as new institutions are built.

On the other side, the South African Nursing Association has been fighting for equal pay for black nurses for more than 10 years.

But several factors have given the issue new life.

A major one is that there have been increasing signs that insistence on whites nursing whites is hampering medical services.

David Epstein, the opposition United party's hospital spokesman in the Transvaal, said that in April, there were 1,146 white patients' beds unoccupied in state-run provincial hospitals because of the shortage of nurses.

At the same time, the province was hiring 100 beds in private hospitals at about $1.25 million a year, he said.

In addition to costing taxpayers money, it was also causing suffering to "those who are ill and in need of hospital treatment but cannot gain admission to provincial hospitals."

Mrs. McFadzean said her group's inquiries showed much the same situation, and the one way to deal with it would be to raise nurses' pay in general.

But she added that it is black nurses who suffer most.

Under Dr. Grove's directive, "they have been given a list of jobs which they can perform and it seems they're all cleaning jobs," Mrs. McFadzean said.

She was certain that the complaints of patients, not nurses, had led to the directive: "I know this is so. The (white) nurses themselves are crying out that these trained people have been taken away from them—they need them and the doctors need them because of the skill they have."

Peking-Tokyo Talks 'Orphan' Taiwan

The Manchester Guardian

TAIPEI — Following Tokyo's rapprochement with Peking, Taiwan's leadership is now looking forward with apprehension to the inevitable.

Even the metaphors used by officials in their franker moments reflect Taiwans new sense of vulnerability. They speak of "being orphaned," of becoming "lost children in the world," of "having our backs to the wall."

Outwardly little has changed. The civil servants at the commission for the recovery of the mainland continue at their desks. The aged delegates of Shantung and Szechuan and other mainland provinces still creak to their feet at sessions of the legislative Yuan. The World Anti-Communist League (Asian Chapter) housed in a big brick palace in central Taipei carries on as usual.

And of course the old man himself, President Chiang Kai-Shek, aged and ailing though he may be, is still there.

But within the leadership a considerable although muffled debate has been going on for several months as to the proper strategy for the future. The comparatively young "technocrats" who are the largest identifiable group in the Nationalist government (as opposed to the Kuomintang Party) are agreed on one point above all others: that continued rapid economic growth and the further building up of a wide variety of trade links are the essential basis both for internal stability and as a means of securing external support.

Taiwans economy has grown at the astonishing average rate of 11 per cent annually over the last five years. The growth in labor productivity is still well ahead of the rise in wages and prices. A major dockyard is being constructed, as well as big petrochemical plants for the production of fertilizers and artificial fibres, and the island's first integrated steel mill is due to start production in 1976.

Taiwan is exporting increasingly sophisticated machinery and electronic goods and reducing its dependence on exports of textiles and foodstuffs.

The general policy was most clearly stated late last year by Y. S. Sun, one of the leading technocrats, in a speech which some diplomats refer to as the "economy first" speech. More revently Chiang Kai Shek's son, prime minister since June this year, has also made speeches stressing economic policy even though his own background is in ideological and military affairs.

These younger men within the cabinet and at senior civil servant level have economics degrees from U.S. universities and prefer to leave the ideology to others. They are inclined to make remarks like "developing countries spend too much time on politics."

But the nagging question is whether economic success alone will be sufficient to ensure political survival. Theoretically at least Taiwan has three political options — accomodation with the mainland, independence (that is, the acceptance of a Two Chinas policy) or the continuation of the status quo. Accommodation, observers agree, is a palatable prospect neither to the mainlanders nor to the Taiwanese proper, although a considerable number believe that it may be inevitable.

The problem rather is which of the other two courses would put Taiwan into the best position to avoid a deal with Peking altogether or if a deal must be made to get the best possible bargain.

Any suggestion to mainland Chinese officials here of the establishment of a "Chinese Republic of Taiwan" which would abandon any claim to be the legitimate government of all China meets with a routine rebuttal. But to many educated Taiwanese the Two Chinas policy looks like the right one and indeed they would argue it should have been adopted long ago and would have kept Taiwan in the United Nations.

One well informed Taiwanese commented:

"Virtually we have accepted the Two Chinas policy long ago . . . If this government keeps singing the song of going back to the mainland nobody knows what will happen. To us Taiwanese it's always been another China so it wouldn't make any difference to us." A senior mainland official, in contrast, argued that "once we abandon the philosophical and legal basis of our government there would be chaos here."

Others argue that it is too late for a Two Chinas policy anyway. The Shanghai communique of President Nixon and Chou En-Lai said that both the Communists and the Nationalists consider Taiwan an integral part of China and added that the U.S. "Does not challenge this position." In these circumstances whether an independent republic on Taiwan would get diplomatic recognition must be questionable.

One mainlander — not an official — brushed aside the argument.

"It wouldn't make any difference anyway. Sooner or later we are going to have to talk to Peking and arrange some gradual improvement of our relations and an eventual accommodation." He added that he might advise his children to go elsewhere but that he himself would probably stay.

The U.S. has done everything it can to offer reassurance, firmly restating its treaty commitment to Taiwan, encouraging U.S. investment and arranging a visit by Henry Kearns, Chairman of the U.S. export-import bank, during which he promised virtually unlimited credit to Taiwan which has so far this year received $385 million from that source.

But the suspicion remains that sometime within the next presidency, no doubt after Chiang Kai Shek's death, the U.S. while settling its affairs with Peking will forcefully suggest to Taiwan that it too begin talking to the Communists.

SMOKERS TOLD TO SEGREGATE

DENVER (UPI) — To protect the nonsmoker, the board of regents of the American college of chest physicians has ordered those who smoke to sit in a segregated area during the organization's convention.

The board also adopted a statement urging all physicians to prohibit smoking in clinics, offices and other public health places under their control and to adopt a health team approach as a way of helping patients quit smoking.

U.S. Arms For Ulster Rapped

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Desmond O'Malley, the Republic of Ireland's justice minister, said Tuesday night that United States money finances a "campaign of violence" in Northern Ireland and warned Americans not to be duped into giving money which might end up in the hands of the Irish Republican Army.

"To contribute money to the IRA is to damage, grievously, the interests of Ireland and the Irish people," he said.

Trudeau Cancels TV Date

TORONTO (CP) A four-way television debate involving the leaders of Canada's four major political parties cannot be arranged before the Oct. 30 general election because of Prime Minister Trudeau's tightly-packed campaign schedule, the CBC said Tuesday.

A CBC spokesman said informal approaches were made some time ago to Mr. Trudeau, Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, David Lewis of the New Democratic Party and Social Credit Leader Real Caouette for 90-minute debates on the CBC's English aand French networks.

However, when a formal proposal was submitted Oct. 15, the CBC was told by Mr. Trudeau's office that Mr. Trudeau's schedule for the final days of the campaign had been fixed and he would not be able to participate.

Censorship Shadow Over South America

NEW YORK (AP) — The censor is casting a longer shadow across Latin America.

Formal imposition of censorship, or other moves toward restraints on the presentation of news, have gained strength this year in major Latin-American countries. Both rightist and leftist governments are increasing their efforts to control what the people can read and hear.

The trend is shown in a survey taken by The Associated Press.

Here are highlights of the situation in key countries:

Brazil: Editors and broadcasters operate under what is called self-censorship.

When censors detect a subject they consider politically or morally offensive they tell editors not to divulge it.

Newsstands can be raided and publications seized.

There have been recent incidents of newspapers being confiscated and journalists charged under the severe National Security Law. Movies, plays and books are heavily censored.

Chile: There is no official press censorship, but officials have been increasing pressure on newspaper men.

A foreign ministry official warned an international news agency recently. "This is the last time we'll tolerate that sort of thing." He was complaining about an article that described shortages of food and other goods.

A week later a cabinet minister called in the reporter and complained about the same article, saying: "We won't allow this country's image abroad to be tarnished."

The going has been rough for people working for Chilean news media which oppose President Salvador Allende politically.

The Allende government in two years has filed 120 or more lawsuits against newspaper men or publications. Some persons have been jailed pending trial.

Argentina: The military government of Gen. Alejandro Lanusse incorporated press censorship into law Aug. 22. The government says that leftist guerrillas and others "notoriously dedicated to subversive activities" should not have access to the media.

Government spokesmen say they are at war with the half-dozen guerrilla groups operating since 1969 and the media should not be impartial.

Publication of guerrilla communiques, or any information that can be directly or indirectly traced to "terrorists or subversives," is punishable by six months to three years in jail.

The government closed the weekly news magazine Primera Plana and issued a warrant for the arrest of its director.

Primera Plana is accused of "inciting openly to subversion and deforming facts with the undisguised purpose of destroying the prestige of the government and national institutions."

It was owned by radical followers of the popular former president, Juan Peron, and sharply opposed the government.

Under press censorship, most of the Argentina public never learned that the terrorists who kidnapped a Dutch industrialist in early September were Montoneros, self-proclaimed followers of Peron.

The Argentine Publishers' Association, at its recent annual meeting, asked the government to cancel the new censorship law as unconstitutional.

Uruguay: Since 1967, the Montevideo government has practised press censorship, giving itself special powers under a state of siege to restrict publication of news involving the Tupamaro urban guerrillas.

Almost all the news published inside Uruguay about the Tupamaros has been from government sources.

A state security law enacted this year provides jail sentences for reporters, editors, broadcasters or publishers responsible for news stories damaging to "Uruguayan prestige."

Paraguay: There is no formal censorship under President Alfredo Stroessner, but the media practises self-censorship.

The president's office frequently phones to say what should or should not be published. When part-time correspondents for foreign news agencies try to transmit a controversial story, they are advised that the circuits are interrupted due to technical problems. The interruption can last for days.

Peru: The military government in Lima asserts the press is free to print anything so long as accuracy prevails. However, strong pressure for self-censorship exists through enforcement of the Freedom of the Press Statute decreed in 1970.

The government holds 51 per cent ownership of television stations, but TV reporters generally agree there's little if any pressure on news programing.

Panama: A government-appointed censor decides what will be published in the dailies.

Mexico: Government ownership of the newsprint monopoly has led to a form of self-censorship over the years.

Recently, however, papers have begun to criticize the government more openly. One or two are taking a fairly firm line of criticism. President Luis Echeverria said he welcomes that.

GM Blames Taxes For Costs

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — A spokesman for General Motors of Canada Ltd. blames Canada's excise and sales taxes and the higher cost of doing business in Canada for the higher costs of automobiles in Canada than in the United States.

The spokesman said Canada has an 11 to 12-per-cent excise tax that does not exist in the United States and a five-per-cent sales tax on automobiles.

He was commenting on a statement by David Lewis, federal New Democratic Party leader, who said it was grossly unfiar that Canadians must pay higher prices than U.S. residents for the same model cars.

The GM official said the higher cost of doing business in Canada also contributes to the higher price. He cited longer transporation routes, higher warranty cost because of weather and the fact that all written material must be printed in two languages.

Health Experts Split on Foods

By SHARLEEN BANNON

EDMONTON (CP) — Nutrition experts don't always see eye-to-eye on the question of organically grown foods.

"A carrot is a carrot, as far as I'm concerned," said Aileen Whitmore, food and nutrition consultant with the Alberta agriculture department.

"What's done to food before it reaches the stomach—soil, harvesting methods, fertilizers, food additives—must be considered, said Lilian Alexander who teaches a nutrition course at Grant MacEwan Community College in Edmonton.

Ms. Alexander—as she prefers to be known—said she believes unrefined flour, whole wheat bread, and all other foods with no chemical additives, are nutritionally superior.

Mrs. Whitmore said: "If a person wants to eat ugly-looking food that may be partially decayed, let them go ahead. The pity of it is, comparable products which are equally nutritious usually cost less."

PRICES HIGH

Both Ms. Alexander and Mrs. Whitmore in interviews agreed health food stores charge consumers an exorbitant price. But after that note of harmony on the topic of health foods, the agreement ends.

"There is no conclusive evidence to back the theory that organically-grown vegetables are nutritionally better," said Mrs. Whitmore, who has a BA in home economics from the University of British Columbia.

"Organically-grown foods are a luxury. We couldn't mass produce and preserve foods without chemical help."

She said "organically grown" refers to the use of natural fertilizer such as manure or decomposed vegetable matter rather than chemical fertilizers.

"Even snack foods like potato chips can be adequately fortified with additives to give them some food value."

Though disagreeing with those who oppose chemical additives in food products, she said such people have done nutritionists and the public a great service by drawing to their attention the importance of nutrition and the necessity constantly to reappraise dietary habits and food-processing methods.

BLAMES TV ADS

She noted that Canada's Food Guide, last published in 1961 by the federal health department, will not be reprinted until results of the federal health department's nutrition study of 21,000 Canadians are known.

Preliminary reports published in 1970 show that a high proportion of Canadians are poorly nourished. A final report, expected in 1974, will provide the basis for new public health programs and food and drug regulations.

Ms. Alexander, who has a master's degree in biochemistry and is head of the math-science department at the community college where she teaches nutrition, said television advertisers develop tastes for nutrition-empty, over-processed foods.

"Food producers are often ill-informed by home economists who know little about nutrition and advise their companies on the basis of their limited information.

"These people are often under tremendous pressure to justify the processing methods their company is using."

Mrs. Whitmore said the Alberta government relies mainly on information from the federal food and drug directorate on the safety and quality of commercial food products.

Ms. Alexander advised people to grow their own vegetables, grind their own flour, and if possible, eat meat from animals not fed with hormone additives.

She said she became interested in nutrition when she started to teach anatomy to nursing students and realized that what goes into the body helps determine what it is like.

RESTARTED HEARTS STILL GOING STRONG

TORONTO (CP) — A study of Montreal patients who were brought back to life after their hearts stopped beating has found that half are still alive three years later and in no worse health.

Doctors Jean Lemaire and Arnold L. Johnson, both of McGill University, described the study to the Canadian Cardiovascular Society.

The doctor said their study shows restarting the heart of a "dead" patient is worthwhile "since it can save from a continued state of death one out of five patients."

They said 1,204 patients who suffered cardiac arrest in Royal Victoria Hospital between 1960 and 1970 were given resuscitation by a team of doctors and nurses.

The treatment brought 230 patients back to live.

Bible Index Readied

BRUSSELS (AP) — With the help of three Benedictine nuns, two monks and a computer, a Belgian priest is completing what he hopes will be the most useful index to the Bible yet produced.

Rev. Georges Passalecq is himself a monk from the big Benedictine Abbey at Maredsous, known for its mild cheese and strong beer as well as for its deep learning. A bustling little man of 63, he spends only about a quarter of his time within its walls.

Just now he is concerned to get some publisher in the United States to translate his Analytical and Analogical Index from French into English. His computer can't do that. Father Georges speaks English himself — as well as French, German, Dutch, Italian, Latin, Greek and Hebrew—but he says this job ought to be put into the hands of someone who can work in his own mother tongue.

"The Bible," he explains, "is the word of God and is used by religious Jews and Christians as a source of prayer and meditation. It is also a reference work used by every writer and reader who deals with history, philosophy, theology, ethics, ancient literature or even sociology."

He wants to provide these writers, students and readers with an easy to use reference tool that will help them find any passage they need.

CARDS PILE UP

Many indexes to the Bible, called "concordances," already exist. They list every passage in which a given word is used.

Look up "crime" in Father Georges' index and you will get references not only to the word itself, but also to passages that recount specific crimes even though the word "crime" itself does not happen to appear in them: the murder of Abel, the rape of Tamar, King David's adultery and his plot against poor Uriah the Hittite.

Father Georges began his index in 1958 and after 10 years found he had collected 80,000 index cards. At this point he enlisted the help of the nuns and monks and arranged to share — at night, on holidays and in other free time—an IB M370 computer of a Brussels bank.

City Eyes Taxes

EDMONTON (CP) — City council decided Monday to charge municipal taxes against nursing homes and senior citizens' homes currently exempt from taxation.

Aldermen adopted an administration recommendation aimed at charging the city portion of the property tax against all types of accommodation.

Men Crash Sex Barriers

By DEE WEDEMEYER

NEW YORK (AP) — Proving that women haven't a corner on the liberation movement, American men are breaking down sex barriers in jobs usually thought of as woman's work. They are becoming secretaries, telephone operators, nurses and flight attendants.

The biggest break-throughs are coming in the telephone and airline industries, two major employers of women.

A spokesman for American Telephone and Telegraph said it now has 1,100 male operators among its 165,000 and another 400 men among the 34,500 service representatives, the people who answer questions about bills and arrange service. Five years ago there were virtually no men in these positions.

At Eastern Airlines, a spokesman said the company has received more than 9,000 applications from men since it began running unisex ads in March. Before then, it had about 150 stewards. Now it has 320 stewards and 3,458 stewardesses.

A spokesman for the Airline Stewards and Stewardesses Association in Chicago said the organization was anticipating similar increases in other airlines as a result of a court decision last year which said airlines could not use sex as an occupation qualification in cabin attendant jobs.

LIKE THE WORK

In interviews, men in formerly female domains cited a variety of reasons for their job choice. Many said they started part time while in college and now, in a tight job market, are having trouble getting promoted or finding another job.

Others said the pay was better than in white-collar jobs available to men with less than a college education. Nearly all noted that such jobs as secretaries and telephone operators had been historically held by men.

Except for occasional complaints about being addressed as Miss or being thought of as homosexual, nearly everyone interviewed liked most aspects of their jobs. Many said they had learned a lot about human foibles, especially chauvinism. Several said they had discovered a great fringe benefit—the new jobs are a good place to meet women.

Jose Carbone, 23, a service representative at New York Telephone Co. in Manhattan, said he had no idea when he applied for the job two years ago that it was predominantly held by women. He said he thought it sounded like an interesting job then and he still does.

NO OFFICE DATES

He said the pay, $146.50 to $179.50 a week in Manhattan, is not bad for someone who has finished only two years of college. He enjoys working with the 63 women and six other men in his office and he's gained a sympathy for the woman's plight.

Carbone said that so far he has made it a rule never to date any of the women in the office. But a colleague, Lou Scotto, 22, married a co-worker in June.

Higinio (Gino) Albelo, 29, a former air force technical sergeant, who is a steward for Eastern Airlines, said he chose the job because he has never got over his fascination with airplanes and likes to travel, though he has no ambition to be a pilot. Eventually he'd like to go into another phase of the airline business.

Albelo, a handsome man who could pass for a pilot in his black uniform with one gold stripe on the cuff, finds opportunities are plentiful. Businessmen give him their cards and ask him to call if he'd like to change jobs. Women invite him to dinner.

BOSSES LIKE MEN

In other fields the men are moving slowly but steadily.

Statisticians at the American Nurses Association in Kansas City, Mo., said the total number of male registered nurses has been increasing but they expected only a slight increase in the percentage—less than one per cent of about 909,000 when last counted in 1966.

The same applies to elementary school teachers. In 1961 the 127,171 men who were teaching represented only 14.5 per cent of the total. In 1971, the 176,913 men teachers were 15.5 per cent of the total.

Joe Rodriguez, 22, a secretary placed with a Park Avenue law firm through another agency, said that when he left college after two years, he first took a $96-a-week bank job. When he discovered the job was more proofreading than bank, he decided to take a secretarial job at $155 a week.

Rodriguez, who is in a secretarial pool, said he thinks the men in the office like having him work for them because he's fast—80 words a minute typing and 110 stenography—and because they don't have to apologize for saying a curse word in his presence.

NATO Plans Conference With USSR

BRUSSELS (AP) — Members of the NATO alliance agreed Monday to two conferences with the Soviet Union and other countries: one on security and co-operation in Europe and the other on mutual and balanced force reductions, authoritative sources said.

It is expected that the U.S. will transmit this agreement to Moscow, where approval is considered likely.

Exploratory talks for the first conference will start in Helsinki Nov. 22. Finland has invited the U.S., Canada and 32 European countries — East, West and neutral.

In January, preparatory talks are due to start on force reductions, probably in Geneva.

Vote Machine the Key to Mather Seat

By DENNIS BELL

VANCOUVER (CP) — In the huge Surrey-White Rock riding south of Vancouver, it's Robert Thompson's big blue Tory vote machine versus Barry Mather's socialist hordes express for the organization championship of next Monday's federal election.

Mr. Thompson, 58, is a refugee from the Social Credit party he once led and the Red Deer, Alta., riding he represented in the Commons. He's trying to get back into Parliament by stealing Surrey-White Rock from the New Democratic Party with the prototype of a campaign organization he and other top Tory strategists have been building on paper since 1968.

Mr. Mather, 63, finishes the campaign this weekend with a formidable piece of NDP machinery of his own, battle-tested most recently in the Aug. 30 British Columbia election in which the NDP ran away with everything in the Surrey-White Rock chunk of the lower mainland.

"I'm putting into practice the very effective organization I've been talking about within the party," said Mr. Thompson, who took his ideas on a cross-Canada tour to other Tory riding associations last year at the insistence of Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

The former Social Credit leader, who quit the party in 1967 to run successfully as a Tory in Red Deer a year later, moved to the West Coast last year "for personal and family health reasons." A reluctant candidate at first, now he talks enthusiastically about "poll organization, vertically, in depth," and the 600 people he has working for him.

What it means is three canvassers for every poll in a given riding.

"Socialist hordes," an epithet hurled at the NDP by former premier W. A. C. Bennett during the provincial campaign, has been adopted by the New Democrats as a term of endearment. They wear green and black buttons reading "I am a member of the socialist hordes" now that B.C. has an NDP government.

The New Democrats, with 300 party workers, are something less than terrified by Mr. Thompson's debut in Surrey White Rock.

The Liberal candidate is Ed Carlin, a 35-year-old junior high school principal.

Four years ago, Mr. Mather, a former columnist with The Sun, weathered Trudeaumania and topped the polls with 16,189 votes, compared with 11,686 for the Liberal and 5,986 for a Tory and 2,445 for a Social Crediter.

Social Credit is in the running again next Monday with Ben Schroeder, a 44-year-old school janitor making his first try at politics.

THOMPSON
. . . Socred Refugee

The riding has grown phenomenally since the last election and there are estimates that 20,000 of the 61,630 persons on the voters lists now are eligible to cast ballots for the first time.

There are about 11,000 old-age pensioners in the riding concentrated in the White Rock area. Inflation and pensions are major issues with them. The constituency also has a mix of farmers in its eastern section, where the big issues are agricultural policy and federal-provincial help for dikes and drainage systems along the Fraser River.

HAVE A LOT IN COMMON

Mr. Mather and Mr. Thompson have a lot in common. They were both first elected to the Commons in 1962, Mr. Mather in the old New Westminster riding, Mr. Thompson in Red Deer. Outside of political pyrotechnics, the two men are good friends.

Mr. Thompson noted—more than a little regretfully—that when he announced his candidacy in Surrey-White Rock "I expected Barry Mather to retire, that was the general impression even until the election was called."

Mr. Mather, a prolific author of private member's bills during his 10 years in Parliament, claims the government's breath analysis law for impaired drivers had its origins in a 1968 bill he drafted.

In 1969 he brought in three bills on cigarette advertising —a field in which Mr. Thompson was also active—resulting in federal health and welfare committee hearings on the subject.

This year he proposed an "opportunities for age' bill which, he says, was watered down and re-introduced by the Trudeau government as the New Horizons program.

CTC Cavalier on B.C. Tel Rate Hikes, Says Pollen

Mayor Peter Pollen has written to the Canadian Transport Commission in Ottawa expressing disgust at the commission's "cavalier and legalistic" attitude in refusing to review a decision reached more than a year ago on British Columbia Telephone rates.

He charges that the CTC's handling of the matter is "most pitiful" by contrast with the "aggressive scrutiny" of similar monopolies in the United States by that country's federal government.

Pollen's letter to the commission continues: "It would appear that you have become not a commission seeking to serve the public of Canada by a vigorous and sustained scrutiny of monopolistic practices but rather a judicial body making decisions or judgments based upon submissions from corporate giants and an almost voiceless and unorganized public.

"This situation is certainly an indictment of our current federal scene."

If the CTC had any genuine interest in the public welfare, he says, it would be concerned "at the very corporate structure of Anglo-Canadian Telephone Company (of Montreal), with its controlled subsidiary, B.C. Tel, on the left, and its wholly-owned subsidiaries, Dominion Directory, Canadian Telephone Equipment and Lenkurt Electric on the right . . ."

The mayor alleges that this corporate structure leads to lack of competitive bidding on equipment purchasing and installation, the "draining off" of profitable yellow page advertising from B.C. Tel into Dominion Directory and lack of full financial disclosure to the public on the subsidiaries.

All these facts, he says, "make a mockery of your commission's function as an instrument for the protection of the public of Canada."

In an earlier letter to Pollen the CTC said a request for a review of its July 30, 1971, decision on B.C. Tel rates should have been lodged within 30 days of that decision, and the commission sees no need to waive that regulation.

TOMBSTONES ON DOORSTEP

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Logan residents are finding tombstones on their doorsteps.

The police said tombstones have been found on doorsteps at least once a week for the last several weeks. They said there were two such incidents Sunday.

Officials said the grave markers are being stored in the police garage until they can find out where they came from.

Nixon Aide Linked to Spy Fund

By CARL BERNSTEIN and BOB WOODWARD
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — H. R. Haldeman, President Nixon's White House chief of staff, was one of five high-ranking presidential associates authorized to approve payments from a secret Nixon campaign cash fund, according to federal investigators and accounts of sworn testimony before the Watergate grand jury.

The secret fund, which at times totalled $800,000, was uncovered during the FBI's Watergate bugging investigation. It financed an apparently unprecedented spying and sabotage campaign against Democratic presidential candidates that was conceived by high Nixon aides, according to federal investigators.

Haldeman, 47, is generally consider the man closest to President Nixon in the White House and the primary architect of his re-election campaign. He began his political association with the president in 1956, as an advance man for Nixon's vice-presidential campaign.

Informed Tuesday of the information obtained by the Washington Post, Haldeman issued the following statement through the White House press office:

"Your inquiry is based on misinformation because the reference to Bob Haldeman is untrue."

Haldeman and Gerald Warren, the deputy White House press secretary, refused to elaborate on the statement.

According to the sworn testimony, others authorized to approve payments from the fund — all of them among President Nixon's closest confidantes and all named in previous reports by the Washington Post, are:

Former attorney-general John Mitchell, who resigned as Nixon's campaign manager July 1; former secretary of commerce Maurice Stans, the finance chairman of the Nixon re-election campaign; Jeb Stuart Magruder, a former White House assistant to Haldeman and now deputy director of Nixon's re-election campaign, and Herbert Kalmbach, the president's personal lawyer who, until April 7, served as associate finance chairman of the Nixon campaign.

Sources report that all five were named in testimony to the grand jury by Hugh Sloan Jr., the former treasurer of the Nixon campaign. Sources close to the investigation said they had confirmed independently of Sloan that the five men had control of the fund.

Among the persons who received payments from the secret fund, Sloan is known to have told the grand jury, was Gordon Liddy, one of the seven men indicted on charges of conspiring to eavesdrop in the Democrats' headquarters inside the Watergate.

Liddy, an ex-White House aide and former finance counsel of the Nixon re-election committee, withdrew $50,000, according to investigators.

In addition, investigators have said the fund was used to pay for the activities of Donald Segretti, identified by federal officials as an agent provocateur allegedly hired by White House aides to disrupt and damage the campaigns of Democratic presidential candidates.

Expenditures of hundreds of thousands of dollars — all approved by either Haldeman, Stans, Mitchell, Magruder or Kalmbach — were made from the secret fund to pay for an extensive undercover campaign aimed at discrediting individual Democratic candidates, according to federal investigators.

The only record of the secret fund was a single sheet of lined yellow ledger paper on which were listed the names of about 15 people who withdrew money from it, alongside a running total of their withdrawal it was learned.

That list was destroyed by a Nixon campaign official after five men were arrested inside the Democrats' Watergate headquarters on June 17.

In one of the few official comments on the secret fund, the president's campaign manager, Clark MacGregor, told a group of reporters on Aug. 17 that Liddy, the former committee finance counsel, spent campaign money on his own iniative.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

All Parties Seek Three Million New Votes

By PAUL VASEY
...Canadian Press

Nearly three million young voters are eligible to vote next Monday for the first time, but political organizers agree that only about half will do so.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that all parties have been wooing the votes of the 2.8 million new voters between 18 and 24 in one way or another.

Some parties are not campaigning directly for youth votes because they feel it would be "patronizing."

All, however, have approached youth where they commonly are found — in high schools, colleges and universities across the land.

Party leaders, local candidates and party organizers have found their way into schools, youth centres and "hangouts" to give speeches, take part in debates, hand out literature and answer questions.

SAY IT'S TOSS-UP

It's a toss-up, say many student leaders and spokesmen. A New Brunswick student leader said: "For many, it's a vote for tweedle-dum or tweedle-dee."

In Prince Edward Island, young voters may be leaning toward Robert Stanfield, Progressive Conservative leader.

In Ontario, the Liberals and a Conservative organizer feel Prime Minister Trudeau has the edge. In British Columbia, many say New Democratic Party leader David Lewis will do well.

The survey showed few disturbances during political speeches or debates.

HERE'S A RUNDOWN

The youth vote scene, province by province, looks like this:

In Newfoundland, Conservatives say student interest in the election is higher than expected, but the Liberals say there will be no heavy turnout.

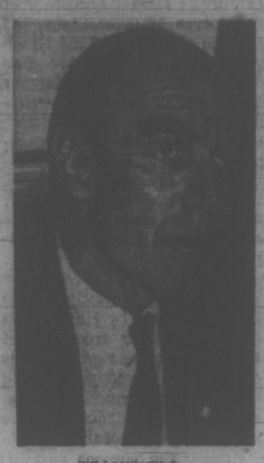
Candidates from both parties have gone into the schools for speeches and informal get-togethers, and information kiosks have been set up.

In Nova Scotia, all parties agreed about half the new voters would turn up at the polls.

A Liberal organizer said young voters will probably not vote in greater numbers than other age groups; a Conservative said there are "pockets" of concerned young voters who will vote; and an NDP spokesman said "we've made an effort to advise the young how to become voters and where to vote."

All three parties have been trying to inform young people of election matters with the Liberals and Conservatives organizing educational programs.

All parties have been emphasizing the need to vote, rather than the need to vote for one particular party.



STANFIELD
. . . P.E.I. sewed up

Liberal, Conservative, NDP and Social Credit party leaders have met Prince Edward Island students in the schools, but organizers feel only about half have been spurred to vote.

Leaders and candidates were often faced with loaded questions and sharp comebacks. One organizer said "the kids" are no longer asking what will be done about Canadian problems, but how will things be done and why.

"It's no good to answer in platitudes or theory," he said.

AREN'T 'WOUND UP'

New Brunswick political organizers from all parties are expecting a good turnout of young voters, although a Social Credit worker said young voters are "not all wound up." An NDP spokesman said his party has received more enquiries than usual.

Roy Neale, president of the University of New Brunswick student council, said a lot of students could lose their votes if officials "want to get sticky about dual enumerations." He said many students appeared on lists in both home and school ridings.

A Quebec Liberal organizer said about 60 per cent of the province's new voters would exercise the franchise, and the Conservatives are conducting their own poll on the matter. The NDP expects strong participation.

A Social Credit organizer said the majority of young voters will go to the polls, rejecting separatist suggestions that they stay away.

ATTITUDES VARY

Student leaders and spokesman had varying attitudes on the election, depending on whether they were at French- or English-speaking universities.

Spokesmen at French-speaking universities said most students will not vote, but at English-speaking campuses, the indications were voting would be heavy.

Few students reported election activities on campus, although some information booths had been set up.

In Ontario, Liberal and Conservative spokesmen said they found high-school age voters more apathetic. A Liberal spokesman said "first-time voters sometimes feel the whole process . . . is a little mysterious."

TRUDEAU
. . . holds Ontario

Conservative organizer Ian Green said "The Liberal party will get the largest amount of the youth vote" but said interest generally is not high because of a lack of "gut issues."

NDP organizer Barbara Caplan said her party is not aiming specifically at the youthful voter because it would appear "patronizing."

URGED TO VOTE

Kathy Robinson, a Liberal spokesman, said the party instituted a "Show You Care" campaign among young voters and is attempting to encourage as many as possible to get to the polls to take advantage of an apparent edge in youth opinion.

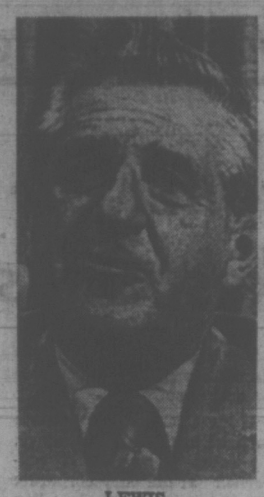
A Manitoba Conservative said early in the campaign he was "totally disillusioned" by the apathy of young voters, but said since that time indications point to increased interest. A Liberal spokesman said there would be a light youth vote, a view shared by a NDP organizer.

Both Liberals, with an "I Care" campaign, and the Conservatives with a "Youth for Stanfield" campaign, have been actively wooing young voters. The NDP has no specific campaign.

Party leaders and Liberal cabinet ministers have appeared at schools. Peter Mitchell, a University of Manitoba student councillor, said the majority of students do not appear to be interested in or well informed about the election.

"I would tend tend to say they will probably vote like their parents door not at all," he said.

The situation is similar in Saskatchewan where the Liberals and Conservatives are staging specific youth-vote campaigns. The NDP, however, is confident of taking a large section of the youth vote with an increased number of young candidates and party workers.



LEWIS
. . . B.C. vote his

Young Alberta voters do not appear to have been specifically wooed by any party, although candidates and party leaders made the rounds of schools and universities.

Conservatives predicted a light youth vote while some Liberals thought it would be heavy.

A Conservative spokesman said only "a few Communists and anti-Vietnam spokesmen" showed up for an all-candidates meeting near the University of Alberta.

NDP organizers in British Columbia were hopeful that the recent election of a provincial NDP government would influence federal voting. One spokesman said "the interest is there."

COULD SURPRISE

Liberal spokesmen agreed that first-time voter turnout is not usually heavy and there would be little change this election, but the Conservative felt the turnout could be higher than expected.

The Liberals and Conservatives are actively seeking the youth vote, but the NDP is not.

One university student councillor said "there hasn't been a great deal of interest here" in the election and another said "as far as students are concerned, nothing really pressing is coming up at this election."

Black Actors Charge Bias

By LINDA DEUTSCH

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A truce between Hollywood and minority groups—soothed by lucrative all-black movies and heightened minority employment—is being shaken by angry complaints, demands and charges of bias.

In recent weeks the movie industry has been faced with:

—Protests from powerful black organizations that the new "black on black" movies demean them by portraying only dope pushers, pimps and prostitutes.

—Demands that black review boards censor all black-theme films before production and pre-edit them before release.

—Pressure for higher pay to black actors and big chunks of profits from black films to be turned over to the black community for education and other improvements.

—A dispute over a Greek actor playing a Mexican-American.

—Controversy over white actor Anthony Quinn's plan to portray black Haitian Emperor Henry Christophe in the movie Black Majesty.

—A new list of complaints from the ethnic minorities committee of the Screen Actors Guild.

Movie industry executives, although refusing official comment, indicated shock at the sudden flareup of antagonism. They noted that both the quality of minority film roles and employment status in general have improved in recent years.

Even protesting groups concede that films have come a long way since blacks were depicted as servants, Indians were savages, Mexican-Americans were bandits, Italians were gangsters and women were housewives or prostitutes.

Still, they say, there are miles to go.

"Leaders of the film industry," says one industry spokesman, "do feel responsible to try to make minority employment fair and equitable. But it's a slow process, particularly because of bad employment in general."

As for complaints of "black exploitation" movies, the spokesman says: "The blacks tend to forget about the number of lousy white exploitation films made. There are a lot of white actors who would be ashamed to admit to the films they made early in their careers."

Blacks say it goes far beyond that, with black movies influencing society's view of the black commmunity.

"Television and motion pictures are perhaps the strongest propaganda medium," says a black film industry member. "What people see there they tend to believe. If they see blacks only as criminals they tend to believe that."

Films singled out for pressure groups' attacks include Shaft, Cotton Comes to Harlem, Come Back, Charleston Blue and Superfly.

Such films, they say, have replaced the "shuffling" menial black stereotype with an equally unreal and demeaning "supernigger" who has "vast physical powers but no cognitive skills."

In Superfly, the hero is a dope dealer.

"The producers don't understand," says a black employee of a major studio, "that when you get someone who makes love at the drop of his pants, that's as bad as someone who rolls his eyeballs."

Whites in the industry note that many of the more than 50 all-black films produced since 1970 had black creators and producers.

Junius Griffin, president of the Beverly Hills-Hollywood branch of the NAACP, answers this, saying: "Black producers are front men for white society. . . . The only way whites can get the black community is through a black broker."

Grenada Seeks Independence

LONDON (UPI) Premier Eric Gairy of Grenada began preliminary talks with the British government Tuesday about independence for his Caribbean island.

British officials said the purpose of the talks was to discuss the possibility of terminating Grenada's status as an associated state in the British Commonwealth and replacing it by full independence. They stressed the "preliminary" nature of the discussions.

Gairy won re-election as premier of Grenada last February on a program of winning full independence within the Commonwealth instead of remaining one of the six West Indies associated states. Grenada, with a population of a little over 100,000, has been an associated state since 1967.

China Opens Itself to the Rest of World

By JOHN RODERICK

SHANGHAI (AP) — The cities of Shanghai, Peking and Canton are the same, but the people are different. They are freer, more open, more relaxed. In 18 months, there has been a subtle change of the spirit.

The Chinese sprung of 1971 witnessed the budding of the new internationalism encouraged by Premier Chou En-lai. The "ping pong diplomacy" of that period flowered into the U.S. and Japanese summit meetings of February and September, 1972.

The process continues, both at home and abroad. China—once a place of closely guarded secrets, paranoic suspicion and rigidly held dogma—has begun to unbend.

I was in China in the 1940s and returned 18 months ago, at the time of the table-tennis games, for the first time in 23 years. Lately I was back again, permitted to be a member of the news party accompanying the Japanese prime minister.

Chinese now seem less afraid to talk politics. Ordinary Chinese speak of the fallen fortunes of Mao Tse-tung's heir-designate, Lin Piao, and the disappearance of his old secretary, Chen Pota, in a way which would not have been possible in April last year.

Somewhat nervously, they are able to laugh at themselves.

In answer to a question, our guide gives us the straight party line.

"Come on, that's not the real answer," we say.

Wide-eyed, she says: "Don't you believe it?"

"No," we reply.

Last year, this response would have provoked hurt and indignation. Instead, there is the sound of amused laughter.

One change, much remarked, is the absence of giant paintings, statues and photographs of Mao. Those that remain are less obtrusively placed. The hotels in all three cities where we stayed are almost totally innocent of them. They have been replaced at the Canton rail station, gateway to China, with vast paintings welcoming sports delegations.

Mao buttons and Mao books of quotations can be found, but they too are much rarer. The explanation is that Mao decreed all this, that Lin Piao grievously sinned by trying through pictures, buttons and books to deify the party leader.

There are small signs of the times. We complain about the din from the loudspeakers, rattling off quotations and Maoist songs, in our Shumchun-Canton express. A girl attendant reaches up and turns it off. That once would have been sacrilege.

The processions no longer exist. Everywhere we went a year and half ago, we saw thousands of boys and girls marching into the countryside, carrying red flags, a portrait of Mao at their head. They were going out to learn from the peasants.

Is the learning period over? There are no adequate explanations.

Our Chinese hosts, after a moment's hesitation, accept an American cigarette. Thunder and lightning do not strike them down. They even consent to be taken out to dinner, both unheard of before.

The new mood springs from a feeling of greater self-confidence. The Americans, Japanese and other foreigners have been met and found to be no better nor any worse than they.

Internally, following the shocks and after-shocks of the cultural revolution, there is at least a surface stability. The restaurants do a booming business. Fruit and vegetable stalls are open around the clock. Buddhist shrines closed during the cultural revolution are tidied up and reopened to thousands of the curious.

None of this means that China has overnight become a free society. It is more open than it was 18 months ago, but nowhere as permissive in the scope and range of allowed criticism of the leadership—Mao excepted—as during the cultural revolution.

The Communist party continues to call the tune for China's millions. It decrees where they will live, what jobs they will do and who will go abroad. So far, foreign travel is confined to a trickle of officials. No Chinese tourists will be gawking at New York's skyscrapers or strolling down the Champs Elysees for a long time to come.

Rough-Cut Lawn Corners Offer Bulbs Natural Site

One advantage of rough, closely cut grass instead of a conventional fine-grass lawn is in being able to naturalize small bulbs without harm from too much fertilizing, watering and weed-killing.

This old fashioned method of producing masses of early color is also a labor saving device for today's gardeners who want to devote more leisure time to relaxing in the garden.

After the initial planting in fall, the bulbs will stay in the ground to multiply through the years. One requirement is that their leaves must be given the opportunity to mature before the grass is cut in spring.

To make this possible, plant the bulbs in defined areas not broadcast all over the whole grass plot. For instance, plant the bulbs in groups and drifts at the point most distant from your main viewpoint. The rest of the grass can then be cut without affecting the spots where the bulbs are growing.

Also, you will not be constantly aware of the grass becoming longer as the rampant May growing season progresses.

Used in a plot of rough grass behind the house such a planting gives a pleasantly informal early spring picture, backed by the trees and shrubs of the main planting design.

Once the bulb leaves start browning off, regular thrice weekly grass cutting will keep down whatever weed seedlings have invaded the planted areas, preventing them from forming seed.

Bilbs suitable for planting in grass: Chionodoxa (March flowering, blue); Galanthus (Snowdrop, February); Scilla (February-March, blue); Puschkinia (March-April, blue); Muscari (March, blue); Anemone nemerosa (April, pale lilac); Crocus imperati (January-March); C. chrysanthus (Feb.-March); early species of Narcissus, N. lobularis.

If the soil is inclined to be heavy, you should lift foot-square turf by cutting on three sides and rolling back. Loosen the soil, add bonemeal, plant the bulbs and then replace the turf.

In sandy soils, make holes with a crowbar, drop in screen compost soil with bonemeal, put the bulb firmly in the hole. Refill and pull the grass tops together again.

The grass plot should have a cut just before the initial fall planting, from then on, the mower can be guided between the bulb groups by a careful hand.

Similar schemes have been used in areas of Beacon Hill Park, where crocusses and daffodils naturalized in rough grass have delighted Victoria residents and visitors for many years. All summer and fall the grass is kept closely mowed and attractive.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, our South declarer went down at a small-slam contract simply because he was not aware of the "book" safety-play in the trump suit. Had a more knowing player been occupying the South seat, he would have handled the set-up with consummate ease.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

After winning West's opening heart lead with his queen, South led the deuce of diamonds to dummy's ace — and the roof caved in when East discarded a club. West, with the Q-10-6 of trumps remaining, could not now be prevented from winning two trump tricks.

Without any doubt, declarer was unlucky in running into the horrendous 4-0 trump break, with West the possessor of the four missing trumps. (had East possessed them, declarer would have been able to finesse against East's queen and ten, and actually would have avoided the loss of even one trump trick). But the fact is that declarer could, and should, have fulfilled his contract.

At trick two, declarer should have led the trump king. With East failing to follow suit, the two of trumps would be led next, West putting up the ten (if West followed with a low trump instead, dummy's eight would be inserted, of course, with the assurance that the eight would win the trick).

Upon winning the trick with dummy's ace, the eight of diamonds would be led next, South playing low as West captured the trick with his queen. When he regained the lead, declarer would lay down his jack of trumps, picking up West's remaining trump.

The beauty of declarer's initial lead of the trump king is that it would be guaranteed to restrict declarer's trump losers to a maximum of one trick, regardless of which opponents (if either) had the four outstanding trumps. If, in theory, West failed to follow suit to South's lead of the king, a low trump would be led next to the board's ace.

Then would come a third trump lead (off dummy) and East, with the hypothetical Q-10 remaining in front of South's J-9-7, would make just one trump trick, the queen.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"My watch has stopped again. I only had it fixed last week," said Mary. "What's the time?"

Les thought a moment. "You figure it out," he replied. "Half the time since two o'clock this afternoon, added to a third of the time still to go before midnight, makes the time now."

That didn't help much! Can you get it?

SMOG CHARS DOGS' LUNGS

TOKYO (UPI) — The air in Tokyo is so polluted, a medical researcher said today, that most dogs have black lungs.

Dr. Kazuo Takemoto said autopsies performed on 2,000 stray dogs showed four of every five had black lungs — an indication of heavy pollution — and five were suffering from lung cancer.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOLDING—In memory of Victor R. Holding who died October 25, 1970.
They say that time will ease the pain and help us to forget
But time so far has only shown how much we miss you yet.
We miss your smile, your voice, your talk;
the things we used to do.
We miss the happy times we had mostly we miss you.
—Remembered by Agnes, Monty, Vickie and Tony.

IRISH—In ever loving memory of our mother, Dorothy E. A. Irish, who passed away Oct. 25, 1969; our dad, William Sanford Irish, April 19, 1948; our aunt, Ruth Jessie Hyde, Nov. 19, 1969.
Always remembered.—Mae Petersen, Agnes Long.

PRICE—Charlie: In loving memory of our father, Charlie, who passed away October 25, 1958.
His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall,
He had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day we know not when
To clasp his hand in a better land
Never part again.
—Always in our thoughts—Joyce, Charlie and Bill.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A Sharp Stick in the Mouth

I am always distressed when I see a small child running with a sharp pencil or the stick of a lolly-pop in his mouth. Why? Because I know that if the child trips and falls on his face he will be in serious danger of driving the stick into his palate or throat.

Many years ago a mother brought into my office her child who had fallen with a lolly-pop stick in his mouth, and had driven it far up through his palate. As I pulled the stick out, I was praying that brain tissue would not come following the stick out of the hole. If the stick had gone up into the brain, the child would probably have gotten a meningitis which, in pre-penicillin days, could have been fatal. Fortunately, the stick had not gone into the skull cavity.

But every time I see a child running with a lolly-pop stick in his mouth, I am uneasy, and want to warn the mother of the terrible chance that she is allowing her child to take.

ARE THERE APHRODISIACS?

Recently, the American Medical Association published a book entitled "Human Sexuality," in which it is stated that "There is no such thing as an aphrodisiac." As most people know, an aphrodisiac is a drug which produces a desire for sex and an ability to perform sex.

Around 1900, many men tried the cantharide, or "Spanish Fly," but this was only an irritant poison. Today many men try male sex hormone, but I have never heard of its increasing a man's potency.

Some of the lads who are now taking LSD, heroin, cocaine, and marijuana, hope to have more success in their sexual life, but again, I rarely hear that one of these drugs helped. Actually, heroin has the opposite effect; it can produce a marked reduction in sexual activity.

The Chinese believe that if they take a powder made from the horn of the powerful rhinoceros they will become sexually powerful, and this belief is responsible for the fact that the rhinoceros is being killed in large numbers by poachers, and is now faced with the possibility of extinction. This is unfortunate, because the powdered rhinoceros horn is no more effective than any other supposed aphrodisiac.

$3M Referendum Gets Sooke Trustee Nod

A $3 million proposed building referendum was approved by the Sooke district school board Tuesday night in spite of criticism from referendum committee chairman Ron Fitton.

Fitton told the Times today he considered building proposals contained in the referendum to be short-sighted; he said trustees had not been kept properly informed of facts and figures; and he said more should be done to find out what the new government intended to do about raising building capital.

But secretary-treasuer Les Wheeldon says a December 9 referendum is the only way to attempt to secure funds urgently needed to cater for Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

Fitton said he was worred about shortage of money for Sooke's Edward Milne high school and about the absence of a long-range plan for the school.

He said there had been a breakdown in communications between trustees — particularly himself — and the district administration.

"As trustees we're not being listened to enough," he said. "The new minister (Eileen Dailly) says the trustees should have the same say as the people in the house (legislature). I'm proud to be a part of Sooke board, but I don't think we're speaking strongly enough to the administration," he said.

He said the new government had plans to abolish referndums for essential school buildings: "What happens if we have a referendum now and then referendums are done away with? The taxpayers will be left with a $3 million bill," he said.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Tree Planting Project 92G10-23
Situated on the Indian River

Contractors are advised that the British Columbia Forest Service intends to let a planting contract in the winter of 1972 for the planting of 265,000 trees on 510 acres, more or less, situated between Roy and Caledonian Creeks, Indian River.

Although this contract is due for award in the winter of 1972, it will not be planted until the spring or early summer of 1973.

In order that prospective bidders may have an opportunity to view the planting site and acquaint themselves with conditions on the ground, the Forest Ranger at Port Moody will conduct interested parties to the area on Wednesday, Nov. 1, leaving the Deep Cove Marina, 2990 Panorama Drive, North Vancouver, at 9 a.m. Transportation, if provided by the Forest Service, will be at the prospective bidders' risk.

Sealed tenders for this contract will be received by the Chief Forester up to 4 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 7, 1972, except that for specific reasons the Chief Forester may extend such time.

Tenders will not be considered unless made out on the tender form supplied, properly signed and witnessed, and accompanied by a deposit in the form of a certified cheque or money order in the sum of $50, payable to the Minister of Finance.

Tenders must be submitted in the envelope marked "Tender for Tree Planting."

The lowest or any tender will not necessarily be accepted, and the Forest Service reserves the right to limit the number of contracts held by any party at any one time.

Prospective bidders are advised that this contract will be awarded only on proof that the successful bidder has arranged with the Workmen's Compensation Board for the necessary coverage of all employees and/or partners who will be working on the contract.

Note that prior to commencement of planting the successful bidder will be required to submit a deposit in the total amount of five per cent of the bid price.

Planting stock required for the contract will be supplied free of charge by the Forest Service f.o.b. at a place designated by the Forest Service.

Particulars may be obtained from the Chief Forester, Parliament Buildings, Victoria; the District Forester, Vancouver; or the Forest Ranger at 3051 St. John Street, Port Moody, B.C.

'NAME BEACH AYLARD' TO RECALL DONORS

A suggestion that some geographic feature in East Sooke Park be named after the Aylard family was made today by Victoria Sierra Club chairman John Willow.

The family this week accepted a regional parks committee offer of $225,000 for their 248-acre waterfront farm to be incorporated in East Sooke Park.

Reaction of recreational groups to the land deal is one of praise for the Aylard family.

"The Aylards have shown a deep sense of social responsibility by their efforts to retain this property as parkland," Willow said. "They could easily have subdivided the land. I wish there were more people like them around."

He suggested a beach or promontory in the park be named after the Aylards.

Bob Spearing, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, said the acquisition of the farm is an important step towards the completion of the park.

The board has yet to buy four parcels of land, three of them are owned by Americans.

YOKOHAMA (Reuter) — Nineteen riot police were injured today as they removed leftwing demonstrators protesting the movement of U.S. armored personnel carriers to this port city, police here said.

Man Found Not Guilty In Indecent Assault Case

A county court jury deliberated less than an hour Tuesday afternoon before finding Thomas Frank Gordon, 21, not guilty of indecent assault.

Earlier in the day, Gordon, now of HMCS Cape Breton, had taken the stand in his trial and told how he invited the complainant in the case, a 24-year-old woman, to his apartment for a party July 7.

Gordon said his roommate had gone out so there was no party. Everything that took place that night had been with the woman's consent, he told the court.

In charging the jury, Judge M. L. T. Drake told the seven men and five women that it boiled down to a question of whose story they believed.

The Three-Cent Killer

Three cents have killed a porpoise worth $5,000. The porpoise, Baby, a feature attraction at Montreal's La Ronde, swallowed the three coins which had been tossed into its aquarium last week. In the days before its death, the porpoise lost 100 of its 280 pounds and became so weak that it had to be supported beneath its flippers. Baby died while veterinary surgeons in Montreal were hunting for an iron lung big enough to hold her so that they could operate and remove the coins.

Decentralization Plan Approved by Australia

CANBERRA (Reuter) — After 15 years of studying decentralization schemes, the government here has decided to encourage families and businesses to move out of Australia's capital cities.

Living in cities now is an established pattern of life for more than 80 per cent of Australia's 13 million people. Sydney and Melbourne—the two largest cities—account between them for five million people.

The new scheme, the cost of which is estimated at more than $1 billion, will emphasize promotion of so-called "sub-metropolitan centres"—such as Dandenong near Melbourne and Blacktown near Sydney.

In the past, the growth of the cities has resulted in rocketing land prices, housing shortages, traffic congestion, increasing pollution and other urban ills.

Both the government and the opposition Labor party have proposed decentralization schemes.

The Labor party's basic scheme is for the selection of a site for a new city, which must then be planned, developed and initially administered by a public development corporation.

The government's plans include land acquisition where necessary to avoid speculation, but it stops short of Labor's proposals.

STATES WARM TO IDEA

Either plan is going to be expensive. Deputy Prime Minister Douglas Anthony, in a recent television interview, said the federal government's decentralization proposals would cost "vastly more" than $800 million.

The government's plans, as announced by Prime Minister William McMahon, call for the establishment of a national urban and regional development authority. A ministerial council consisting of the prime minister and the six state premiers would co-ordinate urban and regional development.

The authority will be asked to nominate new areas for development—slum clearance or rejuvenation of existing clogged city areas will not be part of its mandate.

Although the states have not yet given their agreement, their initial reaction has been encouraging.

U.S. Forecast Sees Continued Sino-Soviet Unrest

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. State Department has forecast continued Sino-Soviet hostility throughout the decade in a study that also anticipates improved U.S. relations with the two main Communist powers and growing stability in world affairs.

The study, prepared by the department's planning and coordination staff predicted that, "by 1980 China and the Soviet Union are quite likely to consider one another, rather than the United States, their principal antagonist, if indeed they do not do so already."

It said that Peking and Moscow base their actions "on pragmatic assessment of their national interests and capabilities" and that this "should lead to gradual improvement in their relations with the United States."

The 140-page document, entitled "the U.S. Role In an Evolving World," represents a major effort by the department's "think tank" to outline global issues in the post-Vietnam period. It was distributed among ranking officials last week for comment and is not regarded as recommendations to be followed.

Its conclusions, however, reflect growing concern about complexities in world affairs and changes in power alignment following "the relatively simple biploar days of the Cold War."

Forecasting continued "sharp" Soviet-American competition in world affairs and the need for a strong military posture the study also states:

● Soviet-American nuclear parity will "diminish the political significance" of weapons and lead to a decline in the dominance of the two superpowers.

● This decline will coincide with growing importance of China, Japan and Western Europe.

● Traditional alignments will become more flexible and subject to change on specific issues. This could result, for example, in the Soviet Union and the Unted States taking a joint position with regard to trade policies of the European Common Market, while the Soviets and Europeans may jointly oppose certain U.S. investment policies.

● The restructuring of post-war relations requires a new consensus among Western allies now that the Western nations no longer consider communism as a monilthic threat.

A primary interest of U.S. foreign policy, the study says, must be the maintenance of close relations with Western Europe and Japan.

"As the period when the United States was a dominant leader recedes into the past," the study says, the western consensus would become more elusive.

Underlying the study is President Nixon's policy of "new relationship" with the Communist world, a relationship broad enough to be of considerable mutual economic benefit and, with developing vested interests on both sides, to exercise restraining influence in a potential crisis.

But the study goes beyond the Washington-Peking-Moscow relationship to predict that the third world is likely to become a "primary focus of conflict and possible confrontation in the years ahead."

It stresses that it is in America's interests to seek ways to avoid "confrontation between an affluent north and increasingly impoverished south" and anticipates a growing gap between the industrial nations of the Northern Hemisphere and developing countries of the Southern Hemisphere.

$10M for Winter

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government will make at least $10 million available for winter works programs, Labor Minister Bert Hohol said Monday.

Dr. Hohol said several programs have been developed in various departments including a farm management project in the agriculture department.

Politics Tops Money

By RALPH JOSEPH
CP Correspondent

TEHRAN (CP) — Iran's new-found relations with China, established in August last year, and highlighted this year by the visit of Empress Farah to Peking in September, have not opened the floodgates of trade between the two countries, as some observers expected.

The emphasis has been more on the political aspects of the friendship—the economic relations being marked more by an attitude of cautious probing on both sides.

The ties have been established at a time when both Peking and Tehran have set out to widen their diplomatic contacts with the world. For Tehran, which thinks diplomatically in terms of a series of increasingly larger circles of friends, China is an important member of the outer circle which should no longer be neglected.

Diplomacy being what it is, both Tehran and Peking have chosen to ignore that they represent systems of government on opposite ends of the political spectrum, and the Chinese Communists at least have managed to get over the embarrassment by emphasizing the struggle both countries have waged against "imperialism." Great stress, for example, has been put by the Chinese on Iran's triumph over the oil companies in the series of negotiations that have taken place since February last year.

HIT AT IMPERIALISM

A New China news agency correspondent in Tehran in a recent dispatch to Peking dwelt at length with the exploitation of oil by the Western companies in Iran, and Iran's long struggle to obtain a better deal from them. The correspondent's sympathies were entirely with Tehran.

For want of better common ground between the two countries, Premier Chou En-lai also referred, in his banquet speech for the empress, to the "sabotage and obstruction by imperialism," which for the last quarter of a century or so have interrupted the cordial ties between them going back some 2,000 years.

Not mentioned in the diplomatic speeches by both sides was more sensitive political ground, such as the vital interest each has in ensuring the survival of Pakistan, and the common distrust both have about the Soviet role in the Asian continental bloc.

The Persians consider the entry of Indian forces into East Pakistan in December as an invasion. They suddenly became aware during the December war that perhaps it is only because they have Pakistan as a buffer between themselves and a chauvinistic India that they have been spared the dangers of confrontation with this large neighbor in south Asia. They would like things to remain that way, and are therefore keen to see a friendly Pakistan survive on their borders, much as the Chinese are.

TIES CORRECT

Not lost on the Persians, also, was the unwavering friendly attitude Peking maintained toward Islamabad in 1971, when ideologically they might have been expected to take full advantage of what was really a revolutionary situation in East Pakistan.

The Soviet intervention on the subcontinent also did not go unnoted. But Tehran currently has cordial, if correct, ties with Moscow and avoids utterances and attitudes that may be interpreted as hostile by the Soviets.

Economically, Tehran's ties with Peking have already borne some fruit. The two capitals have arrived at an aviation deal whereby the Chinese national airline will be permitted to use Tehran airport on its planned international route going via Islamabad, Ankara and Bucharest to Tirana, Albania. The new Chinese air route is reported to be scheduled to start about next May. In exchange, Peking has offered Iran International Airlines landing facilities in Shanghai. From here the Iranians plan to take a route on to Tokyo, once the Japanese permit this. Currently the Iranian aircraft do not fly beyond Islamabad in the east.

The setting up of ties last year was followed almost immediately by the exchange of economic delegations between the two countries, and already the Persians have managed to sell some $8 million worth of cotton to the Chinese.

MEMO to the Wonderful Women Who Work

Just starting out on a business career? Come to Eaton's Young Flair Shop and experience the fun of dressing for that first job. And even if you've been in the business world for a long time and still wear a junior size (lucky you!) you'll find all kinds of fashion ideas for your working day, as well as after hours, in our Young Flair Shop.

Dresses, suits, coats and long gowns . . . designed with a definite flair, with a zest for living that's evident in the colors, the fabrics and the styles. It's here you'll find the trend setters. Wide cuffed pants. Pin striped suits. The man-tailored look of suit jackets with wide lapels, padded shoulders. Short battle and baseball jackets in everything from wool plaids to camel's hair.

The size range is 5 to 15, but don't let that fool you into thinking it has anything to do with age. It doesn't. Summit Hinted for Nixon, Thieu

Times News Services

A summit meeting between President Nixon and Nguyen Van Thieu might be necessary before a settlement can be reached in the Vietnam war, diplomatic observers said today in Washington.

The tough line taken by Thieu in a policy speech Tuesday night require such a dramatic move to win his agreement to formulas worked out with Hanoi during the last month by U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

In his speech, Thieu took an uncompromising position toward a political settlement of the war, but said that there may be a standstill cease-fire soon.

Thieu made clear his continuing opposition to a coalition government in South Vietnam and his two-hour speech was studded with attacks on the Communists.

The White House has cautiously acknowledged that some progress was made in Kissinger's six meetings with Thieu in Saigon during the past week and before that with North Vietnamese representatives in Paris.

But that is as far as officials have gone in describing the trend of the peace talks, which have assumed greater political urgency as the Nov. 7 U.S. presidential election draws closer.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Kissinger was expected to return to Paris for more talks with North Vietnam's negotiators and he could go back to Saigon again.

The White House has imposed a total blackout on news and even hints about any formula worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnam.

Informed sources in Paris said Tuesday that France would reluctantly agree to serve as a guarantor for an eventual Indochina peace settlement if so asked by all parties involved in the conflict.

But France would not want to accept such a responsibility alone, the sources added.

The sources poured cold water on British press reports that France had been asked to provide troops to police an Indochina ceasefire.

Meanwhile, the U.S. reduced its fighter-bomber strikes against North Vietnam again Tuesday and confined them to the southern panhandle below the 20th parallel in a sort of a partial bombing halt aimed at improving the atmosphere for peace negotiations.

Mail Bomb For Nixon Intercepted

Times News Services

Three more letter bombs exploded today in the Middle East and explosives were found in letters addressed to President Richard Nixon and two United States' cabinet members.

Two bombs exploded in Beirut and another in Algiers. Eight persons were injured.

Three unexploded bombs were found in the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shemona. A fourth was found in Cairo.

The letters addressed to President Nixon, State Secretary William Rogers and Defence Secretary William Laird, were turned over to Israeli police by a suspicious postal clerk.

"This morning the envelopes were examined by security forces and were found to contain explosives similar to the envelopes sent from Amsterrdam," a police spokesman said. Amsterdam was the origin of a recent mail-a-bomb campaign in which an Israeli embassy official in London, Amichai Shehori, was killed in his office.

In Beirut, a 19-year-old postal employee was taken to hospital after an explosion at the Beirut post office as the morning's mail was being sorted.

About the same time another bomb went off in a 22-storey office building half a block from the American University, and a woman secretary was taken to hospital. Five other persons suffered slight injuries in the explosions, officials said.

Police sources said there were signs that Arab terrorists planned a new mail bomb campaign during the Christmas and New Year holidays when choked postal services will hamper security checks.

The warning came after a Jordanian carrying an Algerian passport was detained at Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam with two suit cases containing letter bombs, pistols, ammunition and hand grenades.

HOSPITAL PLANS HIKE

A private hospital in Victoria said today it will increase rates by $2 a day as soon as a new provincial minimum wage scale takes effect.

Mrs. Adele Vinden, superintendent at Glengarry Private Hospital, 1780 Fairfield, confirmed she has received a directive from management on new rates.

From Nov. 22, or whenever the new wage minimum of $2 an hour goes into effect, the hospital's rate for a bed in a four-bed ward will go from $14 to $16 a day, she said.

Gov't Plans Co-Ops To Cut Food Costs

The provincial government plans to develop food co-operatives within a few weeks — not only for persons on low incomes, but for anyone interested in participating, Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said Tuesday.

He said it is time to create competition for the food monopolies in the province to show that "the people just won't stand for these price increases."

Levi said senior citizens have suffered from "meagre food and nutritional deficiencies" because food prices and rent levels are so high.

Levi also appealed to B.C. landlords to hold the line on senior citizens' rents so the government's $200 monthly guaranteed income will not be drained.

"We are trying to make up for the neglect that has been shown to these senior citizens," Levi told the legislature during debate on the government' move. "We don't want to see these increases go down the drain."

He said he has already had information that some landlords are going to increase rents as a result of the pension hike.

"We will be prepared to name names of individuals and of companies who are going to sweat money from these senior citizens," Levi said.

The minister said the pension increase will "end the legacy of tea and toast fostered by the previous government" and will bring the pensions of B.C.'s pioneers to "a minimal level."

Of a total budget of $1.6 billion brought in by the Social Credit administration last year, Levi said, all that was spent on senior citizens was $3.7 million.

CHUM SALMON fill the hold of Dick Anzulovich's seiner after working Nitinat Lake. The lake, which was closed to commercial fishing after a poor season in 1961, produced about 750,000 salmon for the fishermen who took advantage of the 72-hour opening.

Barrett's Hopes Cut by Third

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

B.C. will receive only two-thirds of the money expected from Ottawa to pay for the guaranteed $200 old age pension, Premier Barrett said Tuesday.

Barrett made the statement after a 30-minute meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau at victoria airport, which failed to produce an agreement on how the pension increase costs should be shared.

But Barrett said again the pensions will be paid in full as promised, although administrative problems may hold up payment until January.

In any case, the pensions will be made retroactive to include December, Barrett said.

Looking and sounding a trifle staggered by his meeting with Trudeau, Barrett nevertheless described the talks, their first, as "amiable."

Barrett said the money that will come to the province for the pensions will fall under the provinces Social Assistance Act and not under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Barrett had banked on persuading Trudeau and the federal government that it was only the wording of the Canada Assistance Plan that was preventing an agreement.

Barrett had hoped to increase the provincial pension supplement, of which Ottawa pays half. But now Ottawa will be contrjbuting about 30 per cent less than expected.

Barrett said that talks have been taking place between of-

POLITE BIGOTS NO LONGER

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian society has been hit with a new wave of hate and bigotry, Dr. Daniel Hill, chairman of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, said Tuesday night.

"We used to have a more polite form of bigotry in Canada, but now we are getting a very overt form of bigotry," he told the Industrial Relations Research Association.

Pound Hits New Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to a record low today for the second straight day.

Foreign exchange dealers said trading was active and selling pressure heavy.

Shortly after the opening, the pound was quoted at $2.3627, an all-time low, and a drop of more than one cent from Tuesday's night's close of $2.3760.

By mid-morning the pound had sunk as low as $2.3530, a drop of more than two cents on the day. One dealer said there was "one-way market" down.

The sharp drop is attributed to persistent inflation, labor trouble, renewed strength of the U.S. dollar, and speculation that the British government will peg the pound at $2.25.

Britain has guaranteed 90 per cent of these reserves against loss by promising to pay them back on demand at a minimum of $2.38 a pound. It may be called to do so now that the pound has sunk below that level for the first time.

TV Tory Sees Red

TORONTO (CP) — Ethel Neilson, an 85-year-old pensioner who appears in a television commercial prepared for the Progressive Conservatives, says she intends to vote for the Liberals Oct. 30.

Miss Neilson, who complains in the commercial about high food prices, said in an interview Tuesday that she was annoyed about finding herself in a Conservative commercial.

She said she was not told the film, shot on a busy downtown street, would be used for political purposes.

"If they'd told me that, I wouldn't have said anything," she complained.

Miss Neilson said she was interviewed outside a department store by a woman who said she was conducting a survey. Miss Neilson talked to the interviewer about pensioners' problems and about the fact food prices had increased.

A Conservative spokesman here said, however, that Miss Neilson had signed a form allowing the party to broadcast the filmed interview.

He added that the woman was paid the standard $1 fee to make the undertaking legal.

Miss Neilson admitted signing a paper, but said she didn't read it. She also remembers receiving $1.

Miss Neilson, who said she is a life-long Liberal, complained that friends and relatives called her to tell they had seen her on a commercial for the Conservatives.

"I was mad," she said.

Stanfield Cool Toward Russia

Times News Services

Robert Stanfield diverged slightly Tuesday from an all-out attack on failure of the Liberal government to cope with the cost of living to warn that a Conservative government would have something less than completely cordial relations with the Soviet Union.

He said in Winnipeg that the government he expects to form after the Oct. 30 federal election will not have "fully cordial relations" with countries that restrict migration of their citizens.

He said later that includes the Soviet Union.

But the rising cost of living, food costs and inflation were the main topic of the day as Stanfield addressed a news conference in Vancouver and then spoke to a Winnipeg rally.

He said that it is time for Canadians to realize that the Liberal government has no policy, program or plan to halt rising prices.

"It does not even intend to take action to assist those Canadians who cannot help themselves to meet their mounting cost of living."

He said Prime Minister Trudeau had claimed that rising prices are good for the farmers.

But in fact farmers had been just as much the victim of inflation as the consumer, wage earner, pensioners and everybody else.

A Conservative government would immediately investigate whether a freeze on prices of certain commodities would be needed, he added.

He did not name the commodities.

He expected that that inquiry, which would include talks with the food industry and government officials and study of information he was sure that government already had, should take two weeks or less.

The urgency of such an inquiry was indicated by the fact that recent Statistics Canada figures had shown

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

Canadians are closer to a national consensus than at any time in their history Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Tuesday during a breathless 2½ hour Victoria visit.

About 1,400 persons jammed the Royal Theatre to hear the prime minister at 4.15 p.m. Hundreds, strung out in a long lineup, were turned away and had to content themselves with listening to his speech over a public address system outside the building.

"Now after almost eight weeks of campaigning I have reached a conclusion . . . Canada no longer has a crisis of identity," Trudeau said.

During the current campaign he said it has not been necessary to beat the drums of national unity — as was necessary in the 1968 election — because people have no doubts about the country anymore.

In four years, the prime minister said, nobody will even mention the Official Languages Act.

". . . Remember the last time, I had to make a speech in French at every place I went in order to prove a point, or a speech in English everywhere I went in Quebec."

Bilingualism is hardly an issue today, Trudeau said, except in a few ridings around Ottawa because "there are still some kinks in the application of the system."

But Quebecers are realizing that they can have power in Ottawa, he said.

"This is the whole purpose of Quebecers getting into politics, to make sure that they can exercise their power in Ottawa for Canadians, and not in Quebec in order to split Canada."

Trudeau blamed a relatively quiet election campaign on the fact that Canadians were moving towards equality of opportunity.

"I am told the press even find it dull," the prime minister said.

"Sure it's easier to report a meeting . . . when rotten tomatoes are flying everywhere," he added.

But the prime minister didn't drop any hot potatoes or tomatoes.

No opposition party was mentioned by name and Trudeau made only one brief reference to "the other two parties" concerning their Quebec policies.

Much of the address was spent defending the Liberal record and recounting national problems that, in the prime minister's opinion, have been solved during the last four years.

The dollar crisis of 1968, divisions between English and French Canadians, provincial ultimatums to mipority federal governments and Western separatism were mentioned.

". . . In those days when there was great talk of western alienation, B.C. was — I don't know how seriously — reacting as though it was closer to the U.S. than that far-off capital in Ottawa."

What has happened in four years?, Trudeau asked.

"Canadians have come to realize that they have really pulled it all together."

In an allusion to the Unknown Country, authored by

Land Speculation—It's a Gamble

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Like all speculation, buying desert from a high pressure land development company is a gamble.

Some customers have won. Others have lost.

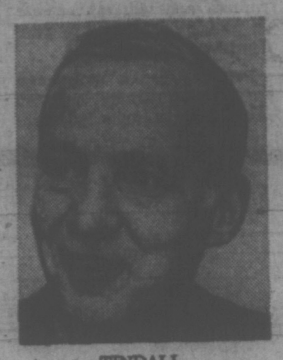
Among the winners was the man who paid $8,000 four years ago for a desert lot in a new Arizona city. It was speculation. Pure gamble. Today the lot is worth $24,000.

Then there is a woman who paid $10,000 for a flat building site and when she inspected the property she discovered there was an ugly rock-filled ravine at her back door. She demanded her money back. After two years she finally got it.

There are about eight land development firms operating in B.C. at the moment, although it is difficult to keep score. They come and go very quickly.

It is all legal. Most are financed by large very respectable corporations.

The land development companies make big profits — in most cases — because of high volume of land sold in a short period of time.



TINDALL
... tricky contracts

Some companies have salesmen working in many countries around the globe.

Is the land worth the asking price? Usually it is potentially worth it.

But the salesman's commission has to be considered along with the cost of the free dinners that are usually part of the come-on and the movie that is usually shown.

As well the company sometimes offers to fly customers down to the desert or the waterfront for an inspection of the property.

All these costs have to be considered by the purchaser when he considers the asking price.

The advice of William Tindall of the Victoria Better Business Bureau is to contact the real estate board nearest the site and obtain an appraisal of the value of the land.

READ CONTRACT

In addition, if the asking price is $5,000 or above — and in most cases it is — the purchaser is advised to hire a lawyer.

Reading a land sale contract can be tricky.

To begin with, a customer must be absolutely certain he does read the contract.

Most land sale contracts have a clause that reads something like this:

"This contract contains all of the terms and conditions of the agreement between buyer and seller. No verbal representation or warranty of any kind or nature whatsoever made by either party hereto or any other person with respect hereto shall be binding upon either party hereto unless incorporated herein."

This means that regardless of what a salesman may tell you, you are stuck with the small print of the contract — so read it carefully or have a lawyer do it for you.

If checking the contract yourself, says the Better Business Bureau, check for the wording of the guarantee.

There is a big difference between being guaranteed a refund "if the buyer is not satisfied" and "a refund will be paid if the site is not as represented."

The woman with the ravine got into difficulties with the "not as represented" language of the contract.

She had been shown a photograph of the site taken from an angle that did not show the ravine. The company argued that the site was as represented in the photograph.

After an exchange of letters lasting many months the company finally arranged for a refund in full.

A small minority of customers have not been quite so lucky. They dealt with companies that went bankrupt. Such bankruptcies, however, are rare and can happen in any business.

RED TAPE

The Better Business Bureau urges potential purchasers to ask land sale companies to hold their deposits in a trust fund so that the money can be speedily returned if the site does not satisfy the customer. Part of the difficulty in the ravine case may have stemmed from the red tape the company faced in regaining funds that had been sent to the central office.

The bureau also urges potential cutomers to watch for any time limit in the guarantee. Here's a sample guarantee from a land sale contract:

"At any time within 30 days from the date hereon purchaser may complete a company-guided inspection tour and at the immediate conclusion of which either confirm this purchase or exchange for a lot of equal or greater value or rescind this purchase with a complete refund if in the opinion of the purchaser the property does not meet the qualification as presented to him at the time of signing this contract."

The phrase "in the opinion of the purchaser" acts as added protection for the buyer but the phrase "at the immediate conclusion of which" should also be noted.

OUT OF LUCK

The bureau says people who wait until they get home after a visit to the site may find they are out of luck. The wording allows only an immediate protest, an immediate request for a refund while at the site.

However, despite all the land sale companies operating out of British Columbia, there have been very few complaints.

A similar tale was told by the Vancouver Better Business Bureau.

A large number of inquiries have come in. The bureau is watching the activities of the companies very closely. But there are very few complaints.

And those who have made profits on the transactions are not complaining at all.

Says Vincent Forbes, manager of the Vancouver bureau: "The important thing to remember is that speculation means you are taking a gamble. If you are taking a big gamble, hire a lawyer."

business

Hudson Bay

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. reports consolidated net loss for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $197,000 compared with a loss of $425,000 in the same period last year.

The loss figure includes a special charge this year of $9.4 million to cover the write off of the Wellgreen Mines in the Yukon.

Consolidated net earnings before the extraordinary item totalled $9,210,000 or $1.02 a share. There was no similar extraordinary item in the 1971 nine-month loss figure.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminum Ltd. reports net earnings in U.S. funds of $47.3 million or $1.38 a share for nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with $47.7 million or $1.39 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Third quarter earnings were $14 million or 41 cents a share compared with $15.2 million or 44 cents a year earlier.

National Steel

National Steel Corp. reports 1972 third-quarter profits were up a 300 per cent from the same period a year ago.

Earnings for the third quarter of this year were $15.2 million, or 81 cents a share, compared with $4.1 million, or 22 cents a share, during the 1971 third quarter, the firm said.

Weyerhaeuser

Weyerhaeuser Company Ltd. of Tacoma reports nine-month earnings of $116 million or $1.70 a share compared with $76 million ($1.10) for the first nine months of 1971.

Sales for the nine-month period were $1.2 billion, an increase of $265 million over the same period in 1971.

The company says that while its profit margin is improved, it is still below those of the late 1960s.

Strengths during the past nine months were high demand for building materials and strong linerboard and shipping container markets.

Problems during the period included the generally soft market for pulp and construction delays caused by labor disputes in British Columbia.

Canada Perm

Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation and its subsidiary, Canada Permanent Trust, had a net operating income of $9,389,000 during the nine months ended Sept. 30.

The earnings, equivalent to $1.32 a share, were up from $6,198,000 or 87 cents a share in the comparable period of 1971.

After extraordinary gains and losses on the sale of assets for the first three-quarters of each year, 1971 earnings were $1.08 and those for 1972 were $1.23.

DONALD MUNRO

CONSERVATIVE
ESQUIMALT - SAANICH

The incredible government bungling which has produced an unemployment insurance fund deficit that could easily hit $700,000,000 by the end of this year is just one part of the four-year national scandal that has been the Trudeau Regime.

Haphazard, ill-conceived welfarism and the unemployment insurance mess now facing the taxpayer has been Canada's lot since the Trudeau clique took over in Ottawa.

Canadians can no longer tolerate such mismanagement of their business, but the Liberals indicate they plan no improvements. If anything, they suggest, the situation will only worsen.

The Liberal candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich hinted as much, when he said at his nominating meeting "it is essential that we maintain a high level of taxation" to support what the Liberals claim is social reform.

BUT . . .

A Stanfield Conservative government in Ottawa will immediately move to put the Canadian economy back on sound footing, with positive programs of job-creation replacing the unthinking, demoralizing and bankrupting handouts the Trudeau regime has used to create a generation of welfare bums.

Mr. Stanfield is committed to full employment policies because the Conservative Party believes Canada needs the contributions of all citizens and that the vast majority of jobless Canadians now would prefer to live from the fruits of their own efforts.

Donald Munro, your Conservative candidate in Esquimalt-Saanich, is a member of the Stanfield team and the best man for the big job ahead in Ottawa.

For further information contact Mr. Munro at his headquarters, 2240 Douglas, Phone 382-7185.

Physician Eyes Acupuncture

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

NEW YORK (AP) — "Now I've become a student again," says a world-famous surgeon who developed an operation that brought hearing to many deaf people.

Dr. Samuel Rosen is studying acupuncture as a possible method of helping some deaf children hear better, or for the first time.

And he is thinking of using chicken legs or grapefruit as practice objects to develop the finger muscles needed in skillful application of the hair-thin acupuncture needles.

Dr. Rosen and his wife, Helen, his research assistant, recently returned from a month in China where they looked into Chinese reports that acupuncture has helped overcome nerve deafness in some children. It was the Rosen's second trip within a year.

Dr. Rosen, clinical professor emeritus of otolaryngology at Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York, developed a surgical technique that overcomes deafness caused by the immobilization or rigidityof the stapes, the small bones within the ear that permit sound signals to be translated into nerve responses recorded in the brain. He has travelled the world demonstrating the technique.

WORK IN SCHOOL

He was among the first medical scientists to warn that loud and excessive noise could cause permanent damage to hearing.

In their first visit to China, the Rosens became interested in reports that acupuncture could aid in treating nerve deafness, even though the acupuncture needles inserted around or near the ear never come close to the nerve of hearing itself.

This last time they worked for a month at the No. 3 Peking School for the Deaf, helping Chinese specialists test the hearing of 111 children aged nine to 13.

The tests set a baseline or "floor" of hearing ability, using an audiometer that records hearing level electrically. The Chinese had been using spoken words or hand-clapping, at various distances, to assess hearing ability. The audiometer can standardize the response.

Future tests can show whether acupuncture sessions actually improve hearing ability.

Dr. Rosen plans to work with a similar group of American children for an objective measurement of what benefit, if any, results from acupuncture.

Dr. Rosen says neither he nor the Chinese have any idea how the acupuncture technique could work beneficially on hearing, and "it might be 25 years before we get an insight." He said the Chinese told him they began acupuncture without knowing that nerve deafness is supposed not to be correctable.

Agrostologist, Hedger Replaced by Numbers

LONDON (CP) — Once in Britain there was the baby-sitter and exhauster, the shot blaster and agrostologist, the apiarist and festooner, the gaffer and the hackler, the corset strapper, slagger, stripper and gut seeker.

And that was just the beginning. Now they're mere numbers: 713.13, 629.99, 541.55. . . .

The national employment department has just published a three-volume job classification list with 3,500 occupations all numbered for computer consumption.

Gone are the potato crisp inspector, poker-in, rumbler, hedger, roughneck, roustabout and trouble shooter.

And adding salt to the wounds is the fact that the employment people apparently rank the occupations in a way which gives the lowest numbers to those they consider most important.

The highest rating—00—predictably goes to cabinet ministers, to MPs and top civil servants who get 001 treatment while 002 goes to industrial managers.

Stockbrokers come out with 034:10 while a false twister, apparently a kind of leather worker, weighs in with 542.75. A wood stainer comes out with 812.70.

Strippers (of vegetables) end up with 551.55 while strippers (entertainment) turn out with 173.50.

That's not far behind journalists who finish with 151.30.

Students Give Six Candidates Biggest Forum

University of Victoria students surprised Victoria federal election candidates with the best audience turnout of the campaign at a lunch-time meeting on campus Tuesday.

"This is by far the largest crowd we've had out of some seven meetings," Conservative candidate Allan McKinnon told the 150 students.

"So far the meetings seem to have been attended by friends, relatives and campaign managers," he said.

EXCEPTIONS

All the candidates adhered to material they had presented at earlier meetings, with the exception of these highlights.

Hansen accused McKinnon of lying when McKinnon listed what he said were election campaign donations declared to the 1968 returning officer in Victoria.

McKinnon said his party had received 137 donations averaging $123 each. He said the New Democrats had received nine donations averaging $447 each, and the Liberals had received three donations averaging $2,658.

"That's a lie," shouted Hansen when his party's figure was mentioned.

"Then the NDP party agent must have lied to the returning officer — these are public figures," McKinnon said.

APPLAUDED

Hansen was applauded when he told the audience that in this election campaign he had received $250 from the B.C. Federation of Labor, small donations from three or four hundred people and other funds from "passing the hat round" at meetings.

Groos said he would be happy to have his campaign funds made public, but he would not like to know them himself because he would feel "beholden" to people.

A questioner seemed to have Groos at a loss for an answer with a query about what should be done about heroin use and hard drugs in general.

SHAKES HEAD

"Two acquaintances of mine died of heroin overdoses this summer," the questioner said. "What do Mr. Groos and Mr. Heffernan think should be done about heroin?"

Groos sat shaking his head and appeared reluctant to answer the question. After a long pause in which he seemed at a loss for words, Groos stood up.

"Everybody knows the problem, but I don't think anyone has the answer. I don't know the answer. Do you know the answer?" he said.

The audience jeered Groos and cried for a reply.

Heffernan said he favored federally-controlled clinics to dispense heroin to registered addicts and provide help to rehabilitate the addict. He said such measures would undermine the business of the professional drug pusher.

Groos then rose and said he knew "quite a bit" about Heffernan's proposal, which he said was the "English system."

"I don't think it's been an unmixed blessing," Groos said. He said more study should be done.

NOT GOOD

The Independent candidates both took the position that party politics were not good for government. Heffernan said members of the cabinet should be elected from a house of independent members. Hall-Patch said independent members could return government to the people.

Hall-Patch, whose witty approach got plenty of laughs, was asked to comment on Groos' performance as federal member for Victoria.

"Well, we could have had somebody who did something bad," Hall-Patch said. "And in addition Mr. Groos has given the riding a good laugh at his expense with all that stuff about listening to people at the bus stop."

"Don't you ever take the bus?" interjected Groos.

Quebec Park Gets $16M

QUEBEC (CP) — Artillery Park, located inside the old walls of the city, will get an extensive facelifting thanks to a $16 million restoration program announced Tuesday by Jean Chretien, federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development.

Chretien said the area, which includes fortifications dating back to 1693 and soldiers' barracks built in 1749, is to be turned into a national park during the eight-year restoration program scheduled to get under way in 1973.

A Place for Patriotism —As Dr. Grant Saw It

The comments here some little while ago about the Soviet-Canada hockey series, notably the opinion that our people represented us badly as goodwill ambassadors, have come to the attention of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Hunter Grant, of our town, who went to Russia to see the games.

Some of Dr. Grant's points:

"We went there to root a tired, discouraged team out of the valley of defeat and home to victory. And we made it stick. At least Phil Esposito, who just might know something, thought the turning point of the whole business came at the end of the first heart-breaking game, when a tired, understandably demoralized team trudged off the ice and halted, heads raised in disbelief, to see massed fans on their feet, giving them a fiercely loyal ovation in defeat. . . ."

"In the three heart-stoppers that followed, it brought a large lump in the throat of a veteran puck-watcher to see weary, sagging men lifted again and again by the fearsome tribal war chants from the south end. This never was more apparent than in the last fell clutch when a seemingly beaten outfit flashed back to do first the improbable and then the impossible. I was proud, not merely to be a Canadian, but to be in the company of the people in those end seats. . . .

"Alan Eagleson is a disgrace to Canada; he has no place in any sport or among decent citizens of any country. Parise's stick-raising was beyond pardon, even though the referee he threatened was rawly partisan and obviously had seized on the first flimsy excuse to penalize a Canadian. But Stapleton, White, the great Quebecois defence pair, the Espositos, Henderson and Ellis, Clarke, Cournoyer, Pete Mahovlich and others — these are thugs and hooligans? My dear man, there lies here an issue that far transcends the fact that they did what neither you nor I probably could do, even given their reflexes and their other physical talents. They fought back, on faraway foreign ice, to do what just about no one believed could be done. . . .

"As an unofficial consultant to the team surgeon, I spent some time at one particular practice and talked with a few of the players, none of whom I'd met before. I'd be happy to have any one of about 18 of them as a son-in-law. Further, I have good reason to know that their behavior off-ice qualified them as good ambassadors for Canada. One, whom I won't name, is a foul-mouthed animal, but he didn't play on Russian ice. Rumors were abroad in Moscow that a few steady performers were dead drunk in the early mornings. Some of these drink not at all. . . .

"Kicking, spearing and blind-side butt-ending, in my book, call for suspension or expulsion from organized hockey. Ragulin — at six-foot-two and 220 pounds the biggest man on the ice — not only had an educated trio of elbows, each equipped with hooks and knobs; he got in quite a bit of the nastiest kicking and spearing in my watching experience. Mihailov was worse.

"I think — and I sincerely hope you're man enough to do it loud, so to speak, in print — that you owe a handsome and unreserved apology to the hard core of young Canadians who gave us a tremendous display of talent and courage in a comeback in what was, after all, a phase of the Cold War. . . .

"You don't know great theatre when you see it. Olivier doing Hamlet? Quinn in Zorba the Greek? Kid stuff alongside the performance of that big Phil from the Soo. Early high comedy, later stern Greek stuff when he uncomplainingly took nine straight minutes for giving Ragulin, at last, what had been coming to him for a long time and, believe me, it was truly artistic. But the finale should escape no one who claims to enjoy theatre. Almost too tired to stand, fresh from scoring the tying goal and making an incredible passout to Henderson for the winner, the big fellow ended it all hounding a Russian behind his own net. Who could have written the script? . . .

"Finally — and here comes the nasty bit I'll probably be sorry I added — what species of Canadian are you? Until you produce proof to the contrary, you go down in my book as one of that unhappily large group that gets published and, as Bruce Hutchison has long said, seems to extract some sort of bizarre ecstasy out of denigration of Canada and Canadians. This explains in part, I haven't a shred of doubt, a very damaging Canadian inferiority complex. I haven't any use for chauvinism, but there is a place for a little quiet patriotism here and there."

Great Day for Pat and Mike and Pierre

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Their mother figured "they could learn more in one afternoon by seeing Trudeau, than they could in school."

So Pat and Mike were permitted to take Tuesday afternoon off classes and trundle down to the Royal Theatre to see "the politician."

"Yeah, I'm Liberal," said Pat, 11, who had managed to plunk himself down in the best seat—fourth row centre—in the full house.

His sidekick Mike, 10, was right beside.

"We had to wait an awfully long time though," Pat added, leaning back in his chair, arms folded as if commenting on the world situation.

"Definitely," piped in Mike, as the gala political happenings went on in the background. Popcorn machines were minus popcorn, but supplied with Liberal candidate bumper stickers and party organizers handed out placards to the theatregoers instead of peanuts.

The boys arrived at about 2 p.m. — the more enthusiastic fans had started the line-up at 11 a.m.

We managed to "sneak in a bit." A sly grin crept over Pat's face.

Mike, the more serious of the pair, expressed a concern about what exactly Mr. Trudeau was going to do about pollution.

"I'm interested, you know. I sort stuff for pollution, aluminum from papers and stuff."

Trudeau managed to keep the youngsters' interest throughout his speech. Not once did they yawn, there were no heclers and some in the audience even found they could spare more attention to the prime minister's words if they closed their eyes.

Mike relaxed when Pierre promised to fight pollution

The boys' attention might have been in deference to their mother's views, however. Mrs. Ann Konopski, sitting right behind, described herself as an "avid Liberal" and "Trudeau fan."

Mike sat up a little straighter when the politician — who mentioned ever level and possible cause of alienation in society (except politicians) and how the Liberal party would continue to cope — finally got around to pollution.

"We'll continue our fight against pollution," the P.M. promised.

Mike relaxed.

The boys said they found the experience exciting, but not too much out of the ordinary.

In their lives they've become used to a carnival atmosphere — theatres, lineups, and even the 15-piece Show You Care band on hand for the festivities, failed to spark an exclamation.

Even Trudeaumania took a subdued form that mixed grey-haried gents, blue-rinsed women and a few youthful long-hairs together in a hand-shaking, but relatively quiet, crowd.

It was over about 5 p.m., and Pat and Mike filed out of the theatre a little relieved like the rest of the crowd. The politician had promised to do something about their concern.

Escaper Captured In Vancouver

A man who escaped from William Head minimum-security institution Sept. 17 was arrested by Vancouver city police and charged with possession of 225 capsules of heroin Tuesday.

Donald William Valouche, 39, was arrested in Vancouver apartment and charged with possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking.

Colwood RCMP said a charge of escaping lawful custody will most probably be waived to Vancouver provincial court where Valouche is to appear today.

Valouche was sentenced in Burnaby Oct. 25, 1967 to 10 years for possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking. He was due for release Dec. 16, 1975.

Valouche escaped from the prison with two other inmates, David Jack O'Brien, 28, and Neil Thompson, 24. Thompson is still at large.

Colwood RCMP said William Head escapees are returned to the federal B.C. Penitentiary if, and when, they are apprehended.

Saanich Post for Quebecer

By AB KENT

The city manager of Dollard des Ormeaux has been chosen to succeed John Tribe as municipal manager of Saanich at the end of January, 1973.

The appointment of W. M. Tremayne, 48, ends a search that began early last summer in which 92 applicants from across the country were considered for the municipality's top administrative post.

By last week when council's personnel committee had completed its last interviews, the field had been narrowed to seven, including two local applicants.

Tremayne will start at a salary of $24,000 and arrive the first few days of January in order to spend familiarization time with Tribe before his retirement Jan. 31.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said Tremayne is "an intense, innovative senior administrator with a full knowledge of all aspects of municipal government.

"He has worked well in leading an administrative team and had good relations with councils," Curtis said.

As city manager of Dollard des Ormeaux, a city of 30,000 on Ile Montreal, Tremayne has had experience working with municipal neighbors and Greater Montreal regional affairs, Curtis noted. Little adjustment will be required to deal with similar matters in the capital region, he thought.

Tremayne is bilingual, married with two children and a graduate in civil engineering from University of New Brunswick, 1945.

His experience ranges from Canadian Engineering Ltd., where he was a junior structural engineer, and municipal engineer for the city of Mount Royal, to self-employment in the field of residential and commercial construction, and engineering projects on commission by architects.

From 1963-65 Tremayne was a project engineer in Montreal for Canadian National Railways, and for the last seven years he has been in Dollard des Ormeaux, a community that has grown from about 500 persons in 12 years. This "astonishing growth" fits Tremayne for work in the burgeoning capital suburb of Saanich, Curtis said.

BARRETTS CHOOSE ESQUIMALT HOME

Premier Dave Barrett and his family will move into the home he's bought at 1178 Munro in Esquimalt in late January.

Barrett said Tuesday he will rent his home in Port Coquitlam. All of the family will move to Esquimalt, except for a son attending Simon Fraser University.

Asked to comment on reports that he paid $65,000 for the home, Barrett said he did not think this was of public interest.

Although there has been no official release on the premier's new address, residents of the area confirm that Barrett has bought the waterfront property.

Flour Prices Up and Going Higher

Increased Bread Costs 'Inevitable'

Millstream Flour Mills of Victoria has increased its flour prices 30 cents per 100 pound sack to counter increased wheat prices.

Manager William Metcalfe said additional flour price increases could be expected as additional hikes are anticipated in the wheat price.

Other British Columbia flour mills have either increased their prices a similar amount or will do shortly depending upon their supply of stored cheaper wheat, Metcalfe said.

In Vancouver, a spokesman for Robin Hood Flour Mills said his company had not increased prices so far this year but the prices now were under review.

Generally the flour industry had not yet raised prices although some increases seemed inevitable before year's end.

Metcalfe said flour mills had absorbed increased wheat prices that resulted from increases given to grain handlers earlier this year. But prices were rising to a level where mills had to increase their prices when they ran out of stored wheat purchased at lower prices.

Much of this flour is sold in 50 pound sacks and the whole sale price has gone to $4.55 from $4.40, he said.

He said it was important to ease prices up gradually as costs rise rather than holding the line too long and then submitting customers to huge increases.

Increases in the minimum wage will also add to costs of flour mills and might lead to price increases, he said.

Meanwhile John McDonald, manager of McDonald's Bakery, said increased flour costs would inevitably lead to higher bread prices.

No immediate increase is expected in McDonald's prices, he said, because flour prices to his bakery have not yet been increased.

His firm has held wholesale prices for 18 months to their present level of 29 cents for a one-pound loaf and 41 cents for a 1½ pound loaf.

He said increases in flour costs are anticipated this fall and, if the increase was substantial, bread prices would be increased.

McDonald sold his bakery to McGavin-Toastmaster of Vancouver effective Oct. 28 but he continues as manager.

Private Rink Plan For Saanich Study

A mainland company now building a four-rink arena complex to be run at a profit in Burnaby is interested in discussing a shortage of rink facilities in Greater Victoria.

Floyd Harris, sales manager of Columbia 4-Rinks Ltd. — formerly Floyd Harris Arenas Lt. — said he will contact Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis and is willing to come to Victoria at the invitation of municipal and sports officials.

Curtis has also expressed interest in the privately-run operation, which is scheduled to open in early January and already has all of its ice-time booked.

Saanich council last week committed itself to preparing information on construction of a second ice surface in the municipality for presentation to ratepayers as a borrowing bylaw as soon as possible.

The mayor and three other aldermen are opposed to further capital borrowing for recreation facilities in Saanich at this time in view of othe priorities facing Saanich — among them road and drainage improvements.

Harris said community response to his company's plans was "fantastic," even before construction commenced. When word of the project became commonly known, most of the ice-time was already spoken for.

He said population is not as important a factor to consider as the level of community interest and participation in athletics.

"A single sheet of ice is not a good investment," he said. Economies of scale are possible with multiple ice facilities that permit the profit-making arena to offer competitive rates and still pay taxes and make money.

HEAVY MAIL FLOW CAUSES BACKLOGS

Heavier than usual mail volumes are causing some backlogs, a Victoria post office spokesman, Ken Stofer, said today.

He said Toronto, in particular, is experiencing "tremendous mailings" which amounted at one point to 200 carloads.

"Over the last month mails have appeared to be very heavy Vancouver has had considerable amounts of mail. This is mostly third class mail. On Monday we still had some third class mail that came in on Friday."

Asked about reports of a work slowdown in connection with negotiations between postal unions and the government, Stofer said there is "nothing that anyone can say to the effect there is a slowdown. All our staff seem to be giving it all they've got."

Road Work Cuts Posed 'Too Early'

Reports that Victoria may delete several public works projects from its capital budget and reallocate the money for land acquisition were described as premature today by two city aldermen.

Ald. Percy Frampton said the suggestion was aired only briefly at Tuesday's meeting of council in committee by Mayor Peter Pollen, who indicated he would like it to be discussed at a future meeting.

Frampton said he doesn't know how the suggestion arose that council will probably "chop" several road-widening and extension projects in the five-year capital works budget, when the matter hasn't even been discussed.

In certain cases, he added, he would strongly oppose such a proposal — particularly if it meant abandoning the plan to eliminate the steep grade at the foot of Blanshard, or the proposed extension of Finlayson from Blanshard to Shelbourne.

Realigning the southern end of Blanshard is vital to the city's long-range plan of developing a southern ring road, Frampton said, and Finlayson should not be left as "a dead end."

Ald. Mike Young said if certain deferred items in the budget were deleted and the funds reallocated to other purposes it might free some $800,0000 for land acquisition, possibly including the Marathon Realty property at the Inner Harbor. But he stressed that the proposal is still tentative and has not been formally presented to council.

Citizenship: 'Bad With the Good'

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

A thin red carpet, chrome and plastic chairs and large modern lights in a small room hardly created the solemn, awe-inspired atmosphere one would expect at a court where new citizens adopt their country.

The Queen's portrait was there and so was the flag, the Canadian emblem and a real live red-coated Mountie, but the pomp and ceremony and intense emotion were missing.

Even without the trimmings the occasion in Citizenship court Tuesday afternoon was probably the most significant event in the lives of 30 Victorians.

The men and women, mostly in their 20s and 30s, represented 12 countries of origin and occupations ranging from engineer to housewife to monk.

Together, each with a bible in hand, they recited their allegiance to the Queen and their promise to fulfil the responsibilities of Canadian citizenship.

"Adopting new citizenship is a bit like getting married," Judge Norman Oreck told them, "you have to take the good with the bad and make it stick."

The courtroom was crowded with friends, relatives and restless children as well as a group of students from Lansdowne Junior Secondary School who came "to watch the democratic process in action."

The ceremony was short. The new citizens sat quietly, rising only to swear their allegiance and accept their citizenship certificates.

ORECK
. . . like getting married

Most of the time was taken up with a welcoming speech by Judge Oreck.

The judge explained Canada's political and court systems and described her symbolic ties to Britain.

"Canada is one of the most democratic countries in the world," he told them.

"It is yours to improve and to change," Oreck said, "perhaps by protest but especially by the ballot."

(These new Canadians will have to wait three or four years before they get to cast that ballot however, since the closing date for the federal polling lists was Oct. 13.)

New citizens sworn in on Tuesday included:

Carl Evers, Mrs. Froukje Radersma, Mrs. Baukje Speller, Cornelis Stoop, Everardus van Adrichem and Judocus Van Bree, all originally from the Netherlands.

Mrs. Sui Chow, Keng Lo, Mrs. Lai Lum, Mrs. Siu Yee and Mrs. Mary Cheung, all from China.

Mrs. Audrey Van Eerden, Mrs. Ann Walker and Albert Lacrouts, all from the United States.

Johannes Huber and Mrs. Genovova Huber, Mrs. Christel Meseyton, Mrs. Anna Ossege, Mrs. Gerda Renner, Mrs. Monika Rovinelli and Mrs. Ilse Strasdin, from Germany.

Henri Cescutti and Jean Louis Giffon, of France.

Rodolfo Bianco (Italy), Mrs. Maria Cabecinha (Portugal), Georg Crha (Czechoslovakia), Mrs. Anna Pugh (Denmark), Mrs. Gertrude Smythe (Austria) and Ingvar Tonseth (Norway).

Bargaining Group Sworn In

The five-member commission which will inquire into civil service collective bargaining was sworn in today by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton.

Public hearings will be held in Prince George Nov. 20, Kamloops Nov. 22, Nelson Nov. 24, Victoria Nov. 29 and Vancouver Dec. 1.

Commission chairman R. D. Higgins, senior classification officer in the Civil Service Commission, said "with the deadline for our report being mid-December, our schedule is tight. But we have endeavored to time public hearings in such a fashion that all interested parties will be able to appear before us."

Other commission members are John Fryer, general secretary of the B.C. Government Employees' Union; Norman Richards, BCGEU president; Prof. Norman Ruff of the University of Victoria; and Lorne Tomalty, personnel officer in the mental health branch.

Christmas comes to Victoria October 25, not December 25

It may seem a bit early to start thinking about Christmas but sales people claim they're only meeting the demand of the consumer

(See Santa Page 40)

—John McKay photos

Last-minute shopping on decrease, stores say

Buy now — there are only nine short shopping weeks left until Christmas.

Seem ridiculously early?

Maybe, but it works, according to sales managers of Victoria's major department stores, as they stock Christmas sure-sellers on already tinselled shelves.

While the sun shines and temperatures hover around 60 degrees, consumers ponder over which brand of artificial snow to buy, and push overladen carts full of Christmas wrapping to summer sales counters.

"We're always faced with the criticism of establishing our Christmas business early. But customers buy early — it's a proven fact," says Jim Forward, a sales manager at the Bay.

"Last minute shopping has decreased over the last three years, but my sales are increasing the month and a half before.

"Earlier shopping is the key, but maybe not this early," he admitted. The Bay started displaying Christmas cards, tree decorations and artificial trees two weeks ago, two weeks later than last year.

An Eaton's staff member explains the decoration onslaught this way: "The space for the stuff was allocated to us, and because of postal regulations, a good number of people are buying presents, cards and wrapping paper to send overseas."

"Personally I think Christmas is getting too commerical," said Ron Ellis, of K-Mart.

"But we start getting the Christmas stock at the end of August, and we have to get it out on the shelves. The Easter stuff starts coming in January. That's just the way it works.

"The requests are unbelievable. A lot of people found they were disappointed when they left buying until the last moment in previous years — because of poor selection — so they're starting now."

Woolco, has only one and one half counters displaying Christmas items.

"But there will be more soon," Terrence Wilkins, Christmas sales manager, hastened to add.

Expert 'Matcher' For Big Brothers

It's not everyone who gets a chance to choose brothers for a perfect working relationship.

But that's the job of Peter Kagis, and he considers it a very real goal.

The 25-year-old social worker has been hired as a part-time, professional "relationship-matcher" by the Victoria chapter of Big Brothers of B.C.

Consistent

Also a group leader at the Pacific Centre for Human Development, Kagis interviews prospective brothers, matches them, then follows up the relationships.

The move "will insure consistent matching as new big brothers are added and consistent following through in each relationship," says Gordon Cruse, Big Brothers spokesman.

Professional advice will also be available when needed.

The constitution allows for a part-time social worker when the organization membership reaches a total of 50 big brothers.

Cruse says the organization has matched about 80 relationships but there are still 60 little brothers on the waiting list.

Kagis' salary — listed at $150 a month — will be financed through the Vancouver operation, Cruse said.

"To me, Big Brothers is a preventative measure," said Kagis. "The operation will work best if we get the kids between the ages of eight and 12, before they get into trouble."

Age is one of the biggest concerns, according to Kagis.

"Mothers wait until the kids are 13 and 14; about that age most get into trouble, become mobile and begin to distrust adults."

Big Brothers should be contacted when the child is at an earlier age; "When they are most open to adults and open to establishing a relationship," Kagis said.

Another concern is the shortage of big brothers.

"There's only a slow trickle," said Kagis. "Most are single or newly married, with families at a younger age than the little brother.

"There should be more. It's a comfortable society. People don't take citizenship seriously. Big Brothers is a duty. It's not as if people don't have time — the work week is no longer 60 hours.

No Hard Sell

"But we aren't hard sell — we don't go out and knock on doors to get Big Brothers — we're here when people get the urge," he said.

Big Brothers, which operates on a $2,500 to $3,000 annual budget, is financed through an annual Presto Log-Blitz at all city shopping centres.

The event, which raised $2,700 last year, is scheduled for Saturday. Presto logs will be sold for 10 cents each.

CAC Criticizes Import Quota

Low income consumers are being made to support Canada's flagging shirt industry, says a Consumer's Association of Canada brief this week.

The association has asked the Textile and Clothing Board to drop the import quota on men and boys' shirts in effect since November 1971, restricting the number of shirts imported from countries such as Japan, Hong Kong, Korea and Taiwan.

"The low income consumer is paying the shot to provide stability to the Canadian shirt industry," says CAC vice-president Dr. H. E. English, adding that it already benefits from a 25 per cent tariff protection. The restriction on numbers of imported shirts, he says, makes the low income consumer "spend a greater percentage of his income on shirts."

elizabeth forbes

Mention in this column, last Friday night, of early days in Gorge Road Hospital, resulted in a spate of reminiscences from nurses who have served the hospital since those days.

One of the most amusing stories dates back almost 20 years. It had to do with a mix-up in one of the extended care wards, of six sets of false teeth.

As told by the nurse concerned (who wishes to remain nameless) every one of the "old dears" in that ward had false teeth. And it was the custom each night to take them out, put them in small containers of fresh water and leave them on a stand beside each bed.

First Duty

In the morning, first duty of a nurses' aide was to take each set of Gorge teeth separately and wash them. She then changed the water in the containers and put them back ready to be popped into the six mouths when the day nurse had the patients ready for breakfast.

One morning a new nurse's aid reported for work. Immediately she was told to clean the false teeth.

Not really familiar with the routine, yet determined to do a good job on her first morning in the hospital, this young woman quickly filled a basin with water and before anyone could tell her differently, dumped in all six sets of teeth.

Then she retired to the utility room to scrub and clean them with a nail brush she discovered there.

The nurse who told me this story was on duty in the ward that day. And when she arrived the basin with its six sets of teeth was handed to her.

"It wasn't too hard to match up lowers and uppers," she reminisced, "but when it came to deciding who owned which, it was a different matter."

The "old dears" themselves were so vague they were not of much help. So, all she could do, she says, was start at the first bed, fumble a set of teeth into an open mouth, then watch to see they didn't "wobble" too much. "If they did, out they came and I tried a second set."

Eventually all six were in place "but to this day I've never been sure the right ones got into the right mouths."

She ended her story with "I wondered then, and I still wonder, why dentists don't put the initials of a person concerned somewhere on the back of a set of false teeth . . . it certainly would have made it easier for me to match up the six old dears to their own chompers that particular day."

Amusing Incident

This same nurse remembered still another amusing incident that took place about the same time as the mix-up. Again it had to do with false teeth—this time, one set only.

Seemed that one morning when a very elderly patient in another ward first received her teeth, they fitted perfectly.

Later in the day however, they were so loose the woman could hardly talk.

Nurses on the floor became concerned that the woman might have developed a sore (or sores) in her mouth and that possibly she was easing the teeth out to protect the sores.

They tried to persuade her to let them take a look. She refused.

After considerable coaxing however, she finally mumbled an explanation for the one who told me the story . . . because she said she trusted her.

Folded carefully above her upper plate was a one dollar bill. She was saving it, she said, for her granddaughter. And that was the only place she believed it was really safe.

"I could tell you enough stories about early days in Gorge hospital to fill a book," this particular nurse assured me. "but then, many of those stories should never be told. It just wouldn't be right!"

The Three-Cent Killer

Three cents have killed a porpoise worth $5,000. The porpoise, Baby, a feature attraction at Montreal's La Ronde, swallowed the three coins which had been tossed into its aquarium last week. In the days before its death, the porpoise lost 100 of its 280 pounds and became so weak that it had to be supported beneath its flippers. Baby died while veterinary surgeons in Montreal were hunting for an iron lung big enough to hold her so that they could operate and remove the coins.

Decentralization Plan Approved by Australia

CANBERRA (Reuter) — After 15 years of studying decentralization schemes, the government here has decided to encourage families and businesses to move out of Australia's capital cities.

Living in cities now is an established pattern of life for more than 80 per cent of Australia's 13 million people. Sydney and Melbourne—the two largest cities—account between them for five million people.

The new scheme, the cost of which is estimated at more than $1 billion, will emphasize promotion of so-called "sub-metropolitan centres"—such as Dandenong near Melbourne and Blacktown near Sydney.

In the past, the growth of the cities has resulted in rocketing land prices, housing shortages, traffic congestion, increasing pollution and other urban ills.

Both the government and the opposition Labor party have proposed decentralization schemes.

The Labor party's basic scheme is for the selection of a site for a new city, which must then be planned, developed and initially administered by a public development corporation.

The government's plans include land acquisition where necessary to avoid speculation, but it stops short of Labor's proposals.

STATES WARM TO IDEA

Either plan is going to be expensive. Deputy Prime Minister Douglas Anthony, in a recent television interview, said the federal government's decentralization proposals would cost "vastly more" than $800 million.

The government's plans, as announced by Prime Minister William McMahon, call for the establishment of a national urban and regional development authority. A ministerial council consisting of the prime minister and the six state premiers would co-ordinate urban and regional development.

The authority will be asked to nominate new areas for development—slum clearance or rejuvenation of existing clogged city areas will not be part of its mandate.

Although the states have not yet given their agreement, their initial reaction has been encouraging.

Summit Hinted for Nixon, Thieu

Times News Services

A summit meeting between President Nixon and Nguyen Van Thieu might be necessary before a settlement can be reached in the Vietnam war, diplomatic observers said today in Washington.

The tough line taken by Thieu in a policy speech Tuesday night require such a dramatic move to win his agreement to formulas worked out with Hanoi during the last month by U.S. presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

In his speech, Thieu took an uncompromising position toward a political settlement of the war, but said that there may be a standstill cease-fire soon.

Thieu made clear his continuing opposition to a coalition government in South Vietnam and his two-hour speech was studded with attacks on the Communists.

The White House has cautiously acknowledged that some progress was made in Kissinger's six meetings with Thieu in Saigon during the past week and before that with North Vietnamese representatives in Paris.

But that is as far as officials have gone in describing the trend of the peace talks, which have assumed greater political urgency as the Nov. 7 U.S. presidential election draws closer.

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Kissinger was expected to return to Paris for more talks with North Vietnam's negotiators and he could go back to Saigon again.

The White House has imposed a total blackout on news and even hints about any formula worked out by Kissinger and North Vietnam.

Informed sources in Paris said Tuesday that France would reluctantly agree to serve as a guarantor for an eventual Indochina peace settlement if so asked by all parties involved in the conflict.

But France would not want to accept such a responsibility alone, the sources added.

The sources poured cold water on British press reports that France had been asked to provide troops to police an Indochina ceasefire.

Meanwhile, the U.S. reduced its fighter-bomber strikes against North Vietnam again Tuesday and confined them to the southern panhandle below the 20th parallel in a sort of a partial bombing halt aimed at improving the atmosphere for peace negotiations.

Mail Bomb For Nixon Intercepted

Times News Services

Three more letter bombs exploded today in the Middle East and explosives were found in letters addressed to President Richard Nixon and two United States' cabinet members.

Two bombs exploded in Beirut and another in Algiers. Eight persons were injured.

Three unexploded bombs were found in the northern Israeli town of Kiryat Shemona. A fourth was found in Cairo.

The letters addressed to President Nixon, State Secretary William Rogers and Defence Secretary William Laird, were turned over to Israeli police by a suspicious postal clerk.

"This morning the envelopes were examined by security forces and were found to contain explosives similar to the envelopes sent from Amsterdam," a police spokesman said. Amsterdam was the origin of a recent mail-a-bomb campaign in which an Israeli embassy official in London, Amichai Shachori, was killed in his office.

In Beirut, a 19-year-old postal employee was taken to hospital after an explosion at the Beirut post office as the morning's mail was being sorted.

About the same time another bomb went off in a 22-storey office building half a block from the American University, and a woman secretary was taken to hospital. Five other persons suffered slight injuries in the explosions, officials said.

Police sources said there were signs that Arab terrorists planned a new mail bomb campaign during the Christmas and New Year holidays when choked postal services will hamper security checks.

The warning came after a Jordanian carrying an Algerian passport was detained at Schiphol Airport in Amsterdam with two suit cases containing letter bombs, pistols, ammunition and hand grenades.

HOSPITAL TO BOOST RATE

A private hospital in Victoria said today it will increase rates by $2 a day as soon as a new provincial minimum wage scale takes effect.

Mrs. Adele Vinden, superintendent at Glengarry Private Hospital, 1780 Fairfield, confirmed she has received a directive from management on new rates.

From Nov. 22, or whenever the new wage minimum of $2 an hour goes into effect, the hospital's rate for a bed in a four-bed ward will go from $14 to $16 a day, she said.

Gov't Plans Co-Ops To Cut Food Costs

The provincial government plans to develop food co-operatives within a few weeks — not only for persons on low incomes, but for anyone interested in participating, Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi said Tuesday.

He said it is time to create competition for the food monopolies in the province to show that "the people just won't stand for these price increases."

Levi said senior citizens have suffered from "meagre food and nutritional deficiencies" because food prices and rent levels are so high.

Levi also appealed to B.C. landlords to hold the line on senior citizens' rents so the government's $200 monthly guaranteed income will not be drained.

"We are trying to make up for the neglect that has been shown to these senior citizens," Levi told the legislature during debate on the government move. "We don't want to see these increases go down the drain."

He said he has already had information that some landlords are going to increase rents as a result of the pension hike.

"We will be prepared to name names of individuals and of companies who are going to sweat money from these senior citizens," Levi said.

The minister said the pension increase will "end the legacy of tea and toast fostered by the previous government" and will bring the pensions of B.C.'s pioneers to "a minimal level."

Of a total budget of $1.6 billion brought in by the Social Credit administration last year, Levi said, all that was spent on senior citizens was $3.7 million.

CHUM SALMON fill the hold of Dick Anzulovich's seiner after working Nitinat Lake. The lake, which was closed to commercial fishing after a poor season in 1961, produced about 750,000 salmon for the fishermen who took advantage of the opening, which has been extended indefinitely.

Barrett's Hopes Cut by Third

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE
Times Staff

B.C. will receive only two-thirds of the money expected from Ottawa to pay for the guaranteed $200 old age pension, Premier Barrett said Tuesday.

Barrett made the statement after a 30-minute meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau at Victoria airport, which failed to produce an agreement on how the pension increase costs should be shared.

But Barrett said again the pensions will be paid in full as promised, although administrative problems may hold up payment until January.

In any case, the pensions will be made retroactive to include December, Barrett said.

Looking and sounding a trifle staggered by his meeting with Trudeau, Barrett nevertheless described the talks, their first, as "amiable."

Barrett said the money that will come to the province for the pensions will fall under the province's Social Assistance Act and not under the Canada Assistance Plan.

Barrett had banked on persuading Trudeau and the federal government that it was only the wording of the Canada Assistance Plan that was preventing an agreement.

Barrett had hoped to increase the provincial pension supplement, of which Ottawa pays half. But now Ottawa will be contributing about 30 per cent less than expected.

Barrett said that talks have been taking place between of-

POLITE BIGOTS NO LONGER

HAMILTON (CP) — Canadian society has been hit with a new wave of hate and bigotry, Dr. Daniel Hill, chairman of the Ontario Human Rights Commission, said Tuesday night.

"We used to have a more polite form of bigotry in Canada, but now we are getting a very overt form of bigotry," he told the Industrial Relations Research Association.

Pound Hits New Low

LONDON (AP) — The pound sterling fell to a record low today for the second straight day.

Foreign exchange dealers said trading was active and selling pressure heavy.

Shortly after the opening, the pound was quoted at $2.3627, an all-time low, and a drop of more than one cent from Tuesday's night's close of $2.3760.

By mid-morning the pound had sunk as low as $2.3530, a drop of more than two cents on the day. One dealer said there was "one-way market" down.

The sharp drop is attributed to persistent inflation, labor trouble, renewed strength of the U.S. dollar, and speculation that the British government will peg the pound at $2.25.

Britain has guaranteed 90 per cent of these reserves against loss by promising to pay them back on demand at a minimum of $2.38 a pound. It may be called to do so now that the pound has sunk below that level for the first time.

TV Tory Sees Red

TORONTO (CP) — Ethel Neilson, an 85-year-old pensioner who appears in a television commercial prepared for the Progressive Conservatives, says she intends to vote for the Liberals Oct. 30.

Miss Neilson, who complains in the commercial about high food prices, said in an interview Tuesday that she was annoyed about finding herself in a Conservative commercial.

She said she was not told the film, shot on a busy downtown street, would be used for political purposes.

"If they'd told me that, I wouldn't have said anything," she complained.

Miss Neilson said she was interviewed outside a department store by a woman who said she was conducting a survey. Miss Neilson talked to the interviewer about pensioners' problems and about the fact food prices had increased.

A Conservative spokesman here said, however, that Miss Neilson had signed a form allowing the party to broadcast the filmed interview.

He added that the woman was paid the standard $1 fee to make the undertaking legal.

Miss Neilson admitted signing a paper, but said she didn't read it. She also remembers receiving $1.

Miss Neilson, who said she is a life-long Liberal, complained that friends and relatives called her to tell they had seen her on a commercial for the Conservatives.

"I was mad," she said.

Stanfield Cool Toward Russia

Times News Services

Robert Stanfield diverged slightly Tuesday from an all-out attack on failure of the Liberal government to cope with the cost of living to warn that a Conservative government would have something less than completely cordial relations with the Soviet Union.

He said in Winnipeg that the government he expects to form after the Oct. 30 federal election will not have "fully cordial relations" with countries that restrict migration of their citizens.

He said later that includes the Soviet Union.

But the rising cost of living, food costs and inflation were the main topic of the day as Stanfield addressed a news conference in Vancouver and then spoke to a Winnipeg rally.

He said that it is time for Canadians to realize that the Liberal government has no policy, program or plan to halt rising prices.

"It does not even intend to take action to assist those Canadians who cannot help themselves to meet their mounting cost of living."

He said Prime Minister Trudeau had claimed that rising prices are good for the farmers.

But in fact farmers had been just as much the victim of inflation as the consumer, wage earner, pensioners and everybody else.

A Conservative government would immediately investigate whether a freeze on prices of certain commodities would be needed, he added.

He did not name the commodities.

He expected that that inquiry, which would include talks with the food industry and government officials and study of information he was sure that government already had, should take two weeks or less.

The urgency of such an inquiry was indicated by the fact that recent Statistics Canada figures had shown

Trudeau mingles with throng outside Royal Theatre

Identity Crisis Over: PM

By GEORGE OAKE
Times Staff

Canadians are closer to a national consensus than at any time in their history Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau said Tuesday during a breathless 2½ hour Victoria visit.

About 1,400 persons jammed the Royal Theatre to hear the prime minister at 4.15 p.m. Hundreds, strung out in a long lineup, were turned away and had to content themselves with listening to his speech over a public address system outside the building.

"Now after almost eight weeks of campaigning I have reached a conclusion . . . Canada no longer has a crisis of identity," Trudeau said.

During the current campaign he said it has not been necessary to beat the drums of national unity — as was necessary in the 1968 election — because people have no doubts about the country anymore.

In four years, the prime minister said, nobody will even mention the Official Languages Act.

". . . Remember the last time, I had to make a speech in French at every place I went in order to prove a point, or a speech in English everywhere I went in Quebec."

Bilingualism is hardly an issue today, Trudeau said, except in a few ridings around Ottawa because "there are still some kinks in the application of the system."

But Quebecers are realizing that they can have power in Ottawa, he said.

"This is the whole purpose of Quebecers getting into politics, to make sure that they can exercise their power in Ottawa for Canadians, and not in Quebec in order to split Canada."

Trudeau blamed a relatively quiet election campaign on the fact that Canadians were moving towards equality of opportunity.

"I am told the press even find it dull," the prime minister said.

"Sure it's easier to report a meeting . . . when rotten tomatoes are flying everywhere," he added.

But the prime minister didn't drop any hot potatoes or tomatoes.

No opposition party was mentioned by name and Trudeau made only one brief reference to "the other two parties" concerning their Quebec policies.

Much of the address was spent defending the Liberal record and recounting national problems that, in the prime minister's opinion, have been solved during the last four years.

The dollar crisis of 1968, divisions between English and French Canadians, provincial ultimatums to minority federal governments and Western separatism were mentioned.

". . . In those days when there was great talk of Western alienation, B.C. was — I don't know how seriously — reacting as though it was closer to the U.S. than that far-off capital in Ottawa."

What has happened in four years?, Trudeau asked.

"Canadians have come to realize that they have really pulled it all together."

In an allusion to the Unknown Country, authored by

China Opens Itself to the Rest of World

By JOHN RODERICK

SHANGHAI (AP) — The cities of Shanghai, Peking and Canton are the same, but the people are different. They are freer, more open, more relaxed. In 18 months, there has been a subtle change of the spirit.

The Chinese spring of 1971 witnessed the budding of the new internationalism encouraged by Premier Chou En-lai. The "ping pong diplomacy" of that period flowered into the U.S. and Japanese summit meetings of February and September, 1972.

The process continues, both at home and abroad. China—once a place of closely guarded secrets, paranoic suspicion and rigidly held dogma—has begun to unbend.

I was in China in the 1940s and returned 18 months ago, at the time of the table-tennis games, for the first time in 23 years. Lately I was back again, permitted to be a member of the news party accompanying the Japanese prime minister.

Chinese now seem less afraid to talk politics. Ordinary Chinese speak of the fallen fortunes of Mao Tse-tung's heir-designate, Lin Piao, and the disappearance of his old secretary, Chen Pota, in a way which would not have been possible in April last year.

Somewhat nervously, they are able to laugh at themselves.

In answer to a question, our guide gives us the straight party line.

"Come on, that's not the real answer," we say.

Wide-eyed, she says: "Don't you believe it?"

"No," we reply.

Last year, this response would have provoked hurt and indignation. Instead, there is the sound of amused laughter.

One change, much remarked, is the absence of giant paintings, statues and photographs of Mao. Those that remain are less obtrusively placed. The hotels in all three cities where we stayed are almost totally innocent of them. They have been replaced at the Canton rail station, gateway to China, with vast paintings welcoming sports delegations.

Mao buttons and Mao books of quotations can be found, but they too are much rarer. The explanation is that Mao decreed all this, that Lin Piao grievously sinned by trying through pictures, buttons and books to deify the party leader.

There are small signs of the times. We complain about the din from the loudspeakers, rattling off quotations and Maoist songs, in our Shumchun-Canton express. A girl attendant reaches up and turns it off. That once would have been sacrilege.

The processions no longer exist. Everywhere we went a year and half ago, we saw thousands of boys and girls marching into the countryside, carrying red flags, a portrait of Mao at their head. They were going out to learn from the peasants.

Is the learning period over? There are no adequate explanations.

Our Chinese hosts, after a moment's hesitation, accept an American cigarette. Thunder and lightning do not strike them down. They even consent to be taken out to dinner, both unheard of before.

The new mood springs from a feeling of greater self-confidence. The Americans, Japanese and other foreigners have been met and found to be no better nor any worse than they.

Internally, following the shocks and after-shocks of the cultural revolution, there is at least a surface stability. The restaurants do a booming business. Fruit and vegetable stalls are open around the clock. Buddhist shrines closed during the cultural revolution are tidied up and reopened to thousands of the curious.

None of this means that China has overnight become a free society. It is more open than it was 18 months ago, but nowhere as permissive in the scope and range of allowed criticism of the leadership—Mao excepted—as during the cultural revolution.

The Communist party continues to call the tune for China's millions. It decrees where they will live, what jobs they will do and who will go abroad. So far, foreign travel is confined to a trickle of officials. No Chinese tourists will be gawking at New York's skyscrapers or strolling down the Champs Elysees for a long time to come.
